SPEECH IN THE COMMONS

BILL ADMITTED BY 299 TO 80

NEW LIGHT ON GREAT DRIVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 9.—Great Britain was asked this afternoon to place at the disposal of the Government the services of every able-bodied man up to 50 years old, and even in certain cases up to 55. The announcement was made that conscription was to be applied to Ireland.

Crowds gathered at the approaches to the Houses of Parliament, and the benches of the Commons were closely packed with members, who showed deep interest in the questions and the Premier's method of presenting the prime importance of the issues involved. There were no fireworks in his speech, but an earnest insistence on the peril of the moment and the necessity of taking every possible measure to meet it.

The House at question time had shown itself full of life. It rose to every controversial point, and it sent up a deep cheer of welcome as Captain Redmond took the oath on his reelection to his father's old seat. As Mr. Lloyd George began his speech it settled down to listen, and resented fiercely interruptions from pacifist members.

The Premier seemed at first to be restrained by the gravity of the moment. "We have now entered the most critical phase of this terrible war," he began, and he spoke slowly and with constant consultation of his notes. For nearly an hour he reviewed the military situation, and though he expressed his entire confidence in the army and paid a high tribute to the courage, endurance, and skill of soldiers and Generals alike, it was clear that he was impressed by the vastness of the forces against the Allies and the reality of their danger.

Not until he spoke of General Carey and his "brilliant achievement" in stopping the German advance with a scratch corps of signalmen, engineers, and labor battalions did he arouse the enthusiasm of the House in a round of deep cheers.

As the Premier came to discuss the appointment of Foch as generalissimo it was clear that he felt himself to be on delicate ground. He spoke with something like his old animation, smote the box on the table, and looked the House squarely in the face. He was prepared for criticism and got applause, but it was not very cordial.

Replies to Saloniki Critics.

Once again, as Lloyd George replied to the critics of the subsidiary expeditions in Saloniki, Palestine, and Mesopotamia, he spoke with vigor, but the House was not inclined to show much interest in these matters when it was full of anxiety about the Government's man-power proposals.

At last Lloyd George reached these and in the main they did not create surprise. They had been forecast fairly accurately in the newspapers and the House received quietly the news that men up to 50 might be called up, that essential industries were to be combed out again, and that ministers of religion would be subject to noncombatant service.

Irish Create a Storm.

The real surprise came when the Premier announced shortly and decidedly:

"As to Ireland, it is not possible any longer to justify her exclusion from the act."

Like a field of wheat swept by gusts of wind, sharp interruptions burst out. Lloyd George appealed to the United States, more Irish than Ireland, he called it, where all were subject to conscription. "But not by the English," came back a retort by a member, shouted with a stentorian voice.

Cheers burst out in a great volume from all parts of the house except the Irish benches, and they answered with cries of protest. The Premier tried to continue his quiet, dispassionate speech, but Irish members were wound up to fierce excitement. Their quarter of the house was rocking with anger. Lines of members swayed to and fro.

"It is a declaration of war on Ireland," said one.

Quietly the Premier read out what Irish leaders like the late John Redmond had said of the justice of the war, and brought John Dillon, the new leader, to his feet in explanation of words he had used in 1914. But what especially roused the Irish to bitter anger was the Premier's insistence that this was a war in the interest of small nations. They flung back the words in his teeth, and stirred the rest of the House to angry reply, but the Premier, with only one protest that he be permitted to speak, went quietly on to his peroration.

Asquith Counsels Deliberation.

John Devlin wished to move an adjournment to permit the Government to consider the report of the Committee on Conscription of the Irish convention, but gave way to ex-Premier Asquith.

Mr. Asquith spoke calmly and coolly, dwelling on the reality of the crisis. He reserved the right to criticise the Government bill at a time when he had an opportunity to consider its details, and then obtained a sympathetic cheer from the House as he told of the heroism of the British soldiers, as he had just learned it from a letter from a "relative, in fact one of my own sons." As an old Parliamentarian, he advised the Premier not to rush the new bill, but to permit the House plenty of time to digest it.

Text of the Speech.

LONDON, April 9.—The full text of the Prime Minister's speech follows:

"We have now entered the most critical phase of this terrible war. There is a lull in the storm, but the hurricane is not over. Doubtless we must expect more fierce outbreaks, and ere it is finally exhausted there will be many more.

"The fate of the empire, the fate of Europe, and the fate of liberty throughout the world may depend on the success with which the very last of these attacks is resisted and countered.

"The Government, therefore, propose, to submit to Parliament today certain recommendations, in order to assist this country and the Allies to weather the storm. They will involve, I regret, extreme sacrifices on the part of large classes of the population, and nothing would justify them but the most extreme necessity and the fact that we are fighting for all that is essential and most sacred in our national life.

"Before I come to the circumstances which led up to our submitting these proposals to Parliament, I ought to say one word as to why Parliament was not immediately summoned. Since the battle began the Government have been engaged almost every hour in concerting with the Allies the necessary measures to assist the armies to deal with the emergency.

Action "Far Removed" from Panic.

"The proposals which we intend submitting to Parliament required very close and careful examination, and I think there is this advantage in our meeting today, rather than immediately after the impact of the German attack, that we shall be considering these proposals under conditions which will be far removed from any suggestion of panic.

"I shall now come to the circumstances which have led to the present military position. It is very difficult at this time to present a clear, connected, and reliable narrative of what happened. There has been a great battle on a front of fifty miles—the greatest battle ever fought in the history of the world. Enormous forces have been engaged; there was a considerable retirement on the part of the British forces, and under these conditions it is not always easy for some time to ascertain what actually happened.

"The House will recollect the difficulty we experienced with regard to Cambrai. It was difficult to piece together the story of the event for some time, and Cambrai was a very trivial event compared with this gigantic battle.

"The Generals and their staffs are, naturally, engaged and have to concentrate their attention upon the operations of the enemy, and until the strain relaxes it would be very difficult to institute the necessary inquiries to find out exactly what happened, and to furnish an adequate explanation of the battle.

German Forces Slightly Smaller.

"However, there are two or three facts which stand out, and in stating them I should like to call attention to two things which I think above all must be avoided. The first is that nothing should be said which could give information to the enemy; nothing should be said which would give encouragement to the enemy, and nothing should be said which would give discouragement to our own troops, who are fighting so gallantly at this very hour.

"And the second question is that all recrimination at this hour must be shut out.

"What was the position at the beginning of the battle? Notwithstanding the heavy casualties in 1917 the army in France was considerably stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917. Up to the end of 1917—up to, say, about October or November—the German combatant strength in France was as two to the Allies' three. Then came the military collapse of Russia, and the Germans hurried up their released divisions from the eastern front and brought them to the west. They had a certain measure of Austrian support, which had been accorded to them.

"Owing to the growth of the strength of our armies in 1917, when this battle began the combatant strength of the whole of the German Army on the western front was only

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, April 10.—The Daily Chronicle says editorially, in commenting on yesterday's proceedings in Parliament:

"The Irish proposal provoked immediate and stormy opposition from the Nationalist members. This was inevitable. We see no prospect of its being abated, and its result can hardly fail to be prejudicial both to the Irish question and the man-power question; to the former because it substitutes an atmosphere of coercion for that of reconciliation at a supremely inopportune moment, and to the latter because the controversy over this feature of the bill must tend to impede and obscure discussion over those more material features of it which affect Great Britain.

"Setting aside the views of the extreme Nationalist and Unionist partisans, one may doubt whether there is a single one of those more centrally minded Irishmen who have worked so hard for the triumph of the convention and the reunion of the Irish people who does not recognize that the attempt to enact Irish conscription at this juncture is a blunder and a catastrophe."

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 9.—A heavy and determined attack was begun against us this morning a considerable distance north of our recent battles on about eleven miles of front between Armentières and La Bassée Canal. So far as the news comes to us up to this afternoon the enemy apparently has succeeded in driving in parts of the Allies' post lines, while the troops are holding him by Givenchy on the right and about Fleurbaix on the left.

This new attack was preceded by a long, concentrated bombardment, which had gradually been increasing during the last day or two, until it reached great heights of fury last night and early this morning. The enemy used poison gas in immense quantities, and it may be estimated that during the night he flung over 60,000 gas shells in order to create a wide zone of this evil vapor and stupefy the gunners, transport, and infantry if they were caught without their masks, which is improbable.

His gunfire reached out to many towns and villages behind the allied lines, like Bethune and Armentières, Vermelles and Philosophe, Merville and Estaires, and this did not cease around Armentières until 11:30 this morning, though further south from Fleurbaix his infantry attack was in progress at an early hour, certainly by 8 o'clock, and his barrage lifted in order to let his troops advance.

The strength of his attack is not yet known with any certainty, but three divisions are in that area, including the 44th Reserve and 81st and 11th Ersatz, and it is probable that he has other forces engaged.

Portuguese Troops in Line.

Part of the line was held by Portuguese troops, who for a long time have been between Laventie and Neuve Chapelle, holding positions which were subject to severe raids from time to time. They are now in the thick of this battle, most fiercely beset and fighting gallantly.

It is a battle over the old and famous ground where early in this war there was most deadly strife during the struggle around Neuve Chapelle in March of 1915 and at Festubert. It is ground where the Indian infantry attacked again and again with most gallant courage and where afterward the survivors held the lines through the Spring and Summer, so that the flat fields all around with fringes of willows along narrow canals that intersect all this moist land and the villages behind, like Estaires and Laventie, and places of ruin like La Gorgue and Richebourg and Quinque Rues, will be forever haunted with memories of those dark-dyed men, who to the French peasants seemed like fairy princes and figures out of the Arabian Nights tales. They disappeared long ago through the mists of these flats to other fighting fields in other countries.

Suddenly the enemy has struck, and the centre of strife for the moment has shifted. It is awkward ground for attack and bad weather for such ground, because the enemy has to advance across dead-flat marshes, cut

"One of his Majesty's torpedo boat destroyers sank on the 4th instant as the result of a collision in the foggy weather. All hands are missing, and it is presumed they were drowned."

DEEDS OF DARING BY OUR ENGINEERS

PRAISED BY THE BRITISH

"Held On by Their Teeth Till the Last Moment," Says an Officer Who Saw Them.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, April 8, (Associated Press.)—The American railway engineers who helped stem the tide of the onrushing Germans during the opening days of the battle now in progress fought shoulder to shoulder with Canadian engineers in carrying out their task. They held their ground stubbornly, and only retired to previously prepared positions when forced to do so, and inflicted casualties by the thousand upon the Germans as they advanced in close formation—in one place in as many as seven waves, each wave 10 men deep and 100 yards from the next.

The Americans with the Canadians had all the ammunition they needed, and, although they were unsupported by the artillery and armed only with rifles and with a few machine guns, they poured streams of bullets into the enemy at several different times until their weapons were so hot as to be useless.

This handful of American soldiers, who were not hardened to such terrific slaughter, were sickened by the shambles they created, but fought furiously for several days, helping to hold the enemy all the way from near St. Quentin to the vicinity of Noyon. These were the Americans mentioned at the time in the official communiqués, but these details of their exploits it has only now been possible to obtain.

When the German attack began the Americans were working in the rear lines with the Canadians, under Canadian command. They quickly threw down their tools and seized the weapons with which they had been armed for some months, and formed themselves into a fighting unit. The Germans came on and finally reached the positions where the Americans were waiting.

The exact number of the engineers cannot be given, but they were comparatively small. They had no intention of retreating, however, and were bent upon killing all the Germans possible.

Tore Gaps in German "Waves."

As the first gray enemy wave advanced, the American forces let them come until they were within certain range: then opened fire, pouring in a storm of bullets. Gaps appeared in the advancing lines at many places, some of them large, where the machine guns had chewed through. Still the German waves came on, without firing a single shot—just advancing.

The Americans were unable to understand these tactics, but, nevertheless, were certain that it was a question of slaughtering the enemy or being themselves smothered under the advance. By this time their weapons were so hot that they could not be used effectively, and the enemy was close, so that the engineers retired, fighting, took up another position, then turned and began operations again. A British officer who witnessed the engagement is reported to have said:

"They held on by their teeth until the last moment, inflicting terrific casualties on the enemy. Then they moved back and waited for the Germans, and repeated the performance."

By the time the engineers reached a place somewhere near Noyon they were nearly exhausted and almost without equipment. There they had a chance to rest and re-equip. According to all reports, they were entitled to it, for certainly they gave the Germans a generous sample of what the enemy is to expect from the American Army.

A German Trick that Failed.

During a battle unusual stories always crop up, but the following is one which the correspondent heard from an unquestionable source, and it is said to have been verified:

In one of the periods when the Amer-

German Staff Fully Expected to Rout the Allies And Cause Withdrawal of Entire Western Front

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Prisoners captured on the Oise front say that the German staff fully expected to reach their objectives on the morning of April 6, counting on their superior numbers to overwhelm the French.

Other information from prisoners shows that the Germans expected immensely greater results from their surprise offensive. They not only hoped to push the Allies back from the Somme, but also looked for a general withdrawal all along the front, even far eastward of the line attacked.

German observers, both in the trenches and in sausage balloons, had orders to keep a sharp lookout for signs of a French retreat and report them to the staff. They were told to watch for burning villages and supply dumps, and were surprised when they saw nothing of the kind.

Still other prisoners, who have recently come from the Russian front, assert that the German authorities were profoundly disappointed concerning Russia. Much of the land there is uncultivated, while the greater part of the stocks of wheat has disappeared, through pillage or wastage. Reports regarding these conditions have reached the German people and caused considerable effervescence.

FRENCH LOSE THREE TOWNS

Further Gains Made by Hindenburg's Troops in Region South of Oise.

BERLIN, April 9, (via London.)—The War Office this evening issued the following communication:

North of La Bassée Canal we penetrated into English and Portuguese positions.

On both sides of the Somme there have been violent artillery duels.

On the southern bank of the Oise we threw back the enemy across the Oise-Aisne Canal between Coucy-le-Château and Brancourt.

The losses in March of enemy aerial fighting forces in the western theatre amount to twenty-three captive balloons and 348 airplanes. Of the latter 158 were brought down behind our lines. The others were observed to fall within the enemy's positions.

We lost eighty-one airplanes and eleven captive balloons.

The official communication issued earlier in the day said:

Lively artillery duels have frequently developed on the battlefront.

On the south bank of the Oise the troops of Generals von Schoeller and Wichisra again have attacked the enemy.

Between the Oise and Folembray they advanced across the Allette as far as the Oise-Aisne Canal, and in a fierce battle captured the stubbornly defended wood east of Guny.

Attacking from the north and east, they climbed the steep slopes of the heights east of Coucy-le-Château and captured by storm strongly fortified enemy positions. Quency and Landricourt were taken, and Coucy-le-Château fell early this morning.

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—The very slight German gains of the last few days have been reported in the German press with much the same wealth of headlines and resounding comment as greeted the first successes in March.

All the papers had frankly stated that the renewed fighting at the end of last week was the definite reopening of the offensive, and a good deal of effort has been expended by the critics in explaining away the wait, which certainly had not been expected in Germany before Amiens was reached. The Cologne Gazette says that the halt was occasioned by the need "on both sides" (the word "both" is interesting) to bring up the reserves, and it deals at length with the

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, April 9.—Although the American infantry is not in action on the Picardy battlefield, the United States has been represented in the air from the outset of the German drive. Many American aviators serving under the French flag have been engaged in battle. A NEW YORK TIMES correspondent met today Sergeant Frank Baylies, from New Bedford, a member of the famous "Ace squadrilla" of storks to which Guynemer belonged.

Baylies joined the aviation service last June after two years in Macedonia with the French Red Cross, for which he was decorated with the War Cross with star, became a member of the Stork squadrilla Oct. 1, a few days after Guynemer's death, and has brought down two Germans for which he has been rewarded with two palms on the cross. Shortly after the opening of the German offensive the squadrilla went by air at an hour's notice to Montdidier and took active part in all subsequent operations.

When the town was captured by the enemy the airmen managed to remove all the machines and camions, but several fliers lost the greater part of their personal effects. Baylies was more fortunate.

Throughout the French retirement the airmen co-operated with the infantry and made three patrol flights—averaging from an hour and a half to two hours' duration—daily. As the German attacks were made almost without artillery or airplanes—for whole days no enemy planes were sighted—the fliers devoted themselves to harassing enemy infantry and convoys on the march.

Flew Low for Attacks.

Flying often as low as sixty-eight feet, airmen turned mitrailleuses pointblank on the enemy, who fled headlong or threw themselves flat to escape the stream of bullets. When convoys were attacked, horses plunging madly in death agony threw the whole line into confusion.

At such an altitude the aviator was greatly exposed to the fire of the German infantry, and injury to the motor forced an immediate landing, as the height was insufficient for a long volplane. On March 28 Baylies was thus downed near Mesnil-St. Georges. The young American—he is just 22—gave the following description of his experience:

"I had been annoying Fritz all morning and having a wonderful time when I spotted a body of infantry moving toward Tickish Wood just after luncheon. As I dived upon them over the trees, quickfirers concealed there riddled my machine with bullets. My impetus luckily carried me a little further into a grassy field, just between the two armies, where I landed not too abruptly.

"Unfortunately I was barely fifty feet from the boches and nearly a hundred yards from the French. At this point there were no trenches and both sides fought in the open, the Germans advancing in small groups from thicket to thicket and taking cover wherever possible. As they saw me falling the enemy began firing furiously and a party of five Germans ran out to intercept me. A French Alpine Chasseur

FOG AIDS THE ASSAILANTS

LONDON, April 9.—Beginning with a bombardment of great intensity, German troops this morning delivered heavy attacks upon the British and Portuguese lines from the La Bassée Canal to the neighborhood of Armentières, (a distance of about eleven miles.)

The enemy forced back the Portuguese in the centre and the British on the flanks of the line of the River Lys between Estaires and Bac St. Maur.

Richeboucq-St. Vaast, (about a mile south of Neuve Chapelle,) and Laventie, (about two miles northeast of Neuve Chapelle,) were taken by the Germans in the assault.

The British withstood all attacks at Givenchy, (at the southern limit of the German assaults,) and Fleurbaix, at the north, about three miles southeast of Armentières.

The German attack was favored by the thick mist which shrouded the battlefield in the early morning.

Severe fighting continues on the whole of this front, according to Field Marshal Haig's night report.

South of Arras there were only minor engagements today on the British front.

This morning, after an intense bombardment of our positions from La Bassée Canal to the neighborhood of Armentières, strong hostile forces attacked the British and Portuguese troops holding this sector of our front. Favored by a thick mist, which made observation impossible, the enemy succeeded in forcing his way into the Allies' positions in the neighborhood of Neuve Chapelle, Fauquissart, and Cardonnerie Farm.

After heavy fighting, lasting throughout the day, the enemy succeeded in forcing back the Portuguese troops in the centre and the British troops on the flanks of the line of the River Lys, between Estaires and Bac St. Maur.

We held out positions on both banks [flanks?] about Givenchy and Fleurbaix. At both these latter places there was heavy fighting, but the enemy was repulsed.

Richebourg-St. Vaast and Laventie have been taken by the enemy.

Severe fighting is continuing on the whole of this front.

South of Arras only minor engagements, in which were secured a few prisoners, have taken place during the day on the British front.

The afternoon official statement reads:

Early this morning the enemy's artillery developed great activity on the front extending from La Bassée Canal to south of Armentières.

Elsewhere on the British front, except for heavy hostile shelling in the neighborhood of Villers-Bretonneux and Mericourt l'Abbé, there was nothing special to report.

Monday's Rain Checked Aviation.

Germans Made Early Gains.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Another sector of the British front suddenly developed intense fighting today, when the Germans delivered a heavy attack over approximately an eleven-mile front between Givenchy (near La Bassée) and a point east of Fleurbaix, just below Armentières. A Portuguese sector is included in the line involved.

East of Le Plantin and east of Petillon the enemy appeared to have gained a footing in advanced defenses, according to the latest reports, and a fierce battle was raging all along the sector. Le Plantin is northwest of Givenchy, and Petillon lies to the east of Laventie.

At Givenchy and on the left of the front attacked the Allies apparently are holding their ground in the very heavy fighting, which was reported to be especially bitter east of Festubert. The Portuguese were being supported by British troops.

The attack was preceded by a violent bombardment, which began in the early morning and extended all along the front affected. Bethune, Estaires, and other towns behind the British lines have been heavily shelled.

It is too early to say what relation this new move has with the main German offensive further south. Only time will tell whether it was undertaken as a diversion or whether the enemy has a serious idea of pushing forward here.

SPLITTING TACTICS AGAIN.

The eleven-mile line against which the Germans yesterday made their attack in the Departments of Nord and Pas-de-Calais has been known as the Lille front: it is flanked on the north by the beginning of the British penetration in the Third Battle of Ypres, or the Battle of Flanders, June to October, 1917, and on the south by the northern reaches of the British attempt to envelop the Lens coal fields last July and August. It was taken over from the French by the British in October, 1914, and here in January, 1917, were introduced two divisions of Portuguese troops, which it is believed have been considerably augmented.

The Lille front had practically been "dead" from the memorable battle of Neuve Chapelle, Oct. 26, 1915, to Feb. 17, 1916, with the memories of La Bassée, the Hohenzollern Redoubt, &c., until the present assault was foreshowed by a raid made upon the Portuguese line southeast of Laventie and north of Neuve Chapelle on March 23. This raid was completely repulsed. The British artillery flanked the German advance north and south, and several prisoners remained in the hands of the Portuguese.

Aside from topographical interest in the front attacked there is the ethnic, for here the Germans are doing what they tried to do on March 21 at St. Quentin—drive in a wedge where difference of language and tactics among the troops attacked makes cohesion of defense difficult.

The Germans also have the advantage of position, for from a couple of miles northwest of La Bassée, extending for a dozen miles northeast to a point three miles southeast of Armentières, runs the elevation known as Aubers Ridge, which faces the British and Portuguese lines and protects the front of Lille.

Up to March 21 the Lille front from Armentières south to La Bassée was known to have been held by the 19th Active German Corps, the 6th Division of Bavarian Reserve, the 7th Active Corps, and the 2d Guard Reserve Division, or 120,000 men at the maximum strength of their detachments over a front of nearly fourteen miles. Lille, eight miles behind the front, is the headquarters of the 6th German Army.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—The Berlin Tageblatt, which sees Prussian reforms getting ever more distant on the political horizon, owing to the energetic efforts of the Pan Germans to postpone them, makes an appeal to the Kaiser on the anniversary of the latter's famous Easter message.

This political message, it says, was consecrated by the religious festival of Easter, and continues:

"With full consciousness the Kaiser put his own personality on the foreground in the delivery of this message. Each decisive phrase denotes the personal conviction, and will of the Kaiser in the most marked manner." Then quotes the Tageblatt message, remarking that the Crown took the initative in the matter of reforms and is responsible for their execution.

All the enemy's efforts this morning do not seem to have carried him far through these marshes, and up to the time I write his storm troops are being held back and shattered by machine-gun fire before Givenchy, outside an outpost in the marshes, a sap, and at a place called Picanty, in front of Laventie. If he gets no further, his venture will be futile except as a demonstration in order to weaken our reserves by further casualties and increase the strain on our main defense.

Meanwhile his own losses must be reaching prodigious figures. Today again many of his men lie dead in those swamps by Neuve Chapelle.

Germans Paid Ruinous Price for Gains, While French Economized in Men.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, April 8.—Apart from a local attack at Grivesnes, which completely failed on Saturday evening, there has been, up to this morning, no further action on the French front in Santerre. The loss of force in the German offensive is noteworthy, but not at all surprising. An unprecedented mass having been prepared to deliver a swift and crushing blow, enormous losses do not at once arrest it, but everything in such an adventure depends upon rapid success. The original mass, prodigally spent and yet not successful, has lost its freshness, and passed its maximum strength just when the more economical adversary is reaching his maximum. What the latter has lost in ground he has saved in men; and, on the other hand, the enemy, who wanted not these miles of desolate territory, but a final decision, has paid inordinately without getting any nearer the desired result.

For five days his advance, though somewhat behind his ambitious program, was not seriously interrupted. On March 25 a certain General reached the region of Montdidier and began to build a human barrier. On March 23 began what may be called a four days' battle of arrest. Three French divisions had to meet and did meet the onset of fifteen German divisions. There were smaller units that fought one against ten.

Attacked with 150,000 Men.

The main German effort was against the Moreuil-Grivesnes-Montchel line, the object being (with 150,000 men in play there could be no less ambitious aim) to break right through to the south of Amiens and completely separate the French and British Armies. It culminated on the 31st with a suicidal assault by the pick of the Prussian Guards and other chosen divisions at Grivesnes, when a certain gallant Colonel, rifle in hand, directed the barricading of the windows of the château, and with not more than 500 men kept off three or four times as many assailants and had strength enough left at last to sweep those who remained out of the park.

I need not measure again the trivial gain for the enemy of this four days' battle. Perhaps the most significant fact about it is that while, overwhelming as was his original force, the enemy had repeatedly to withdraw and renew his units, not one French unit was relieved in that time. At Mesnil St. Georges one infantry battalion, with some groups of chasseurs, drove off five successive attacks by a whole German division. I might multiply such instances, but space would fail me to make them real with detail.

A pause of four days followed this failure. Then, on April 4, twelve divisions were again launched in the northern part of the same narrow field—10,000 men per mile of front. They won at great cost the ruins of two hamlets and a slice of fields beside them.

Three days more have passed without any considerable development. Prisoners say all leave has been stopped in the German armies. Men are not allowed to write home, and official bulletins are no longer read to the troops.

Needn't Struggle Against Odds Now.

What I know from sure sources is that, while General Foch hoards his reserves, not merely to have a mass for manoeuvre in hand when the time is ripe, but to save the manifold wastage of superfluous men in the front lines, the days of struggle against odds have gone by, and that means that the German opportunity has gone, too.

Among the minor actions there are two which deserve mention. The French position on Mont Renaud, near Noyon, has been maintained against repeated attacks preceded by heavy bombardments. I have described this lately. It was a pleasant little hill, with its country house and farm hidden in a clump of trees. Its importance is very slight, for it is overlooked by the hills on the north and northwest, held by the enemy, as well as by the French heights west of Chiry. It is a local observatory, useful for its view over Noyon—that is all; and, German bulletins to the contrary notwithstanding, it has been bravely and continuously kept since the end of last month.

A final word about the position of the armies between St. Gobain Forest and the Oise. Here the German advance left the French in a somewhat dangerous corner, reaching as far north as Deuillet, with the Germans across the river on the west, and in the great forest block on the east. A retirement to the line of the Ailette and the canal running beside it was clearly advisable. The new front was already prepared when the Germans attacked in strength on Saturday afternoon, between Chauny and Barisis. North of the Ailette there remained only light detachments, and these retired after taking toll of their assailants. The front now runs from Renaud across the Oise and up the south bank to near Abbecourt, whence it turns southeast.

FRENCH GUNS PREVENT ATTACKS BY GERMANS

PARIS, April 9.—Violent artillery engagements continued today on the battlefront north of Montdidier. Near Hangard-en-Santerre (further north, on the Luce River) French artillery prevented the Germans from starting an attack which they had prepared.

Advanced French troops having been withdrawn to prepared positions south of Coucy-le-Château, the French have been keeping the Germans on the left bank of the Oise under the fire of their batteries, and today dispersed enemy concentrations on that front. A German attempt at an attack west of Noyon was repulsed, according to the night report from the War Office, which reads:

> North of Montdidier the enemy artillery, violently countershelled, bombarded our positions at several points. In the region of Hangard-en-Santerre our fire prevented a German attack from debouching from his lines. We repulsed an enemy attempt west of Noyon, in the sector of Riermont.
> On the lebt bank of the Oise there was intermittent artillery action. Our batteries caught under their fire and dispersed enemy concentrations in the region of Coucy-le-Château.

Following is the text of the afternoon statement:

> There was great activity on the part of the artillery on both sides at numerous points along the front north of Montdidier and between Montdidier and Noyon. No infantry action occurred.
>
> On the left bank of the Oise there were intermittent bombardments. Advanced French troops, in conformity with orders which had been given, carried out a withdrawal to prepared positions southwest of the lower forest of Coucy and south of Coucy-le-Château. German troops were kept constantly under the French artillery fire, and suffered heavy losses in the course of this operation.
>
> Two German raids northwest of Rheims were repulsed. Other German efforts against small French posts near Eparges, in the sector of Reillon, and north of Bonhomme, achieved no greater success.
>

Retreating French Shell Germans.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Extreme artillery activity nearly everywhere again today marked the battle line. The abandonment of Coucy-le-Château was cleverly effected by the French, who, while making their way toward the new positions in full freedom of movement, gave the Germans a terrific harrying bombardment with field and heavy guns, causing a great toll in casualties.

The Germans had several divisions in line in this part of the front, but could not do more than follow warily behind the retiring French, whose effectives were outnumbered many times.

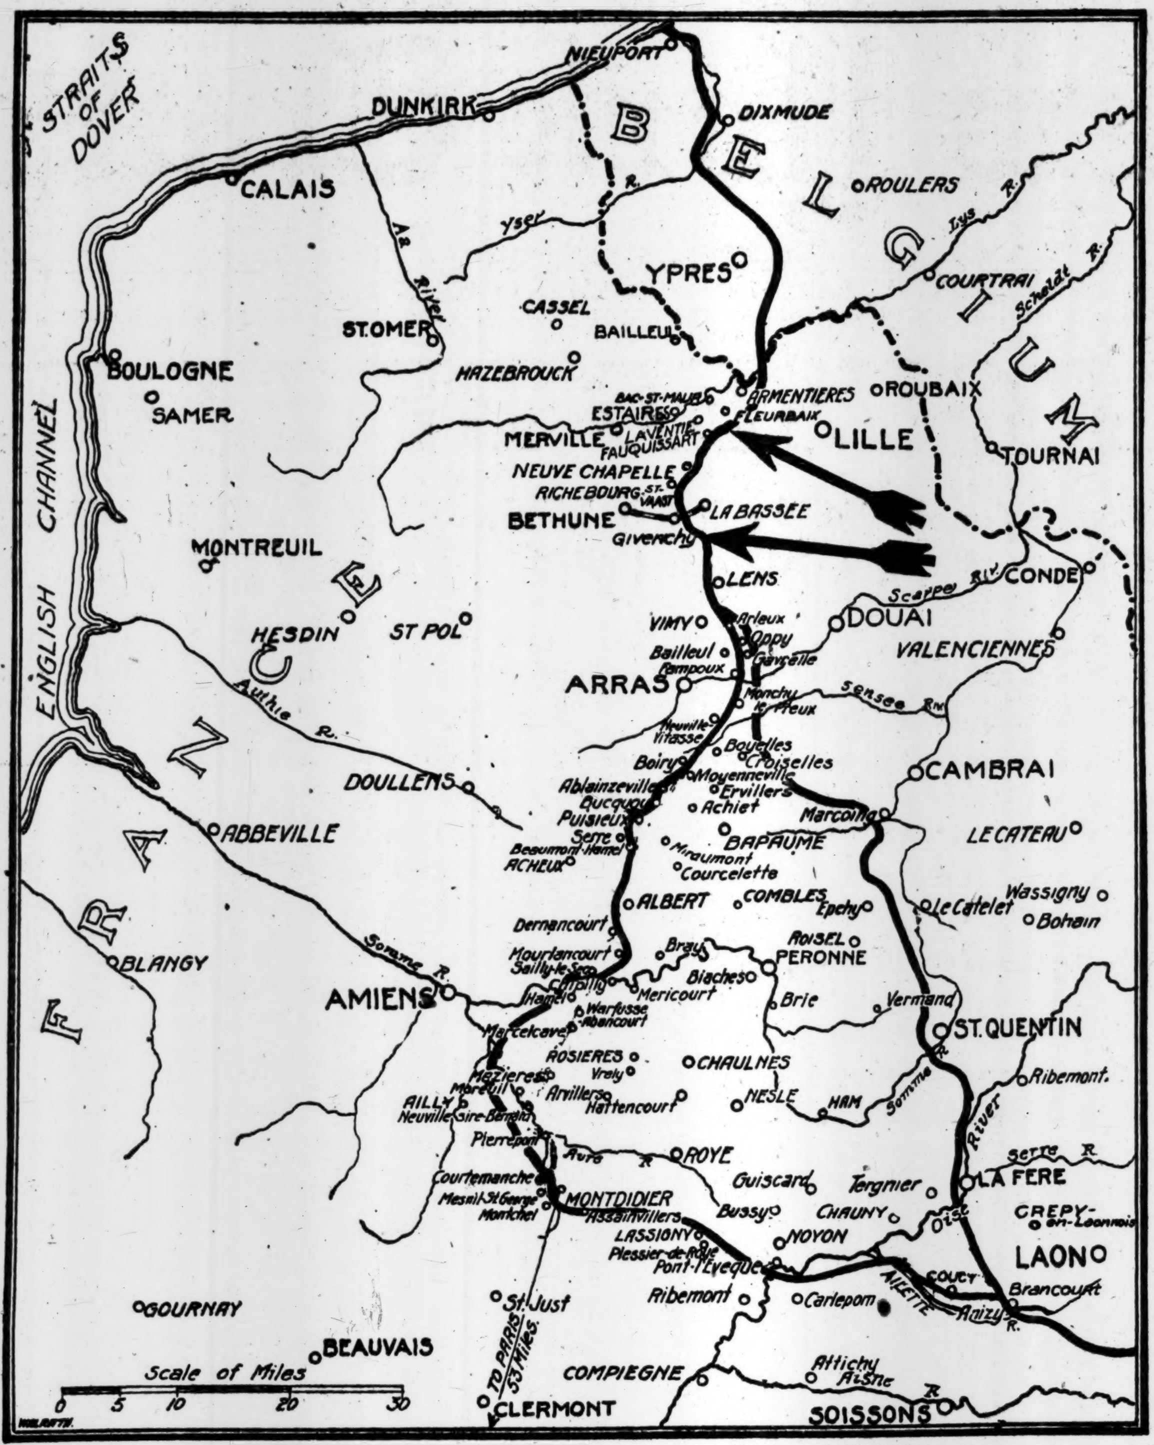
Further details of the first furious days of the German offensive bring to light a most important part played by the French cavalry in keeping in liaison when a breach was threatened, and overwhelming German columns. The conduct of the horsemen was superb, despite the great fatigue from which they suffered and their shortage of rations. They kept the Germans at bay by dismounting and acting as infantry and holding precarious lines without trenches or artillery support until foot regiments, which naturally were slower in arriving on the spot, could occupy positions from which they could offer a stable defense. In some places small groups of cavalrymen thus opposed odds of more than ten to one for many hours, and saved the critical situation.

GERMANS PROMISE TO GIVE UP TERRITORY

MOSCOW, April 9, (Associated Press.)—The Department of Foreign Affairs says that Germany will evacuate all the territory captured in the recent advance, as well as some taken before the Brest-Litovsk peace negotiations.

Thus the Narva and Pskov districts, the Mohilev Government, and other territory will be restored to Russia.

Scene of Yesterday's German Offensive.



The northernmost point involved in the fighting is Fleurbaix, and the southernmost Givenchy.

The greatest success of the German thrust was between the towns of Estaires and Bac St. Maur, where the Portuguese, constituting the centre of the line attacked, were forced to give ground. Laventie, two miles northeast of Neuve Chapelle, was lost, and Richebourg-St. Vaast, on the southern outskirts of Neuve Chapelle, also fell into the hands of the Germans.

French aviators have located the big gun with which the Germans are conducting their long-range bombardment of Paris. It is at Crepy-en-Laonnois, eight miles southeast of La Fère, and about seventy-five miles from the capital.

The arrows indicate the approximate north and south limits of the German drive of yesterday north of Arras.

The War Situation

By THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

We have additional evidence of the failure of the German plan as originally indicated by the attack in Picardy, in the attack launched yesterday against the British line from La Bassée to Fleurbaix. The first evidence was the shift in the attack from the Montdidier salient. There is not the remotest connection between this action which so far has resulted in driving the French behind the Ailette River and the battle on the main field of Picardy.

The only advantage that can be gained is to clear the southern bank of the Oise of French troops and possibly bend the line back from the forest of Coucy to Noyon. Certainly this attack was not launched as a means of discouraging any counteroffensive on the French at this section of the front. The French were behind the marshy banks of the Oise, the Germans were on the hills to the north. If General Foch intends to counterattack he certainly would not do so where every feature of terrain was with the enemy rather than with him.

The disadvantage of having to attack across the Oise with its broad marsh belts lining each bank of the river are so evident that such a proposition would be discouraging from the outset. It appears, then, that there was no further object than to clear the Oise and to eliminate the angle between the new line which the French were compelled to form and the original line held when the German attack began on March 21st.

The attack against the British north of Lens has an object more definitely connected with the battle of Picardy than the action on the Oise, it is true. But it is at a point far removed from the scene of the original attack, and would never have been launched had not the German attacks further south below Lens broken down under the British defense. It is a blow against the northern hinge on which the British Army swung back in the retreat from Cambrai, the position before Arras. Failing both at the centre and on the left to break the British hold on this hinge, the Germans are now trying on the north.

The chances of succeeding on the front of attack are distinctly better from the sole consideration of terrain than they were at either Bucquoy or along the Scarpe. In both of the latter cases, the British had directly behind them good hill positions, excellent artillery locations, and good points of observation—one of the most important elements in war. The country between La Bassée and Fleurbaix is absolutely flat, as flat as the Flanders country, of which it really forms a part. There is not an eminence, not a distinguishing feature of the ground behind the British lines until Bethune is reached, where a line of broken hills stretches out to the westward for a distance of eight or ten miles.

The British line over the front of attack traces a curve convex toward the west, beginning at Hill 70 and ending before Armentières, these points being the extreme eastern ends of the crescent. The maximum depth of this curve is about two and a half miles west of the chord joining these two ends. The general German plan seems to be the same here as was the British plan in the battle of the Somme, the development on a large scale of a salient already existing, rather than the more usual strategy of pinching out a salient by an attack against its sides. As this salient grows deeper naturally the positions to the north and south become more precarious, and if it be made deep enough the lines which limit it must be withdrawn and reformed.

These are the general features of the situation on this particular front. It does not appear, however, that, unless the British are forced back a considerable distance, their line will be very much if any affected by a limited retirement. Along the northern leg of the salient the British line is more or less guarded by the River Lys, which runs through Armentières. On the south the La Bassée Canal performs the same function. Only by pushing the British back almost if not quite to Bethune can the German guns be made effective against the positions about Lens, and even then the range will be excessive.

In such a case, however, the British would have to correct their lines north of Lens and vacate Hill 70, which would enable the Germans then to get a converging fire on Vimy Ridge. Even so, the British still hold the high ground north of Armentières-Passchendaele Ridge and its extension, the Messines-Wytschaete Ridge, which give them a great advantage, both from the standpoint of artillery and observation.

There is no centre point of value as yet involved. The nearest such is Bethune, about six miles away. Similarly, there is no railroad in this new battle area the cutting of which would in the least disturb the Allies' supplies. Unless the Germans can break through the lines as they did at St. Quentin, the advance will be difficult, due to the absolutely flat character of the country, which offers no cover for concealing the concentration of troops or the movement of artillery. On the whole, it is a situation which may be viewed, in its present stage, without alarm.

The German attack has apparently had just about the same measure of success as the attack before Arras. At three separated points—Neuve Chappelle, where the British attacked successfully in the early Spring of 1915; Fauquissart, some distance further north, and the Cardonnerie Farm, a little north of Fauquissart—the Germans made small gains reaching into the British front lines. These gains, however, scarcely indented the fighting line and, in spite of the fact that the attack was prefaced by nearly forty-eight hours of artillery fire, are of no moment. If this operation is proved a failure by subsequent events, Germany's next move will be watched with interest, as she will then be confronted with the probability of a repetition of Verdun.

GERMANS ATTEMPT TO EXPLAIN CHECK

difficulties which the Germans have on their lines of communication over the devasted area.

Baron von Ardenne, in the Berliner Tageblatt, says that the struggle is about to enter a new phase and that Amiens is now regarded as the definite and immediate German goal. He adds that the German heavy artillery "appears at least to some extent" to have been brought up in the centre line, and that when the remainder has been advanced "the final act of the great drama of Amiens should not be far off." But sections of the people very naturally wonder why the advance has not been more rapid. Meanwhile, where is the colossal number of airplanes promised of which up to the present time there is no trace?

Trying to Head Off America.

The paper concludes that American help has come more slowly than the Entente expected, and remarks that armies are not made overnight. It asks if the Entente can hold out until the Americans are ready. "This is being answered on the French battlefields," it says.

That the Moderates are fairly powerful in high quarters is demonstrated by the mere fact of the publication of the Lichnowsky memorandum and that von Jagow is allowed to speak out. No doubt those utterances have had an enormous effect among the sober-minded population. The Moderates, too, have published in many papers articles pointing out the seriousness of the raw material problem after the war, and that an unbending military attitude on the part of Germany would only tend to make matters worse.

Count Czernin's speech is regarded from two viewpoints. His revelation regarding the alleged peace feeler by France is looked upon as an effort to throw the blame on France for prolonging the war, but while that pleases the Pan Germans they are mightily angry with the way in which, by the reported terms of the Rumanian treaty, he successfully withstood the extensive German demands.

The action of the Kreuz-Zeitung in demanding an outright indemnity from France and the annexation of the Longwy-Brie region has attracted a good deal of attention in the country, as that organ voices the views of the high Conservative and Military parties. This claim for annexation is supported by the Vossische Zeitung, which publishes opinions by several famous industrial magnates, pointing out how important that district is to the future of German industry.

Reventlow is busy lecturing in favor of a western peace on the eastern model, and the general activity of the Junkers tends to support the view that the militarists have been given a time limit in which to make good. If they do so they will naturally carry the day politically as well. If not—and that the matter is one for haste is admitted on all hands in Germany—the Moderates will have their say.

In the majority of circles there is a fairly general belief that the famous July peace resolutions should be revised. The Socialist attitude appears to be unchanged, but other parties now maintain that they have a free hand. Some leaders favor a revision of the resolution on the basis of the status quo ante as the minimum condition, but all will depend on the outcome of the military struggle. In some circles it is held that this struggle must bring peace in one way or another, and everything goes to point to the offensive being the last big throw by Germany to turn the scale finally in her favor.

"I am one copy of SYSTEM.

"I was one of the September bunch. There were 160,000 of us. I went to the Gordon Tire and Rubber Company, Canton, Ohio. Mr. H. B. McMaster, vice president and general manager, read me carefully. One of my articles, 'How to Pick Men,' pleased him, I know, because he slapped his knee, then jumped up and showed the article to another man in a private office. Then he pinned a note on me, addressed to J. C. K., which recommended reading that article. This was one of the paragraphs in the note: 'I do not think our organization as a whole gets nearly enough of these outside slants, a knowledge of which naturally would broaden our viewpoint.' He sent another note to C. W. McK., adjuring him likewise to study the article. Then he thought a minute and sent still another advance note to a third man, telling him to watch for me. Well, all those busy officials read me from cover to cover. Conferences took place. I overheard the name of 'SYSTEM' again and again. Quiet, confidential talks were had with employees who walked out beaming. Things were happening!—careers being brightened, men sent home with happy news for their wives. It was wonderful! So many waves and billows of influence! All from a few printed pages! What must have occurred, I asked myself, in places where the rest of the 160,000 copies of SYSTEM went, for—approximately, though not quite equal to, the total combatant strength of the Allies in infantry. They were slightly inferior in artillery. They were inferior in cavalry, they were considerably inferior, and, what is very important, they were undoubtedly inferior in aircraft.

Teutons Had Smaller Divisions.

"The Germans, therefore, organized their troops so as to produce a larger number of divisions out of the slightly smaller number of infantry and slightly smaller number of guns. They had fewer battalions in a division and fewer men in a battalion. That is entirely a question of organization, and it yet remains to be seen that their organization is better than ours. It is necessary to explain that, in order that the House should realize why, with approximately the same number of men, the Germans have a larger number of divisions on that front.

"According to all the facts which have come to hand as to the losses of the battle, that roughly represents the relative strength of the combatants on both sides at this moment. The Germans had, however, one or two important advantages. The first, the initial advantage, which is always commanded by the offensive, is that they know where they mean to attack. They choose the ground, they choose the location, they know the width of the attack, they know the dimensions of the attack, they know the time of the attack, they know the method of the attack. All that invariably gives the initial advantage to the offensive.

"The defense has a general advantage, as, owing to air observation, concealment is difficult. At the same time, in spite of all that, owing to the power of moving troops at night, which the Germans exercised to a very large extent, there was a large margin for surprise, even in spite of air observation, and of this the enemy took full advantage.

"I should like to say one word here as to the difficulty which the allied Generals were confronted with in this respect. Before the battle the greatest German concentration was in front of our troops. That was no proof that the full weight of the attack would fall on us. There was a very large concentration opposite the French lines. There was a very considerable concentration—I am referring now to the German reserves—on the northern part of our line.

"After the battle began, or immediately before the battle, the Germans by night brought their divisions from the northern part to the point where the attack took place. They also took several divisions from opposite the French in the same way and brought them to our front. But it would have been equally easy for them, while concentrating troops opposite our front, to manoeuvre them in the same way opposite the French. I am only referring to that in order to show how exceedingly difficult it is for Generals on the defensive to decide exactly where, in their judgment, the attack is coming and where they ought to concentrate their reserves.

Gen. Wilson's "Remarkable Forecast."

"I may just say a word here. This problem was considered very closely by the military staff at Versailles, and I think it right, in justice to them, to point out that after a very close study of the German position and of the probabilities of the case, they came to the conclusion, and they stated their conclusion to the military representatives and to the Ministers in the month of January, or the beginning of February, that the attack would come south of Arras; that it would be an attack on a very wide front—that it would be an attack on the widest front ever yet assailed; that the Germans would accumulate ninety-five divisions for the purpose of making that attack; that they would throw the whole of their resources and their strength into breaking the British line at that point, and that their objective would be the capture of Amiens and the severance of the British and French forces.

"That was the conclusion which Sir Henry Wilson, Chief of the Imperial Staff, came to and which was submitted at that time, two or three months ago, and I think that it was one of the most remarkable forecasts of enemy intentions that was ever made.

"As a matter of fact, the attack was made up, I think, by about ninety-seven divisions. It was an attack on the widest front that had ever been engaged. Its object undoubtedly was the capture of Amiens and the severance of the British and French forces. So that, almost in every detail, that very remarkable forecast has been verified in the event. event.

"Another remarkable prediction was that it might probably succeed in penetrating the British line to the extent of half the distance of the front attacked. They came to the conclusion from a close examination of the offensives of the war.

Advantage of United Command.

"There was another advantage. There was, first of all, the advantage which the Germans had from having the initiative. There was a further advantage they had, and this undoubtedly was the greatest advantage, from having a united command opposed to a dual one. The Germans undoubtedly relied on this to a very large extent for their success. They owe much of the success of this attack to this.

"It was reported to me on good authority that the Kaiser informed ex-King Constantine: 'I shall beat them, for they have no united command.' Which shows that that was what they were relying in the main upon; that, although their numbers were slightly inferior, they knew the importance that was to be attached to the fact that there was a perfectly united command.

"And that is an obvious advantage, for if the risks in one particular part of the line are great, and in another part of the line are great, but substantially less than in the former, with one command there is no hesitation in the mind of the Commander in Chief as to which risk he will make the greatest provision against.

"With two separate commands the problem is a different one. It is more difficult to adjust the balance of risk, and the General is always naturally inclined to give himself and his army the benefit of any doubt. That may be because if anything goes wrong there he alone is to be held responsible to his own countrymen for the safety of his army.

Weather Favored Germans.

"The enemy had another incidental but, as it turned out, very important advantage—that of weather. Exceptional weather favored his designs. It was both dry and misty. The attack which succeeded was made on that part of the line where under ordinary Spring conditions the ground would have been almost impassable.

"A wounded officer told a friend of mine today, a General, that under ordinary conditions no one could walk across the part which was traversed by the Germans at this time of the year. But it just happened to be absolutely dry and firm, and they walked across ground which no one had any right to expect at this time of the year would be in that condition.

"Not only that, but the fact that it was warm increased the mist, and the Germans were actually in some parts within a few yards of our front line before any one knew of their approach. It was quite impossible to observe them. This was a special disadvantage to us, inasmuch as our scheme of organization in that particular part of the line depended largely upon the cross-line fire of machine guns and artillery. They had, therefore, a very special advantage, of which they made the fullest use.

Closed Up Gap in Armies.

"With regard to the battle itself, as I have already stated, it will take some time to ascertain the whole facts. At one time it was undoubtedly very critical. The enemy broke through between our Third and Fifth Armies, and there was a serious gap, and the situation was retrieved owing to the magnificent conduct of our troops. They retired in perfectly good order, re-establishing the junction between the two armies and frustrating the enemy's purpose.

"The House can hardly realize, and certainly cannot sufficiently thank—nor can the country—our troops for their superb valor and the grim tenacity with which they faced overwhelming hordes of the enemy and clung to their positions. They retired, but were never routed, and once more the cool pluck of the British soldier, that refuses to acknowledge defeat, saved Europe.

"I am referring to the whole army, Generals, officers, and soldiers. I mean the whole army, and I draw no distinction. Their conduct has been one of incredible courage and great coolness under the most trying conditions. I do not think that any distinction can be drawn between officers and men. I am referring to the British Army, and that means all.

Praises General Carey's Feat.

"And I specially refer to what one Brigadier General did. Some reference has been made in the press already to it, where at one point there was a serious gap, which might have let the enemy into Calais."

At this point the Prime Minister spoke of the critical situation which developed when the German attack began. He said the gap on the way to Amiens was held by Brig. Gen. Carey, who for six days stood off the enemy with engineers, laborers, signalers, and anybody who could hold a rifle.

"Until the whole circumstances which led to the retirement of the Fifth Army and its failure to hold the line of the Somme, at least till the Germans brought out their guns, and perhaps the failure adequately to destroy the bridges—until all these are explained it would be unfair to censure the General in command of the army, General Gough. But until those circumstances are cleared up it would be equally unfair to the British Army to retain his services in the field. It is necessary to recall him until the facts have been fully ascertained and laid before the Government by their military advisers.

"After the retirement of the Fifth Army the French reserves came up with remarkable rapidity, when their position before the battle is borne in mind. In fact, the speed with which, when the final decision was taken as to the real designs of the enemy, the French reserves were brought up is one of the most remarkable feats of organization in this war, and between the courage of our troops and the handling of the army—the way the Third Army held, never giving way a hundred yards to the attack of the enemy—I think it right that it should be said about the army commanded by General Byng—what between the efforts of our soldiers and the loyal assistance given in true spirit of comradeship by the French Army, the position is for the moment stabilized. But it is clear that the Germans, having gained an initial success, are preparing another, and perhaps an even greater, attack on the allied armies.

Teutons Fail in Main Objects.

"Up to the present the enemy has undoubtedly obtained a great initial success. There is no good in not accepting the facts. It is from that basis we must begin to build. But he has failed so far in his main objects. He failed to capture Amiens. He failed to separate the French and British armies. But we should be guilty of great, it might be fatal, error if we were to underestimate the gravity of the prospect.

"The enemy has captured valuable ground, which is too near Amiens for comfort or security, and he has succeeded for the time being in crippling one of our great armies.

"I will now tell the House something of the measures adopted by the Cabinet to meet the emergency. I have already explained what was done about the French reserves. The Cabinet took every step to hurry up reinforcements in order to fill up the gap in our armies. No such large numbers of men ever passed across the Channel in so short a time.

"As the emergency was great it was impossible to allow those who were summoned to France the usual leave to visit their relatives. It was with the greatest regret that we found it necessary to cancel this permission, and nothing but the gravity of the position would have justified so harsh a proceeding. But the troops accepted the position in a manner which is worthy of the fortitude, courage, and patriotism they have shown throughout.

"There was an understanding that boys under 19 years would only be used in case of emergency. We felt that the emergency had arisen, and in so far as those who were over 18 were concerned, those who had already received six months' training, we felt it necessary that they should be sent to France.

"As to the guns and machine guns which were lost, the numbers are grossly exaggerated by the enemy. I am assured that they have also exaggerated very considerably the number of prisoners they have taken. The Commander in Chief assured me last week that it was a gross exaggeration.

"I am very glad to be able to say that the Ministry of Munitions were able not merely to replace those guns and machine guns, but that they still have got a very substantial reserve. The same thing applies to ammunition. There is an ample reserve of ammunition both in this country and in France.

"Our aircraft strength is greater now than before the battle, and we all know what brilliant service our airmen rendered in this battle. Until the whole story of the battle is told it will be almost impossible to estimate the services they rendered in retarding the advance of the enemy, in destroying his machinery, and in making it difficult for him to bring up his guns and ammunition. We feel confident that our armies, Generals, and soldiers will be quite equal to the next encounter, whenever it comes.

Wilson's "Dramatic Assistance."

"The next step to which I should like to call the attention of the House is the material and dramatic assistance rendered by President Wilson in this emergency—one of the most important decisions in the war. In fact, the issue of the battle might very well be determined by this decision.

"In America there is a very considerable number of men in the course of training, and the Allies looked forward to having a large American army in France in the Spring. It has taken longer than was anticipated to turn those soldiers into the necessary divisional organizations. If America waited to complete these divisional organizations it would not be possible for these fine troops in any large numbers to take part in this battle in this campaign, although it might be very well the decisive battle of the war.

"This was, of course, one of the most serious disappointments from which the Allies had suffered. It is no use pretending it was not one of our chief causes of anxiety. We depend upon it largely to make up the defection of Russia.

"For many reasons—reasons, perhaps of transport, reasons connected with the time it takes, not merely to train troops and their officers, but to complete the necessary organization—it was quite impossible to put into France the number of divisions every one had confidently expected would be there. Under the circumstances we, therefore, submitted to the President of the United States a definite proposal. We had the advantage of having the Secretary of State for War in this country within two or three days after the battle had commenced. Mr. Balfour and I had a long conversation with him upon the whole situation, and we submitted to him certain recommendations which we had been advised to make to Mr. Baker and the American Government.

Reading Submitted Proposal.

"On the strength of the conversation we submitted proposals to President Wilson, with the strong support of Premier Clemenceau, to enable the combatant strength of the American Army to come into action during this battle, inasmuch as there was no hope of it coming in as a strong separate army. By this decision American battalions will be brigaded with those of the Allies.

"This proposal was submitted by the Earl of Reading on behalf of the British Government to President Wilson, and President Wilson assented to the proposal without any hesitation, with the result that arrangements are now being made for the fighting strength of the American Army to be immediately brought to bear in this struggle, a struggle which is only now beginning, to this extent, and it is no mere small extent, that the German attack has been held up. It has stirred up the resolution and energy of America beyond anything which has yet occurred.

"Another important decision taken by the allied Governments I must also call the attention of the House to. It became more obvious after the battle than ever before that the allied armies were suffering from the fact that they were fighting as two separate armies and had to negotiate support with each other. Valuable time was thus lost. Some of us had been deeply impressed by this peril for some time and had done our best to avert it.

"But the inherent difficulties to be overcome are tremendous. There are national prejudices, national interests, professional prejudices and traditions. The inherent difficulties of getting two or three separate armies to fight as one are almost insurmountable, and it can only be done if public opinion in all these countries insists upon it as one condition of success.

"The Versailles conference was an effort at a remedy. How were the Versailles decisions carried out, and the extent to which they were not carried out? This is not the time to inquire.

"I respectfully suggest to the House that no good would come at this stage in discussing this question. But if any one needed conviction as to the wisdom of that policy, this battle must have supplied it. The peril we passed through, by establishing the conviction without challenge may, I think, be worth the price we paid for it.

"A few days after the battle commenced there was not merely the Government, but the commanders in the field. We had not merely Field Marshals, but army commanders present. We were so convinced—and the same thing applied to the French—of the importance of more complete strategic unity that they agreed to the appointment of General Foch to the supreme direction of the strategy of all the allied armies on the western front.

"May I not say just one word about General Foch? It is not merely that he is one of the most brilliant soldiers in Europe, but there is this to be said about him: Foch is the man who, when we were attacked and were in a similar plight at the first battle of Ypres, rushed the French Army there by every conceivable expedient—buses, cabs, lorries, anything he could lay his hands upon. He crowded French divisions through, and undoubtedly helped to win the great battle.

"There is no doubt about the loyalty and comradeship of General Foch. I have no doubt that this arrangement will be carried out not merely in the letter but in the spirit. But it is the most important decision that has been taken in reference to the coming battle. This strategic unit is, I submit to the House, the fundamental condition of victory. It can only be maintained by complete co-operation between the Governments and the Generals and by something more than that—the unmistakable public opinion behind it.

Asks Support for Foch.

"Why do I say that? For this reason: A Generalissimo in the ordinary and full sense of the term may be impracticable. There are three functions which a General wields—strategical, tactical, and administrative. What does administrative mean? It means control of organization, the appointment and dismissal of officers and Generals, and that is a power which it is difficult or almost impossible to give to Generals of another country with a national army.

"Therefore, in spite of all the arrangements made, unless there be not merely good-will, but the knowledge that the public of France, Great Britain, and America will assist in co-ordination and in supporting the authority in the supreme strategical plans chosen by the Governments, and in supporting the Governments in any action they may take to assert their authority, any arrangements made will be futile and mischievous. I make no apology for dwelling at some length upon this point. I have always felt that we were losing value and efficiency in the allied armies through lack of co-ordination and concentration.

"We have sustained many disasters already through this, and we shall encounter more unless this defect in our machinery is put right. Hitherto, I regret, every effort at amendment led to rather prolonged and very bitter controversy, and these great inherent difficulties were themselves accentuated and aggravated. There were difficulties of carrying out plans and other obstacles, and, what is worse, valuable time is lost.

"I entreat the nation as a whole to stand united for the united control of the strategical operations of our armies at the front. We know how much depends upon unity of concentration. We are fighting a very powerful foe, who, insofar as he has triumphed, has triumphed mainly because of superior unity and the concentration of his strategic plans.

"There is another matter to which I should like to refer, and it is the suggestion that our forces have been dissipated on a subsidiary enterprise. Not a single division was sent from France to the East. With regard to Italy, had it not been for the fact that there are battalions of French and British divisions there, the Austrian Army would have been free to throw the whole of its strength on the western front. If there were not some there now the Austrian Army would be more powerfully represented than is on the western front.

"With regard to Saloniki, the only thing the present Government did was to reduce the forces there by two divisions. In Mesopotamia there is only one white division in all, and in Egypt and Palestine together there are only two white divisions, and the rest are either Indians or mixed with a very small proportion of British troops. In these divisions I am referring to infantry divisions.

"I want the House really to consider what that means. There is a menace to our Eastern empire through Persia, because through Persia you approach Afghanistan, and through Afghanistan you menace the whole of India. Had it not been for the blows inflicted upon the Turks, what would have happened? Before these attacks there were Turkish divisions helping the Germans in Russia. They would have been there helping the Germans on the west, exactly as they helped them on the east.

Germans Sent to Help Turks.

"But what has happened? They were attacked in Palestine and Mesopotamia and two Turkish armies were destroyed. If we had remained in Egypt and defended Egypt by remaining there on the canal and allowing the Turks to hold us with a small force while they were putting the whole of their force in Mesopotamia and menacing our position in India by that means, the Turks could now have been assisting the Germans in the west as they did in the east.

"What is happening now? German battalions at this moment have been sent to assist the Turks instead of the Turks sending divisions to help the Germans. The Germans now have sent battalions to help the Turks in Palestine. After all, if you have a great empire you must defend it.

"There was a great empire which withdrew its legations from the outlying provinces of the empire to defend its heart against the Goths and those legations never went back. The British Empire has not been reduced to that plight yet. We can defend ourselves successfully in France, and we can also hold our empire against any one who assails it in any part of the world at the same time.

"May I, before I leave this topic, say how much gratitude we owe to India for the magnificent way in which she has come to the aid of the empire in this emergency?

"It is not the fact that we have got three British divisions in Egypt and Palestine and one in Mesopotamia that has enabled us to hold our own, but it is the fact that we have had these splendid troops from India. Many of them volunteered since the war, and they have been more than a match for their Turkish adversaries on many a stricken field.

Can't Give Accurate Losses.

"It is too early to state yet with accuracy our losses, because in the case of a battle over such a wide front, fought with such intensity for over a fortnight, with vast numbers of men engaged, the losses sustained must be considerable. The claims of the enemy as to prisoners have been grossly exaggerated, and Field Marshal Haig has assured me that they were quite impossible from the figures at his disposal, and which he showed me, and the enemy's claims seem quite preposterous from the statement he made to me.

"But still our losses are very great and our reserves have been called upon to a considerable extent to make up the wastage and refit the units, and if the drain continues on this scale, a drain on the resources of reserves and of man power, it must cause the deepest anxiety, unless we take immediate steps to replenish it.

"The immediate necessity is relieved by the splendid and generous way and promptitude with which America has come to our aid, but they are simply lent to receive their training, with a view to their incorporation at the first suitable moment in the American Army in France, and even if they remain with the British right through the battle, the time will come when we shall need large reinforcements, if this battle continues.

"I want the House to consider for a moment what the plans of the enemy may be as they are now revealed. It was never certain he would take this plunge, because he knows what it means if it fails. But he has taken it. The battle proves that the enemy has definitely decided to seek a military decision this year, whatever the consequences to himself.

Reasons for German Effort.

"There is no doubt he has overwhelming reasons. There is the economic condition of his country and the critical economic condition of his allies. He is now at the height of his power, and Russia is at the least, while America has not yet come in in its strength. So this year the enemy may put forth something which approaches his full strength. But soon he will grow feebler and weaker in comparison with the allied forces.

"Everything, therefore, points to the definite determination of Germany to put the whole of her resources into seeking a military decision this year, and this means a prolonged battle from the North Sea to the Adriatic, with Germany and Austria throwing in the whole of their strength.

"There are still seven or eight months within which the fighting can continue, and everything depends upon keeping our strength right to the end, whatever the strain upon our resources may be.

"With American aid we can do it. But even with American help, we cannot feel secure unless we are prepared ourselves to make even greater sacrifices than we have hitherto made. I know what the Government wish. I know also what will happen if the demand which the Government is putting forward is not responded to.

"It is idle to imagine, as some people very light-heartedly seem to think, that you have got an unlimited reservoir of man-power in this or in any belligerent country. We have already raised in this country for military and naval purposes very nearly six million men. We cannot raise here the same proportion of men per population as you can in other belligerent countries. I have repeatedly emphasized that in the House of Commons.

Says Navy and Shipping Are First.

"We have the greatest navy in the world, the command of the seas depends not merely for ourselves, but for our allies, upon the efforts we put forward. That is not only a question of manning the fleet: it is also a question of building, of adding to the numbers of ships, and of repairing the ships. Then you have got a mercantile marine, without which the Allies could not continue the struggle for a single month.

"All that must be borne in mind, and whatever happens and whatever proposals we put forward today, it would be folly to do anything which would interfere with the one fundamental condition of success to the Allies—that the navy and shipping must be first.

Industry to Bear Strain.

"We have also got to supply coal largely to our allies, as well as steel. But, owing largely to improved organizations in the various industries, to the way they are adapting themselves from day to day to new conditions, and to the increased numbers and greatly increased efficiency of woman labor, there is a reserve of men, which, consistent with the discharge of these obligations, may yet be withdrawn in great emergency for our battleline; not without damage to industry—I do not forget that—and not without, to a certain extent, weakening the economic strength of the country, and not without imposing restrictions and perhaps privations, but without impairment to the striking power of the country for war.

"I want to point out especially why the steps taken now are steps which will be useful in this battle. First of all, it is a battle which may last for months. The decision may be taken not now or next month, but may be months hence. But, beyond that, the Allies at the present moment have the same reserves of man power to reinforce their armies as Germany has, without taking into account those great reserves in America.

"The Germans, however, are calling up another class, which will produce 550,000 efficient young men. These will be prepared to be thrown into the battle line. This is the 1920 class, aged 18½. These can be thrown into the battle line before this fight is over, and we must be prepared for their advent in this struggle this year.

Continuation of Lloyd George's Speech to the Commons

"Therefore, I have to submit to Parliament the totals for increasing, and increasing very materially, the reserves which will be available for reinforcing our armies in the field during this prolonged battle, upon which we are only just entering. I will now give roughly some of the proposals we intend to make in order to increase the number of men available.

"We already have raised for armed forces during the first quarter of the year more than the quarter's proportion of the original number of men which it was estimated was the minimum required for the present year. We are also effecting a very strict comb out of some of the essential industries. Very large levies have been taken from munition works. They will amount, I think, to something like 100,000 grade 1 men.

New Call on the Miners.

"That has been done already this year, and it will, of course, involve the utilization of other labor to a very large extent in munition works. A call for 500,000 has been made already on the coal industry, and these men have been rapidly recruited. I regret to say that military needs will necessitate the calling up of another 150,000 men from this industry. These men can be spared, we are convinced, after entering into the matter very carefully, without endangering the essential output of coal for national industries.

"No one is likely to forget the fine response made by the miners at the beginning of the war, or the splendid part they have taken in hundreds of battles since then. They have been loyal in meeting the present demand of 50,000 men, and I am confident they would meet a further call upon them in the same spirit, in view of this great national emergency under which we are making it. The transport services also have been called upon to release the greatest possible number of fit men.

"Further calls are to be made upon the civil service. I do not think it is realized how much the civil service has done already. On one hand, it has had to release a large number of men for the army, and, on the other, it has to meet and is meeting the increased strain of work. But even at the risk of some dislocation we must call upon it to do more, and a clean cut of young, fit men must be made.

Not to Keep Men Below 25.

"It is proposed that no fit men below the age of 25 should be retained. That is the clean-out. We comb out beyond that. I shall explain it later. It is proposed that it should be applied to other industries as well.

"When we are adding to the age and when we are extending the military age, it should not be said that there are fit young men of 25 who are employed in the various industries of the country. This will bring the Civil Service into line, and on a general level, so far as a clean-out is concerned, with the munitions industries.

"Under an act passed in January of this year, we are issuing orders canceling all occupational exemptions by age blocks in specified occupations. That is the clean-out. The first of these orders is being laid on the table in the House today and other orders of the same power will follow.

"I know that the House will appreciate that it is not merely necessary to have men, but to have them quickly. It is no use raising them unless they are raised in time to take part in the struggle this year, when we shall be short of drafts, if the battle is a prolonged one.

"The Government, therefore, have shortened the length of the calling up notice from fourteen days to seven and have authorized the sending of notice by whatever method is the most expeditious and convenient. It may be necessary even to curtail the rights of appeal on medical grounds, but for the moment it is not proposed to do so. We have had a good many frivolous appeals, which have wasted a good deal of time, and if that goes on, it will be obsolutely necessary, in the interest of the security of the country, that the rights of appeal should be curtailed in this respect.

"There is another consideration. The strain upon the medical profession has been great already. We are very short of medical men, and we may be driven to do it by the hard necessities of the case.

Special Draft of Men Up to 55.

"I now turn to the new proposal embodied in the bill, which I beg leave to introduce today. Our first proposal is to raise the military age up to 50, and in certain specified cases we ask for powers to raise it to 55, but that only when a man with special qualifications is needed.

"For instance, it may be necessary to do it, in the case of medical men, in order to secure their services. It may be necessary in certain special classes, with special training and special experience, to secure their services for the army. When you come to the question of raising the age to 50, it does not mean that men between 42 and 50 are necessarily to be taken in order to put them into the fighting line. It may be that there are men of that age who are just as fit as men of 25, but I am sorry to say that that is the exception, and we cannot, therefore, depend upon men of that age altogether to make the finest fighting material.

"There are a good many services in the army which do not require the very best physical material, and it would be very helpful to get men of this age to fill those services, in order to release younger and fitter men to enter the fighting line. There is also to be borne in mind the fact that we have to prepare for home defense, so as to be able to release men from this country and fill their places by men between 42 and 50, who, I have no doubt, would fight very tenaciously for their own homes if there were an invasion.

"The proportion of men from 42 to 50 years of age whom we expect to be available is not very high—something like 7 per cent. That is only 7 per cent. of men from 42 to 50 will be available for the army.

"I only want to reassure people between 42 and 50 that all the men of that age are not going to be called up to the fighting line. I gave a sort of rough estimate that it would be only a small percentage of men of this age who would be likely to come under the provisions of the bill.

"Now I come to the question of exemptions from military service. It is known to everyone who has had experience in the difficulty of obtaining man-power that one of the many obstacles to success is the number of exemptions which have been granted, often for reasons which at the time appeared sufficient, but which should no longer be effective at the present time of crisis.

"The Minister of National Service already has the power under the act passed this year to cancel certificates granted on occupational grounds, and it is proposed to make free use of this power. There will be several of these exemptions which will be cancelled under the power which already has been conferred on the Minister of National Service by means of proclamations, but when the existing powers have been used to the utmost it may be necessary to go farther and deal with exemptions granted on other grounds.

"Accordingly it is provided by the bill that his Majesty may, by proclamation declaring that a national emergency has arisen, direct that a certificate of exemption from the military service of the nature specified in the proclamation shall cease to have effect, and that while any such proclamation remains in force no exemptions shall be granted which would fall within the terms of the proclamation.

"It is obvious that under this provision it would be open to the Government to cancel exemptions in respect of men under an age to be specified in the proclamation. This is another means of arriving at a clean-out so as to secure men of military age, fit young men for the purposes of the army under an age to be specified in the proclamation, and any existing exemptions granted to such men will be superseded and the men will be taken or left on medical grounds only. We have to choose between either submitting to defeat or taking the necessary measures to avert it. We will never submit to accepting defeat.

"I need hardly say that this provision will not be used to set aside the pledges given to discharged soldiers. They will be carefully observed.

"It is proposed further to make a change in the constitution of the appeal tribunals dealing with exemptions and to speed up their procedure. I want again to emphasize the fact that time is the essence of this thing. The existing tribunals, no doubt, have done very admirable work, but they will be the first to admit that their work has been hampered by a number of circumstances—the number of the tribunals themselves, the facilities for unnecessary and repeated applications, and the opportunities for delay under recurring rights of appeal.

To Reshape Appeal Boards.

"In these circumstances it is proposed to take power by an Order in Council both to reconstitute the tribunals and regulate the areas in which they shall work and standardize the grounds of exemption and limit the rights of appeal. It is impossible now to specify the precise nature of the changes to be made, but I may indicate the nature of the changes we have in mind.

"Firstly, the areas within which the tribunals may act will be reconsidered and in some cases adjusted; secondly, the local tribunals, like appeal tribunals, will become nominated bodies and be reduced in size. This does not mean that use will not be made of the assistance of existing members of tribunals and they will be willing, I hope, to continue to work under the new conditions.

"We propose to make an attempt to standardize more accurately than is now done the grounds of exemption, to prevent conflicting decisions on these matters in different localities, which is one of the great grievances felt in the country.

"Changes also will be made in the procedure, but upon these I do not intend to dwell at the moment. There is also the question of the extension of the act to ministers of religion for noncombatant purposes.

Announces Irish Conscription.

"I now come to the question of Ireland. When an emergency has arisen which makes it necessary to put men of 50 and boys of 18 into the army in the fight for liberty and independence "—Joseph Devlin here interrupted—" and small nationalities."

The Premier resumed: "Especially, as I am reminded, to fight for liberty and independence and small nationalities, I am perfectly certain it is not possible to justify any longer the exclusion of Ireland."

"What is the position?" continued Mr. Lloyd George. "No Home Rule proposal ever submitted in this House proposed to deprive the Imperial Parliament of the power of dealing with all questions in relation to the army and navy. These invariably are in every Home Rule bill I have ever seen and are purely questions for the Imperial Parliament, so that I am no more claiming any national right that was ever claimed in the House. The Defense of the Realm act also was extended to Ireland.

"The character of the quarrel in which we are engaged is just as much Irish as English. May I say it is more so? It is more Irish, Scotch, and Welsh than it is even English. Ireland, through its representatives at the beginning of the war, assented to it.

Mr. Devlin here interjected—"Because it was a war for small nationalities."

The Prime Minister resuming: "Ireland, through its representatives, assented to the war, voted for the war, supported the war. Irish representatives and Ireland, through its representatives, without a dissenting voice committed the empire to this war. They are as responsible for it as any part of the United Kingdom. May I just read the declaration issued by the Irish Party on Dec. 17, 1914, shortly after the war began.

Byrne Recalls "Revolution."

Mr. Byrne interrupted with: "We have had a revolution since then."

The Prime Minister, resuming: "This is the Declaration of the Irish Party: 'A test to search men's souls has arisen. The empire is engaged in the most serious war in history. It is a just war, provoked by the intolerable military despotism of Germany. It is a war for the defense of the sacred rights and liberties of small nations and the respect and enlargement of the great principles of nationality. Involved in it is the fate of France, our kindred country and the chief nation of that powerful Celtic race to which we belong; the fate of Belgium, to whom we are attached by the same great ties of race and by the common desire of small nations to assert their freedom, and the fate of Poland, whose sufferings and struggles bear so marked a resemblance to our own.

"'It is a war for the high ideals of human government and international relations, and Ireland would be false to her history and to every consideration of honor, good faith, and self-interest did she not willingly bear her share in its burdens and its sacrifices.'

"It is not merely illogical that Ireland should not help, it is unjust. If it were merely England's battle, the young men of Ireland might regard that fact with indifference, but it is not. They are just as much concerned as the young men of England. Therefore, it is proposed to extend conscription on the same conditions as in Great Britain.

"As there is no machinery in existence and no register has as yet been completed in Ireland, it may take some weeks before active enrollments begin. As soon as arrangements are complete the Government will put the act into immediate operation."

When Mr. Lloyd George referred to Ireland, Alfred Byrne, Nationalist member from Dublin, shouted:

"We won't have conscription in Ireland!"

An uproar followed.

The report of the Irish Convention was adopted by a majority only, and therefore the Government would take the responsibility, the Premier said, for such proposals for self-government as were just and could be carried out without violent controversy. It would be some weeks before enrollment in Ireland began, the Premier continued. One Nationalist cried out:

"It will never begin."

Michael Flavin, Nationalist member from Kerry, said:

"You come across and try to take us."

The Premier said the Man-Power act would be extended to Ireland under the same conditions as to Great Britain and that a measure of self-government for Ireland would be introduced. He told the Nationalists that conscription and self-government would not go together, but that each must be taken on its merits.

While the Premier was speaking, Joseph Devlin, Nationalist member for West Belfast, interrupted to move that the House report progress until the report of the Irish Convention was presented. This interruption created a storm of protest, and Mr. Devlin shouted:

"You cannot howl me down. I won't sit down. You may try Prussian methods in Ireland, but you won't try them on me."

The Speaker intervened, and told Mr. Devlin he could move adjournment after the Premier's speech, but not in the middle of it.

When the Premier was referring to Ireland John Dillon, the successor of the late John Redmond as leader of the Irish Nationalists in Parliament, said:

"If Irish liberty were at stake I would not hesitate to support that policy. I never challenged the justice of war. I don't challenge it now."

Mr. Lloyd George began: "I don't want to cause trouble—"

"You will get plenty," interrupted an Irish member.

The Premier said he hoped to get the bill through all its stages this week as it was a matter of urgency. He was interrupted by an Irish member, who shouted:

"You will have to get us out of the House first."

Resuming, Lloyd George said:

"While we have one ship afloat we should not accept a German peace. The men being taken now may be the means of a decisive issue."

Mr. Asquith Asks for Time.

After the Premier had delivered his address former Premier Asquith said that if, as he believed, the gravest peril which ever had menaced the empire was now confronting it, there was no sacrifice Parliament was not prepared to make. He appealed to the Premier to give a little more time for consideration of the bill.

Mr. Asquith said he would suspend judgment until he saw the bill in print. He invited everyone to keep his mind and ears accessible to reasonable argument. All the needful machinery, he added, could not be set up for weeks, perhaps for months.

At the conclusion of Mr. Asquith's speech Joseph Devlin moved an adjournment and warned the Government that it was entering upon a course of madness if it endeavored to enforce conscription on Ireland. Ireland, he said, never had been consulted on its willingness to pay this blood tax. If the Government would do justice to the Irish people it would give them the free Government of a free people.

After some debate Mr. Lloyd George asked that the motion be withdrawn so that the bill might be printed. John Dillon, supporting Mr. Devlin's motion, asked the Premier whether he had consulted anybody before taking this decision—if he had consulted a single Irish representative. If he had he should name the man.

Mr. Dillon said he hoped for the sake of the war and for the sake of the empire that the methods of the War Cabinet in dealing with the war were different from its methods in dealing with Ireland.

A bill applying conscription to Ireland, Mr. Dillon continued, would plunge the country into bloodshed and confusion and would open a new war front in addition to the western front. He urged the War Cabinet to inform itself as to the state of Irish feeling before proposing conscription to Ireland.

Carson for Conscription.

Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, said that the only thing that interested him on the present occasion was the pressing necessity of the country in relation to the war. He declared he asked himself what right had he as an Irish Member to give his adhesion to a bill which called upon the people of Great Britain to make sacrifices most terrible in character while Ireland should be absolved. If such a thing could happen, he would hang his head for shame.

Sir Edward said he regretted that the bill had been mixed up with home rule. Conscription for Ireland, either right or wrong, ought not to be propped up by home rule. He warned the Government that by introducing home rule they might be raising two agitations, one against conscription and another in regard to home rule, both of which might affect the operation of the bill.

Mr. Devlin's motion was defeated by a vote of 323 to 80, after the Government had applied the closure.

Then on a motion for leave to introduce the Man-Power bill, William O'Brien protested against what he termed the madness and wickedness of applying it to Ireland, the Government offering a shadow of a sham home rule, he said, in order to impose upon Ireland a naked military despotism at the point of machine guns. Because Ireland was weak, the Government was going to do to her what it dared not to do to Australia without consent, Mr. O'Brien said.

Leave to introduce the Government's Man-Power bill was carried in the House tonight by 299 to 80.

Discussion Period Extended.

It was announced in the House that the Government had decided to extend the time for discussion of the Man-Power bill until Tuesday of next week. This was a concession to a request of Mr. Asquith after a vote had been taken, and the bill had passed its first reading amid cheering.

SAYS LIBERALS ARE AMAZED.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, April 10.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent, who has been consistently a supporter of the Lloyd George Government, writes:

"Why the Government should have gratuitously chosen at this moment above all others to impose conscription on Ireland is a mystery that I find it impossible to solve. Liberals for the most part are aghast at the folly of this impolicy. In the passion of resentment on the Irish benches the Prime Minister's announcement that the Government intends to bring in a bill to establish self-government in Ireland on the lines of the convention report passed almost unheeded.

"A great impression was made on the House by a noble, well-conceived, and very eloquent speech delivered by Mr. Asquith. It was a sombre reminder of the perils that threaten the splendid inheritance that our forefathers have bequeathed to us. Mr. Asquith thinks the situation confronting us today is graver than any that ever menaced this country in its thousand years of existence. He does not quail before the peril, least of all when he thinks of the indomitable spirit animating our soldiers. In this connection he told the House that one of his sons, an artillery officer, stated in a letter which was received this morning that his battery had been in twenty-one engagements in twelve successive days.

"It is not alone the British Empire," said Mr. Asquith, "but the cause of liberty and humanity that is in grave peril. In the face of such an emergency there is no sacrifice which the country is not prepared to make."

He earnestly appealed to the House to approach the bill from that point of view and begged the Government to give more time for its consideration. He made no reference to Ireland and abstained from any allusion to any specific proposal in the bill until he has been able to see it in print. This brief speech, so worthy in its spirit and temper, touched the emotions of every one who listened to it.

The atmosphere in the House of Commons did not foreshadow success. From his first sentence on Ireland the Premier was assailed with what Reuter's correspondent describes as "running hostile comment from the Irish benches."

The new Nationalist Leader, John Dillon denounced conscription for Ireland heartily. Nor were there signs of conciliation from the Ulster faction. The Irish Unionists met under the Chairmanship of Sir Edward Carson and resolved to support conscription, but they were merely indorsing what has been one of the planks in their platform.

It is felt generally that there is a greater and stronger force in the country than any operating in the House of Commons. That is public opinion, which apparently demands that Irish questions shall not stand in the way of winning the war.

Mr. Lloyd George's speech revealed that the Irish Convention had not reached any agreement and that the constructive work must be done by the Cabinet, guided somewhat by Irish opinion as revealed in the debates of the convention.

CALLED HIS BOLDEST STROKE.

Lloyd George Seeks to Solve Two Problems at Once.

LONDON, April 9.—David Lloyd George, it is thought here, made the boldest stroke of his career today by coupling home rule for Ireland with the conscription of Irishmen.

His disclosure in an address in the House of Commons in presenting the new conscription bill to Parliament swept aside all interest in the details of the conscription scheme, which had been forecast by the newspapers.

Ireland is the only subject talked of tonight. The only question asked is how will the Irish parties and their British sympathizers take to the new policy.

Everything depends on the nature of the proposals for self-government for Ireland to be adopted, as the Premier said, "without violent controversy." The first impression was skepticism as to whether the War Cabinet could frame a measure that would stand that test and the fear that the country might be plunged again into the old fury of the Irish quarrel, while fighting for its life against enemies outside its walls. It was because of this fear that the Asquith Government shelved the old Home Rule act and the Nationalists have blamed that shelving for the failure of more Irishmen to enlist.

Mr. Lloyd George, however, is daring enough to attempt to balance both debts by granting home rule and enforcing conscription.

IRISH BISHOPS JOIN IN DRAFT PROTEST

They Assert That Conscription Would Be the 'Worst Blunder' in Four Years.

DUBLIN, April 9.—The Irish Catholic Bishops' Committee at a meeting held today, which was presided over by Cardinal Logue, passed by a unanimous vote a resolution protesting against conscription in Ireland and declaring that to enforce conscription without the consent of the Irish people would soon inevitably end in defeating its own purpose.

"What between mismanagement and mischief making," said the resolution, "this country already has been desperately upset, and it would be a fatal mistake, surpassing the worst blunder of the last four years, to furnish a telling plea for desperate courtesy by an attempt to enforce conscription."

The Bishops attending the meeting included some who have supported recruiting and the Government's attitude in the war.

AUSTRIA GIVING LEAVE TO FARMER-SOLDIERS

Indications That Food Shortage Takes Precedence Over an Offensive Against Italy.

By a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, Tuesday, April 9.—The rumors of a coming Austrian offensive against the Italians do not gain confirmation from information obtained by the Intelligence Department of the American Army. It is learned that the Austrian High Command is utilizing the present lull to give leave on a large scale to farmers in uniform, so that they may go back home during the Spring to cultivate their fields.

It is understood that these leaves are being given on a larger scale than ever before, and have given rise to inquiries in the Reichsrat, in answer to which the Government hinted that the situation was such that the crops must be attended to, even by soldiers, to take care of future food needs.

CAREY'S VOLUNTEERS FILLED GAP FOR DAYS

General's Party of Servants, Clerks, and Signalers Beat Off Heavy Attacks.

The exploit of Major Gen. George Glas Sandeman Carey, referred to by Premier Lloyd George in the House of Parliament yesterday, was performed between March 22 and March 28, on the left of the British Fifth Army, just below St. Quentin.

Here the Germans on March 21 drove a wedge between the Inniskilling Fusiliers and the Ulster troops which would have ultimately separated the Third Army under Byng from the Fifth Army under Gough. The former held fast and the latter was giving way on the 22d, when Carey organized a "scratch" battalion in the rear, filled the gap and for nearly six days kept it filled until relieved.

How he did this was described by Philip Gibbs in a dispatch from the front dated April 2:

"The enemy struck in between these Ulster troops and battalions of Manchesters, Bedfords, Yorkshires, and Scottish fusiliers on their left, and it was necessary to draw back toward Ham. To fill up the gap 200 men from headquarters—staff clerks, servants, and signalers—assembled, and with great gallantry held their ground. To pioneer battalions, among them young citizens of Belfast, rifles were given, and they became a fighting force which beat off heavy attacks."

General Gough, who had been rapidly promoted, was removed from his command on April 1. A year ago Carey, with the rank of Colonel in the regular army, had only been commissioned temporary Brigadier General by the Military Secretary notwithstanding he was a Boer war veteran, Queen's medal, two clasps, an artillery expert of European reputation, and in the present war, besides being thrice mentioned in dispatches, had received the decoration of Companion of the Bath. He is 51 years old.

LISTS OF CASUALTIES AGAIN MADE PUBLIC

On Baker's Cabled Order, War Department Will Now Issue Them Regularly.

447 NAMES FOR SIX DAYS

Heaviest Toll of Any Day Since Our Men Landed in France—Was 124 on April 5.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Acting on cabled instructions from Secretary Baker, the War Department tonight resumed publication of the daily list of casualties among the American expeditionary forces. Lists which had accumulated between April 2, when the practice was temporarily discontinued, and April 8 were made public, and it was stated officially that the casualties would be announced regularly hereafter.

The reports issued tonight showed that 447 American soldiers were killed or wounded in action, died of various causes, or were captured by the enemy in the six-day period covered. The heaviest toll for a single day reported since the first American soldiers landed in France was shown by the list of April 5, which contained 124 names. Specific reference is made to twenty-one men having been captured by the Germans. Twenty of these previously had been reported missing and one previously reported dead.

During the last week correspondents with the American forces have reported unusual activity by the Germans on the fronts where the Americans are in the trenches, the dispatches of Sunday referring to the heavy artillery bombardment of the trenches held by General Pershing's men. A number of the casualties reported are belived to have occurred among the engineer units that took part in the great battle in Picardy.

The issuing of the daily casualty lists was suspended after receipt of a general order from Secretary Baker, in France, that in future all news relating to the expeditionary forces must come from the headquarters of General Pershing. While it was not believed that the order was intended to refer to the casualty lists, Acting Secretary Crowell and Major Gen. March, Acting Chief of Staff, decided to hold them up until a formal ruling on the point could be obtained from Mr. Baker.

Pressure still is being exercised in the attempt to have published the home addresses and next of kin of each man named in the casualty list. This system was abandoned by the War Department after General Pershing had reported receipt of a formal protest from the French Government that it resulted in the enemy's obtaining valuable military information. It is believed here that the feature objected to by the French was the inclusion of the date on which the soldier was killed or injured.

President Wilson is understood to have this matter under consideration now, but he is expected to withhold final decision until he has had an opportunity to discuss the point with Secretary Baker on the latter's return from Europe.

HEAR OF ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

Rumor in England That an American Plane Crossed the Ocean.

LONDON, April 9.—All London was talking today about the latest war rumor—the landing in England last night of an American airplane after a non-stop flight from New York with twelve passengers. The authorities declared there was no basis for the story, but this denial served merely to give it additional currency.

According to the popular version, this was the "big surprise" which Premier Lloyd George said last week that the Americans would soon give the Germans.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — American aviation officials said today that no American airplane had crossed the Atlantic, and they were at a loss to explain reports in England that a machine carrying twelve passengers had landed there from America.

LENINE TALKS WAR AGAINST JAPAN

ADVANTAGE TO BERLIN SEEN

Papers Refuse to Consider Disembarkation as Having Any Other Motive Than Invasion.

MOSCOW, April 8, (Associated Press.)—Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier, in a speech here today, said that possibly Russia would have to declare war on Japan in connection with the landing of Japanese troops at Vladivostok.

"The Germans creep up from the south," said Lenine. "General Dutoff's movement slackened for a time, but it is again reviving. There are Japanese landings, assisted by Englishmen, and Frenchmen are coming from the Murman coast. We are being surrounded in a tight ring. It is possible after a short time, perhaps even within a few days, that we will have to declare war on Japan."

M. Lenine also hinted at grave complications with Great Britain and France because of their alleged help to the Japanese.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, April 8.—I have just been to the Smolny Institute, which is an almost empty and deserted building—a strange contrast to the Smolny Institute when it was the headquarters of the all-Russia Soviets instead of, as now, of the Petrograd commune.

While I was there news came from Helsingfors that the whole story of a German landing at Hango was false. The landing was made by Finnish White Guards in German uniforms.

The German demand that the Russian Baltic ships in Finnish ports be disarmed is based on the absence from the text of the peace agreement of a provision that Russian ships icebound in Finnish ports may stay there until navigation is possible. The crews are being reduced to a minimum, and disarmament is to be concluded by April 11. The parts of the ships' machinery removed are to be brought to Kronstadt.

Guarding the British Consulate.

It is now reported from Vladivostok that the Japanese authorities have received the Soviet representatives and have declared that the landing of troops was undertaken by Admiral Kato on the responsibility of the English. The landing party is posted near the railway station and is guarding the British Consulate. The streets are heavily patrolled by Red Guards, but there have been no conflicts.

In Petrograd Soviet circles it is still believed that the long-expected has happened, and that the Japanese will attempt to seize the Siberian railway.

Expect Mutinies in Siberia.

MOSCOW, April 7.—It is believed here that the Japanese who have landed at Vladivostok will probably encourage the anti-Soviet minorities in Siberia to mutiny and increase the difficulties in the rear, thus creating disorder and an excuse for more interference. Already there are signs of this. This may be profitable for Japan. It certainly is to the advantage of Germany, especially at a moment when steady organization inside the Soviet republic, both economic and military, was promising a new danger to Germany in the not distant future.

Even the anti-Bolshevist newspapers oppose the Japanese landing, although they are prepared to use it as a ground of agitation against the Bolsheviki. The Retch criticises the Bolsheviki for not being strong enough to prevent the Japanese landing. The Novoya Jizn indirectly calls for resistance to the Allies, and says scornfully:

"The Government talks of diplomatic measures. After the agreement of Brest-Litovsk, are they going to give us an agreement of Vladivostok?"

"We fear the partition of Russia from the East has begun in the name of restoring order," it says.

The Pravda says:

"For us it is clear that this action of the imperialists of the alliance has a double end; on the one hand, to seize as big a lump as possible of Russian territory, and on the other to strike a blow at the Soviet authority."

To gauge the full moral effect of what has happened, it should be remembered that the Japanese descent synchronizes with the German descent on Hango. The Finnish anti-German Socialist Government has been forced to evacuate from Helsingfors to Viborg. Within a short time there will be a German-supported anti-Soviet State within an hour from Petrograd.

Unless the Japanese exploit is speedily liquidated, the Soviet will be cut off from the east by a similar foreign-supported anti-Soviet State, in which case nothing can follow except the destruction of the revolution and a disguised partition of Russia between the East and West for the lasting and not merely temporary advantage of Germany.

PEKING HEARS JAPAN MAKES NEW DEMANDS

Sending of 200,000 Troops Into China to Restore Order Said to be Included.

PEKING, April 4, (Associated Press.)—It is reported in semi-official circles that Japan has proposed to send 200,000 troops to China to co-operate with 200,000 Chinese troops, officered by the Japanese, to restore order throughout China and protect the borders. The alternative is that Japan will dispatch troops to Shangtung and Fukien Provinces for the protection of Japanese interests.

It is said also that Japan has submitted a new series of demands to China, including the complete control of China's finances, purchase of 50 per cent. of ammunition to be made in Japan, operation of iron mines and dockyards under Japanese control, and recognition of special Japanese interests in Mongolia, the same as in Manchuria.

The proposal is said to have been submitted by Baron Sakatani, the new financial adviser to China, and Baron Hayashi, Japanese Minister to China, at a conference with the President and Premier Tuan Chi-Jui. It is believed that part of the plan is the reorganization of China's currency on the basis of a Chino-Japanese financial alliance, which is alleged to be the object of the presence in Peking of Baron Sakatani as the head of a group of leading Japanese bankers.

British Generals to be Chosen by Selection

LONDON, April 9.—King George has signed a royal warrant providing that promotions to the rank of General in the British Army shall be by selection instead of by seniority.

This, it is said, will make it possible for a young officer who shows brilliant abilities as a leader to jump over the heads of seniors in the service.

With the King's decree for promotions of commissioned officers by selection there disappears a cherished tradition of the British regular army. Promotion by selection has always been the backbone of the non-commissioned body.

Military England has been divided into two camps—the press, which alleged that there was no chance for a man to rise in the service, and the military writers, usually retired officers, who adhered to the old system of initial preferment and then seniority.

In the army of the United States close adhesion to the seniority system is overcome by having an officer skip so many "numbers" or promoting him by legislation or Presidential orders, or both.

FALL OF HELSINGFORS EXPECTED BY RUSSIANS

Germans Acting as Masters of Finland—Fear Felt for Russia's Northern Ports.

LONDON, April 9.—With the arrival of the Germans in Finland, the Red Guard cause is lost and the fall of Helsingfors is expected in the near future, says Reuter's Petrograd correspondent, telegraphing Monday. The Germans demanded the disarmament of the forts, as well as of the Russian warships in Finnish waters before Friday, he reports, and the Russian commissaries agreed to comply.

The Germans have distributed by airplane a proclamation declaring that any damage to the fleet or to shipping in the ports or to the land defenses would be severely punished. They likewise demanded that the bolts and sights of the guns on the ships and in the land batteries be loaded on barges and anchored in the outer harbor of Helsingfors, off Gustafssvard, before April 11, the crews of the Russian ships to return to Russia, with the exception that thirty men might be left on the dreadnoughts, twenty men on the cruisers, five on the destroyers, and thirty on the submarines.

The Germans base their demands on Article 6 of the peace treaty, a note attached to which allowed the Russian fleet to remain in Finland until the ice melted.

M. Kameneff, who some time ago was appointed Bolshevist Ambassador to France and was arrested in Finland, will be held by the Finnish White Guards as a hostage, Reuter's Petrograd correspondent reports. In reply to a request made by the Russian authorities through the Swedish representative in Finland for M. Kameneff's release, the White Guards said he would be held pending the receipt of guarantees of non-interference in Finnish affairs by Russian Red Guards.

RIBOT CONTRADICTS CZERNIN'S PEACE STORY

Says His Ministry Never Took Initiative in Any Negotiations with Austria.

PARIS, April 9.—Ex-Premier Ribot said today that the French Government of which he was the head at the time that Count Czernin said conversations concerning peace were held between Austria-Hungary and France never directly or through a neutral intermediary took any initiative in such a proceeding as the Austrian official communication asserted.

This constitutes a contradiction by M. Ribot of the Austrian statement that Count Revertata, Counsellor of the Austrian Legation in Switzerland, was invited by a neutral intermediary in the French Government's name to make known if he was prepared to take cognizance of the French Government's overtures to Austria-Hungary. It contradicts also the statement that Count Armand, confidential agent of Premier Clemenceau, in Ribot's name asked Revertata if conversations between France and Austria-Hungary were possible.

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—The Vienna Zeitung am Mittag, a copy of which has reached here, says that it has been authoritatively informed that the Austrian Government has decided never again to negotiate with the Clemenceau Cabinet, even in connection with the cessation of the war, as M. Clemenceau openly admitted that he had used confidential discussions as the means of obtaining information for the purposes of espionage.

The newspaper adds that Count Zzernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, adheres to everything he said concerning the parleys in Switzerland, and that further sensational disclosures are being prepared.

GERMANS' GREAT GUN BOMBARDED BY FRENCH

Long-Range Piece Discovered by Airmen—Continual Attacks Hamper Its Handling.

PARIS, April 9.—French aviators have discovered the location of the big gun with which the Germans have been bombarding Paris at long range. Continual bombardment of the spot by French artillery and bombing by airmen have made the handling of the great piece difficult. This explains the intermittent fire of the long-range weapon.

The piece is mounted at Crepy-en-Laonnois, near the road from La Fere to Laon. (The spot is eight miles southeast of La Fere and about seventy-five miles from Paris.)

A reply to Cardinal Farley's message of sympathy in connection with the German long-distance bombardment of a Paris church on Good Friday, in which seventy-five persons were killed, was received yesterday from Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris. The message follows:

"I hasten to thank your eminence and the Catholics of New York for their sympathy, their prayers and the generous resolutions which the sacrilegious deed of Good Friday has inspired them to make. I am confident that the Almighty will heed your vows and prayers in favor of the cause which unites us and which more than ever proves itself to be the cause of justice and of Christian civilization."

AMERICANS TO JOIN IN BIG BATTLE SOON

Assistant Secretary Crowell Announces That They Are Not Yet in the Fighting.

HAVE 1,000 AIRPLANES NOW

Machines Obtained from French and Italians, He States—Expects Long Battle.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—American troops have not yet gone into battle in Picardy, Acting Secretary of War Crowell announced tonight in an address to the National Conference of American Lecturers.

He added, however, that indications were that in the near future General Pershing's men would be actively opposing the Germans in their supreme effort on the western front.

The purpose of the German high command in its thrust, Mr. Crowell said, is to drive a wedge between the British and French armies, roll up the former force to the sea, and capture the Channel ports. No Bavarian or Austrian troops have been employed in the battle, the speaker asserted, the German leaders depending upon the Prussian troops, the flower of their army, to carry through to victory.

"The situation will be serious for a long time," Mr. Crowell declared. "The Germans have been going well, and only heavy rainstorms have prevented them from making further progress."

Turning his attention to the nation's much-discussed airplane program, Mr. Crowell said that there were more than 1,000 qualified American army fliers in France and that 1,000 machines had been procured from the French and Italians.

"When you hear of American soldiers defending themselves from German airplanes with their pistols, you need not believe it," the speaker said.

André Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States, addressing the conference this afternoon, said that to crush the German military machine allied unity must extend beyond military commands, that it must be applied to war supplies, to food, and to shipping.

"'The first duty is national unity," said M. Tardieu. "Follow your chief. Act like one single man. Forget political struggles. We have done it, you will do it. The second duty is inter-allied unity. It has been effected as far as military command is concerned, but is not enough. The same unity must be truly and practically carried out for all other purposes, such as war supplies, food, shipping. This has not yet been done; it must be done. The third duty is the unity of feeling and understanding as to the conditions of victory."

France has been able to furnish the American forces with artillery, machine guns and airplanes, M. Tardieu said, and thus America has been allowed a sufficient length of time to organize and to start her own production along that line.

In telling of the sacrifices that France has made and is making the High Commissioner said that 1,300,000 French soldiers had been killed in action or died of wounds, and that another 1,000,000 had been maimed, invalided or captured.

AIRMEN BROKE UP GERMAN ATTACKS

shot one dead and an infantry quick-firer drove the rest to cover. Just the same, I never covered a hundred yards faster in my life with bullets buzzing around me like angry wasps.

Dashing French Attack.

"The French cheered in delight when I threw myself down among them unhurt, and I stayed with them till night and saw them make a counterattack that afternoon, when they advanced two kilometers. Though many of them had been fighting several days without rest, they charged forward in splendid style. All were supremely confident that they could beat the boche, and kept saying, 'Wait. You'll soon see the whole lot retreat.'

"Next morning I got another machine and began again as before."

In the last few weeks the Storks have accounted for a great number of Germans officially corroborated and nearly as many whose fall it has been impossible to check up.

ican engineers and their Canadian comrades in arms were holding a position, what appeared to be a British staff motor drove up. The driver was in the uniform of a British soldier, and a man in the tonneau was in the uniform of a British staff officer. The officer stepped out and asked for the commanding officer. He was taken to a Canadian officer nearby. The staff officer ordered the commander to retire four kilometers, saying that the Germans were pressing on both flanks, and he might be cut off.

For some reason the Canadian commander became suspicious. He had the staff officer searched, when the latter failed to produce his authority, and papers were found on him proving that he was a German officer. He and his chauffeur were immediately shot.

American engineer officers are said to have been present when this incident occurred.

SAILORS ARE TOLD OF PERSHING HONORS

MAY GET OVERTIME BONUS

AN ATLANTIC PORT, April 9.—The officers of the American steamship Woonsocket and such members of her crew as are still on board received the official commendation of General Pershing today for their voluntary part in expediting the military cargo at an American base port in France. They were appreciative of the recognition their work had brought, and they were especially pleased in that it came directly from General Pershing.

Besides this, the men have also the appreciation of the United States Shipping Board. The officers of the board were quick to express their satisfaction over the public recognition of the crew of the Woonsocket, for they believe that such notice will be a stimulus to the crews of other vessels in the Government service to do just a bit more than their articles call for in order to assist in the war.

There were forty-eight men on the last eastward trip, and many of them have been paid off and have sought service on other steamships. Some still remain to make other voyages on the Woonsocket. There was nothing extraordinary in the makeup of the crew which won General Pershing's praise. The really extraordinary thing about it all is that these men should show such a unanimous spirit of helpfulness.

There is no appropriation for rewarding such services, but it is probable that the Shipping Board may find some way to pay overtime bonuses to the men who really did the work that hastened the unloading of the vessel at a time when hours were important in getting supplies to the American Army.

"It is most gratifying to find men who will do more than is required of them," said Captain W. B. Baker of the Committee on Ship Control. "It is only this spirit which will enable us to put the Kaiser back where he belongs."

This is the first voyage of Captain McCarthy on the Woonsocket, and he came to her at the last minute to take the place of a skipper who is said to have been injured by a fall. Her company was what one of the shipping representatives of the Government termed a general mixed crew. It contained men of a dozen nationalities. In the engine room Ireland, Scotland, and Spain were represented.

A Representative Crew.

The crew was drawn from the country from Denver to New York, and some of the men whose names were signed to the ship's articles came from Finland, Norway, Canada, Panama, France, and Holland.

The order commending the crew of the Woonsocket came from General Pershing through the Navy Department and Major Gen. George W. Goethals, as Director of Storage and Traffic. It finally reached the men through the Shipping Board. The services for which the crew was commended were rendered while the vessel was in a French port. There was urgent need not only for getting the cargo ashore, but the vessel had sustained some minor damage that made repairs necessary. Instead of awaiting the usual course of events the men set to work getting the cargo from the hold, and while one shift was doing this others set about making repairs. In this way the crew saved a delay which, General Pershing said, amounted to about a week. Their act also saved thousands of dollars. General Pershing wrote:

"I recommend that the extraordinary amount of work and efficiency shown by this crew should, if possible, be made known generally in such a way as to secure emulation."

OUR SUBMARINES OFF GERMAN BASES

ONLY ONE HAD TO RETURN

Then Set Out Again and Weathered Fourth Storm—Some Driven Far from Course.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—In the face of bitter Winter gales, American submarines, primarily designed for operations off the home coasts, have crossed the Atlantic to engage in the common fight against German U-boats. They are now aiding allied naval forces, as are American destroyers and American naval airmen, and they have been in the war zone for some months.

Secretary Daniels revealed the fact that the submarines had gone "over there" in his address at Cleveland Saturday at a Liberty Loan celebration, but gave no details. It is now possible, however, to tell for the first time of the mid-Winter passage of the boats across the seas in the face of the most severe weather known in years. In the perilous passages, the best traditions of the service have been maintained.

The first submarines to leave got under way in early Winter. Arrangements for the trip were made without a hint appearing in the papers, and, in fact, until Secretary Daniels spoke no word of the participation of the underwater boats in the war against Germany had been published.

The navy had some experience with long-distance work with submarines on which to draw. Boats have been sent to the Philippines, to Hawaii, and to Panama, but always in mild seasons of the year and with plenty of time for precautionary steps.

This time, however, they were to go in Winter, and a terrible Winter at that, with the Atlantic in its ugliest mood. The steps taken to get them across cannot be disclosed. But the fact that the department has no disaster to record is pointed to as proof of their sufficiency.

Officers and men of the submarines faced hard days as they put out. Cramped in narrow quarters and with storms in prospect they steered to sea with complete confidence in themselves and their boats. A laconic report of uneventful voyages bore out that confidence.

In mid-December others got started. While it was fair on sailing day, ahead of the submarines a 100-mile gale was brewing. Into it they plowed, rolling and tumbling. Details of the commander's reports have not been made public, but among the crews undoubtedly were men who recalled the first employment of the submarines at manoeuvers, when seasickness all but put the flotilla out of commission.

But there was no faltering. The boats were going to the front in real warfare this time. Even when towlines parted in some cases, unknown to the tugs and accompanying craft, the submarines battled forward alone. A majority of them reached their destination under their own power, ready for duty.

Some of the boats were driven far from their course. They showed up at different ports, but promptly put to sea again and reached their station.

One boat was the hard-luck vessel of the lot. Separated from the flotilla in the first storm and its compasses out of order, it turned homeward, only to strike two more gales in quick succession. However, it made port successfully and undamaged. With new fuel and supplies aboard and with a man or two, worn out by the long struggle with the elements, replaced, in a few days the boat put to sea again. It went through that time, despite a fourth gale it encountered.

Little has been said of the work of the British and French submarines in the U-boat hunt. They are playing a definite part, however, and lurking close to enemy bases. There has been encounters between submarines, some of which read like fiction. The service has been described as a trying one, for which men of courage and daring are needed. It is in this work, presumably, that the American submarines are engaged.

FORMS WAR LABOR BOARD.

President Puts Taft and Walsh at Head of Permanent Body.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Creation of a National War Labor Board to adjust all labor disputes during the war was proclaimed today by President Wilson, with its members the same men who recently framed the labor policy of the Government for the war period.

The board is headed by ex-President Taft, selected by employers, and Frank P. Walsh, selected by employes, representing the public.

Bayside Flier Wounded in France.

Special to The New York Times.

BAYSIDE, L. I., April 9.—Howard Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker of Bayside, has been slightly wounded in action in France, according to a telegram received by his parents from the War Department. He enlisted in the Canadian Flying Corps four months ago. He is 18 years old.

RAILROAD PUBLICITY CUT.

Advertising Limited by McAdoo to Actual Needs of Public.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Railroad publicity and advertising will be limited to information needed by the public, under orders issued today by Director General McAdoo.

"The custom of exploiting train service, pleasure or health resorts, and the like must be discontinued until further notice," said the order. "All forms of general advertising, such as pictures, calendars, wall maps, &c., must also be discontinued. Newspaper and other advertising must be confined to the giving of necessary information to the public.

"Timetable folders must be standardized, and distribution carefully checked to avoid waste. All advertising of luxurious trains, claims of superior service, and extraneous matter of every description must be eliminated and the folders made purely informative."

To work out standardized time tables a committee of three passenger agents from each of the three operating districts has been appointed, with A. L. Craig, General Passenger Agent of the Chicago Great Western, as Chairman.

Orders also went to the railroads today from Director General McAdoo to curtail expenditures by discontinuing many city freight and passenger ticket offices, or consolidating ticket offices, and by abandoning passenger travel solicitation and "off line" traffic offices.

Wilson to Address D. A. R.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—President Wilson will deliver a speech here next Monday at the opening of the annual congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The congress will be devoted largely to discussion of how women may help in the war.

$44,000,000 LOAN TO GREECE

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Greece will receive a loan of $44,000,000 from the United States as soon as the Greek Parliament has passed the necessary authorizing legislation, it was announced at the Treasury today.

The credit was arranged in Paris by Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and American representative on the Interallied Council. It was found necessary for the Greek Government to obtain special legislation before finally concluding an agreement.

Greece is the last of the allied belligerents in Europe to get a loan from the United States. A credit of $6,666,000 for Rumania was arranged several months ago, and a payment of $5,000,000 was made through Russia. Overthrow of the Kerensky Government prevented its delivery, and it was returned to the Treasury here. In view of the indefinite situation on the Rumanian front, the status of this loan has not been definitely determined.

Amends Draft to Exclude Neutrals.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The House today amended the draft law to exclude subjects of neutral countries who have declared their intention of becoming citizens of the United States. The measure goes to the Senate. Drafting of neutral subjects has been the cause of many protests to the State Department on the ground that it violated treaty agreements.

CREEL DENOUNCED IN HOUSE AND SENATE

Longworth Calls Unpreparedness Speech Most Unpatriotic Utterance of the War.

DEMANDS HIS RESIGNATION

Senator Johnson Declares Creel Is Not Fit to Participate in Prosecution of the War.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, was denounced in the Senate and the House of Representatives today for his statement yesterday before the National Conference of American Lecturers, that he would always be proud that this country had made no preparation for the war until President Wilson delivered the speech that made war inevitable. Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania were Mr. Creel's Senate critics, and Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio attacked him in the House, demanding his resignation.

In his speech Representative Longworth called Mr. Creel's statement of pride that America was unprepared before the war, the most "unpatriotic, un-American sentiment that has been uttered by an American citizen since this war began." He said that it would "delight only the Hindenburgs and those here who wished ill to America."

After he had read the extract of Mr. Creel's speech delivered yesterday, Mr. Longworth launched into the attack, and was greeted with prolonged applause, in which some Democrats joined.

"Let me read the most monstrous utterance any American citizen has uttered since we entered the war," said Mr. Longworth, as he quoted the extract from the speech by Mr. Creel before the Conference of Lecturers. "Can you believe that any American, especially a man connected with the Government, could have said this?"

"Read it; what is it?" shouted a Democratic member.

"I will read what Mr. Creel said. Here it is, quoted from an afternoon Washington newspaper: 'I will be proud to my dying day that my country was inadequately prepared when it entered the conflict. To have been prepared would have given the lie to everything we ourselves believed in and to our self-avowed position before the world.'

Sloane Calls It Damnable.

"I ask you to let that sink into your minds for a moment," added Mr. Longworth. "I never thought the day would come when a man who calls himself an American citizen, particularly when he holds a position of high importance in this Government, would publicly proclaim such sentiments as that."

"Who was it said that damnable thing?" asked Representative Sloane of Nebraska, who had entered the Chamber while Mr. Longworth was reading.

"Mr. Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information," answered the Ohio member. "I know of no instance up to now when the most craven pacifist ever went half so far. I have heard men since this war began apologize for our failure to prepare in some degree for the inevitable. I have heard some men condone this failure as a political necessity, but never before have I heard an American boast of it and glory in it.

"That is fine news, my colleagues, to send to our boys at the front. That is a message which will cheer the hearts of our brave allies. General Foch, in supreme command of the allied forces, no doubt will delight and glory with Mr. Creel upon the fact that America entered this war entirely unprepared. That brave Belgian King and General Joffre, who months ago came to us and begged for men and cannon; General Haig, and the Generals commanding the Italian armies will, of course, join Mr. Creel in his patriotic delight that this country is in the least possible degree able to render efficient assistance to the Allies in this greatest emergency that the world ever saw. And it is the emergency of today, my colleagues. It is the emergency of this particular drive that is now going on and not of something that may happen in the far distant future."

"Does not the gentleman think that von Hindenburg would also appreciate that sentiment?" asked Representative Denison of Illinois.

"I was about to enunciate that precise sentiment," Mr. Longworth replied. "The only individuals abroad to whom such a message will bring cheer are the commanders of the armies of the Central Powers, and the only men at home to whom it will bring cheer are those that wish ill to America.

"The only men that have a right to rejoice in the fact that America entered the war unprepared are the Kaiser, the Emperor Charles, von Hindenburg, von Ludendorff, and all their murderous crew."

Representative Madden of Illinois suggested that men who attended the conference held for the purpose of preparing lecturers for the Liberty Loan campaign would take, as a caption for their speeches, "Unpreparedness."

Would Censor Creel's Utterances.

"I sincerely hope there is no such ulterior motive behind this," Mr. Longworth continued. "I say that no such unpatriotic, un-American statement has been uttered by any American citizen since this war began. I repeat that the only men who have the right to join in this expression of delight at our failure to be at all prepared for this war are the Hindenburgs and Ludendorffs abroad and the I. W. W. and Bolsheviki at home.

"This was a peculiarly sinister utterance to go forth at such a time as this, this derision of the principle for which our late colleague, Augustus P. Gardner, a short time ago laid down his life. I hope to suggest that a very efficient censorship should be placed hereafter upon any utterances of this gentleman, and that future utterances on his part should come from him in a private capacity. This speech should receive the attention of those high in authority."

"If he uttered this in his private capacity, as a citizen of the United States, he might have been arrested, might he not?" asked Mr. Madden.

"I think very probably," Mr. Longworth answered. "He ought to have been. What Mr. Creel may think as Mr. Creel is a matter of absolutely no importance, but what he says in public in his capacity as Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, is of the highest importance, because the American people have the right to believe, to presume, that he represents the views of those higher up. Is it the view of those in high authority that it is a just cause for boasting that this country went into this war totally unprepared, with the necessary corollary that on the day this war is over we must at once reduce ourselves to a condition where we shall be totally unprepared to enforce a just and lasting peace? If that is not the view of those in high authority, then Mr. Creel should resign or be removed at once."

"Perhaps," suggested Representative Greene of Vermont, "Mr. Creel took in view the celebrated address made in this House when men who were advocating preparedness were told not to be nervous or hysterical."

"If the gentleman from Vermont is alluding to what I think he is, that same gentleman the other day made a fine appeal to the American people for 'force, force, force,' and yet on the very next day the Chairman of the Committee on Public Information advocates 'cowardice, cowardice, cowardice.'"

"I read this morning the language of the distinguished gentleman who presides over the Bureau of Public Information, Mr. George Creel. I read he stated, as has been adverted to before upon the floor during this debate, that he 'thanked God that this nation was not prepared for war when we entered the war a year ago.'

"I can imagine and you can imagine, too, the answer of the fathers and mothers of the land whose sons have gone over the sea today and are in the trenches of France with six brief months of preparation against a lifetime of preparation of their foes. These fathers and mothers answer just as you and I, I am sure, answer this remarkable utterance of a 'duly constituted authority of the United States.' We answer him, 'If you thank God our boys were unprepared when they entered this war, we feel you are not fit at this particular time to participate in the prosecution of this war in any regard.'

"Now the pith and point, as applied to this bill, is what? Yesterday a 'duly constituted authority of the United States Government' thanked God we were not prepared a year ago."

Senator Wolcott challenged Senator Johnson's statement that Mr. Creel was a "duly constituted" official of the Government. Senator Johnson read from the executive order appointing him.

"If you questioned validity of that appointment after this bill went into effect," added Senator Johnson, "you would subject yourself to imprisonment for twenty years."

Senator Penrose said Mr. Creel's utterance "betrays such a lack of good common sense that it is worthy of nothing but contempt."

"I do not see," said the Pennsylvania Senator, "why we should permit men like Mr. Creel, whose scurrilous and defamatory utterances on the Constitution were read in this body a few day ago, to be holding office, and publishing a publicity chronicle, when he is smeared all over with treason."

SHORT WEIGHT FOR NAVY.

Provision Merchant and Three Employes Are Found Guilty.

John Fitter, a provision merchant of 120 Bridge Street, Brooklyn, and three of his employes were found guilty in the United States District Court in Brooklyn yesterday for conspiracy to defraud the Government by delivering supplies of short weight and short count to the navy yard in Brooklyn and the navy barracks in City Park. It was testified that Fitter and his employes had caused the Government a loss of about $30,000 in the few months their contract had been running.

George B. Goodman, a yeoman in the navy, and Edward Will, the chief commissary steward at the barracks, also were named in the indictment, but they gave the evidence that resulted in the conviction of the four civilians and were turned over to the navy authorities for trial by court-martial. The conspiracy was discovered by E. R. Springer, a clerk in the Paymaster Corps, who reported to his superiors. The employes convicted were Moses Praeger, Joseph Katz, and Henry Wittohn. Judge Edwin Garvin will sentence the men on Thursday. The penalty is a fine of $1,000 or not more than two years in prison, or both.

WOMEN SEEKING RECRUITS.

Mayor's Committee Will Hold Meetings at Public Library.

The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense will open at the Fortieth Street entrance of the Public Library today a series of recruiting meetings for the Twenty-seventh Division, which is in need of 3,700 men. Mrs. Penrhyn Stanlaws has charge of the recruiting tent at the library and she will be assisted by prominent speakers and society women. The Rev. Dr. W. Norman Guthrie of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie will speak today. A program has been arranged which includes the Highland Bagpipers.

At a luncheon and meeting of the Advisory Board of the United States Junior Naval Reserve at the Bankers Club yesterday afternoon, resolutions were adopted on the death of Commodore Jacob W. Miller, Chairman of the board. Dr. William T. Hornaday, the President, in outlining the work of the Junior Naval Reserve, said:

"In the last two years we have trained over 8,000 boys for the navy and merchant marine. The service flag for the New York City training station alone shows 276 stars, most of these boys going into the navy." Among those at the luncheon were Felix Warburg, A. M. McGray, Edgar B. Lethbridge, J. P. Tams, William S. Kies, P. H. W. Ross, Clarence S. Weller, W. L. Finch, Percival Kuhne, and E. A. Oldham.

UPHOLD PUNISHMENT FOR SWIFT COMPANY

$3,750 PROFIT TO RED CROSS

Federal Food Administration Also Suspends Zinn & Co. for Seven Days.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The United States Food Administration ruled today that Swift & Co. must suspend all dealings in eggs in New York City for thirty days from midnight of April 10, and that Zinn & Co. of New York, brokers, through whom Swift & Co. purchased twelve carloads of cold storage eggs at excessive prices, must accept the same ruling for a period of seven days. It is further ordered that both corporations shall donate to the American Red Cross, Liberty bonds equivalent to the unjustified amounts involved in the transactions. In the case of Swift & Co. this amounts to $3,000 and for Zinn & Co. $750.

The charge against the big packing concerns was brought by the Federal Food Board of New York. An appeal was taken to the United States Food Administration, and the cases were reviewed here. This official announcement was made tonight by the Food Administration:

"There is no evidence that Swift & Co. were guilty of profiteering; but while they may not themselves have been profiteers, they bought twelve carloads of storage eggs from a profiteer at a price which they knew gave the seller an unreasonable profit, and with full knowledge that the Food Administration had ruled that the profit, and therefore the price, was unreasonable. By making the purchase they assisted the seller to profiteer, and, although they made no excessive profit themselves, they were the medium by which the excessive charge of the seller was passed along to the consumer.

"They evidently thought that the responsibility was upon the party who made the excessive charge, and not upon the party who paid it; but in as clear a case as this we shall not hesitate to penalize both parties.

"We therefore approve the findings of the Federal Food Board of New York and order Swift & Co. to suspend all dealings in eggs in New York City for a thirty-day period, beginning midnight, April 10, 1918, with such exceptions only as the Federal Food Board may deem necessary in the interest of the public. They are further ordered to apply to the purchase of Liberty bonds of the present issue a sum equal to the margin between the price paid for the eggs and their average selling price, without allowance for expense, and to turn over the Liberty bonds to the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross, furnishing to the Federal Food Board the chapter's receipt for the same, accompanied by the usual certificate that this contribution is not to affect in any way their future contributions to patriotic or charitable purposes.

"A copy of the foregoing judgment and order is to be posted conspicuously, under the direction of the Federal Food Board, upon the entrance of their place of business during the said thirty days.

"Zinn & Co. of New York City were the brokers through whom Swift & Co. purchased twelve carloads of storage eggs from Wood & Co. of Moulton, Iowa. The price paid leaves to Wood & Co. an excessive profit. The cost and reasonable profit margin upon eggs of this character had been the subject of much discussion by the egg trade of Chicago, Boston, and New York, in conjunction with the Food Administration. The results of this discussion and the rulings of the Food Administration were perfectly well known to all parties. Zinn & Co. made no excessive profit themselves, and it is evident that they felt that this fact relieved them from responsibility.

"We approve the findings of the Federal Food Board in this case, but prefer to change slightly the form of the penalty. Instead of thirty days' suspension from dealing in eggs, we direct a suspension from dealing in eggs in New York City of seven days beginning midnight April 10, 1918, but add that Zinn & Co. are to apply to the purchase of Liberty bonds of the present issue a sum equal to the full amount of their commission on this transaction and to turn over these bonds to the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross."

"The Swift & Co. policy is to observe all the regulations of the Food Administration. Any violation by the Swift & Co. of New York organization was entirely an unintentional offense, in that we paid too much for eggs. We are not charged with making excessive profits. We were profiteered against, and the price we paid was not above the prevailing market. We bought the eggs to take care of our trade and not to make an excessive profit."

SUSPENDS 19 BAKERIES.

Food Board Likely to Punish Forty Other Establishments.

As a warning to bakers who are inclined to disregard the wheat regulations of the United States Food Administration, the Federal Food Board yesterday suspended the business of nineteen bakery establishments for three days. In addition to these cases, there were forty others brought to the attention of the Bureau of Complaints yesterday. Hearings will be begun today on about 200 complaints received against bakers of the city during the last week. The bakers who were suspended yesterday were:

'CANNOT IGNORE' BOLO'S REVELATIONS

DRAMATIC NIGHT INTERVIEW

Visit to His Cell Promptly Followed by Countermanding of Death Arrangements.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 9.—The respite of Bolo Pacha on Sunday evening, almost at the very moment when his execution was being fixed for the next morning, has been ever since its announcement almost the sole topic of conversation in Paris and has eclipsed interest even in the pending resumption of the great battle itself.

It now becomes known that the respite was granted in exceptionally dramatic circumstances which might have been part of a modern motion-picture plot.

Sunday evening after Albert Salle, Bolo's counsel, had gone to the Elysée Palace and made an appeal to President Poincaré for mercy, the newspapers were informed that the appeal had been refused, and that the execution would take place "very shortly."

Meanwhile, the military authorities, in whose hands the arrangements lay, had arranged that Bolo should be shot at 6:15 Monday morning at the fort of Vincennes.

After his final interview with the President, however, M. Salle went back to the Santé Prison to inform Bolo of the result of his effort.

M. Salle is one of the best known men at the Paris bar. He was officially appointed by the court to defend Bolo, and it is known that he undertook the task with great reluctance. No fault can be found with him for the devotion with which he has carried out his unwelcome task, and probably one of his most unpleasant moments was when he had to tell Bolo that all hope must be abandoned.

What took place at this interview is unknown, but after an earnest talk of a half hour's duration M. Salle hastily left the prison and went to see M. Ignace, Under Secretary for Military Justice, and told him that Bolo wished to make an important statement in the interest of justice.

In the circumstances, as was natural, the authorities received the request with considerable skepticism, but toward 8 o'clock the same evening Lieutenant Jousselyn arrived at the prison and was immediately admitted to the prisoner's cell. Bolo was in a state of prostration and was lying on the bed, but as soon as Lieutenant Jousselyn entered he leaped to his feet and eagerly asserted his wish to make a statement.

Lieutenant Jousselyn and his clerk sat down at a small table in the cell, and for nearly an hour the condemned man dictated a carefully worded statement. The Lieutenant at first doubted Bolo's good faith, but as the prisoner began to reveal fact after fact and name after name he quickly excited the liveliest interest in his auditors.

When Bolo had finished speaking Lieutenant Jousselyn decided that his statement was sufficiently important to justify him in reporting it immediately to the judicial authorities, and by the latter's orders steps were promptly taken to countermand the arrangements for the execution. Telephone messages were sent to Vincennes and the execution was postponed indefinitely.

Yesterday morning a conference of the judicial authorities was held, and steps were decided upon for the purpose of verifying the statements made by Bolo. The same afternoon Lieutenant Jousselyn again saw Bolo in his cell and took down further details from his lips. Other interviews between Jousselyn and Bolo have taken place this morning and this afternoon.

So far no word has been allowed to leak out as to the nature of Bolo's revelations, but it is significant that M. Ignace asserts that Bolo has made statements of such gravity "that we cannot and must not ignore them."

The revelations are now generally regarded as much more important than they were first believed to be. Judicially Bolo's case is especially interesting from the fact that never within living memory has a prisoner been respited on the eve of execution for the purpose of making a statement of this nature.

ILLINOIS GETS AID IN CURBING SEDITION

Federal Agents to be Sent to State in Response to Governor Lowden's Appeal.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Federal co-operation in suppressing disloyalty and disorder in Illinois was promised today by Attorney General Gregory in response to a request from Governor Lowden. Special agents of the Department of Justice will be assigned to advise with State officials and aid in the conduct of investigations.

In announcing the Attorney General's decision, department officials let it be known that he was prepared to lend similar assistance to other States desiring it. Without new legislation, officials say, they are almost powerless to deal with disloyal utterances, the suppression of which they think is essential to the prevention of disorders, but the Federal agents are expected to accomplish something in co-operation with State authorities.

Lieutenant Governor John G. Oglesby of Illinois had long conferences today with Mr. Gregory and John Lord O'Brian, special assistant to the Attorney General for war work. He told them Federal aid was imperative to check increasing instances of mob violence against disloyalists, particularly in the mining districts of Southern Illinois.

While the recent lynching of a German at Collinsville, Ill., probably hastened the decision of the Illinois officials to seek Federal support, it is understood that any part the Department of Justice agents may play in investigating this particular case will be only incidental to a general plan of co-operation.

The Attorney General's representatives will report to Governor Lowden at Springfield for preliminary conferences before undertaking their work. There a general program probably will be mapped out.

BARES BERLIN ORDER FOR CIVIL WAR HERE

Dr. Sperry of Syracuse Produces Message Sent Out in 1915, Directing Disorder.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Professor Earl Sperry of Syracuse University, who for some months, in a Governmental capacity, has been investigating German propaganda in the United States, testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee today that the "German octopus" as he called it, had plotted to fasten its tentacles upon America and establish Germanism everywhere. Among other things, he said, the German Foreign Office had agents in Mexico to stir up war between that country and the United States.

The witness produced a document, obtained during his service with the Government which was promulgated by the German Foreign Office, and communicated to German Ambassadors, Ministers, and Consuls in neutral countries, on Feb. 23, 1915, revealing a plot to incite strikes, explosions, and even civil war, in the interest of Germany. This document, of which Dr. Sperry said there was no question as to its authenticity, was in the nature of a cable dispatch, and it read as follows:

"It is brought to your knowledge that in the countries where you are accredited that there have been founded special bureaus for organizing propaganda in the countries of the coalition at war with Germany. The propaganda will have for its aim the inception of social movements, accompanied by strikes, revolutionary explosions, separatist movements, and civil war, as well as an agitation in favor of disarmament and a cessation of this bloody war."

The Foreign Office instructions, Dr. Sperry said, gave incontrovertible proof that Germany wanted to embroil neutral nations in difficulties that would keep them out of the war against the Prussian autocracy. Dr. Sperry said the German Foreign Office worked through many organizations to spread its propaganda in the United States. Among these, he said, were the American Embargo Conference, the Friends of Peace, the American Neutrality League, the American Independence Union, the American Truth Society, and the Laborers' National Peace Council, the latter of which, Dr. Sperry said, was financed by Fritz von Rintelen, now in the custody of the Government. Von Rintelen had a fund of $500,000 at his disposal to influence legislators and organizations, Dr. Sperry declared, and he spent more than $390,000 of it in an effort to stir up labor agitation against America's war preparations. Dr. Sperry said that a large part of the money used by von Rintelen was spent through Jeremiah O'Leary.

Meant to Coerce Us.

"It will be noticed," Dr. Sperry explained, "that the German Government includes among its military measures separatist movements. The German-American movement in the United States, of which the heart and centre was the National German-American Alliance, was such a separatist movement. Its military significance lay in this, that in case of war between Germany and the United States the organized German-Americans were to persuade or coerce the Government of the United States to adopt policies favorable to Germany.

"The events in the United States since the war began prove that this general plan of the German Government has been carried out here. There have been formed at least six organizations which aim to serve the German Government by bringing pressure direct or indirect upon Congress.

"The American Embargo Conference is typical of these organizations. It was financed, as is proved by its cash books, by leading German-Americans of the Central Western cities. During the eleven months following June of 1915 it spent $57,000 for the purpose of influencing Congress.

"While the country has had much in the past to indicate the real aim of these organizations that sprang up here since 1914, their activities gain new and added significance when they are considered in the light of the dispatch from the German Foreign Office to the German diplomats in neutral countries."

Dr. Sperry testified that William Randolph Hearst bestirred himself in 1907 in an effort to establish an international German-American alliance, with the object of bringing about a close community of spirit between the United States and Germany. He produced a letter written by Mr. Hearst in German in October, 1907, to the German-American Alliance Conference in New York, offering to defray the expenses of ten or twelve delegates, to be appointed by the President of the Alliance, to go to Germany.

Mr. Hearst's Offer.

In the letter Mr. Hearst wrote:

The time has now come for the German-American National Alliance to broaden the field of its activities and to extend its hand to Germany so that both countries may go forward side by side on the path of progress. With this purpose in view it is desired to found an international German-American alliance, with a branch in Berlin, in order to promote an understanding of German art and German ideals in America, as well as the study of German social and economic relations and the most cordial political relations between the two countries. It is therefore proposed that this convention authorize the President to name a delegation of ten or twelve leading citizens who have this matter at heart in order during the year 1908 to go to Germany and to act in the interests of this great project.

Mr. Hearst promises to co-operate with this delegation and through his eight papers in five cities to make its purposes and its goal known to the Government and the people of the United States. In order further to meet the costs of this movement Mr. Hearst offers to pay all the expenses of the above-mentioned delegation, including such public functions as it participates in while in Europe.

Achtungsvoll, (very respectfully,)

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

"It was decided," Dr. Sperry said, "that the invitation should be considered at the following annual convention.

"The members of this convention were taken at Mr. Hearst's expense to visit the Germanic Museum at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., and they were his guests while there. During their stay, the President, Dr. O. J. Hexamer, sent the following telegram to the German Emperor:

"'The National German-American Alliance assembled in the Germanic Museum at Harvard sends cordial greetings with the hope for a permanent flourishing of friendly relations between the old and the new Fatherlands.'

"To this cablegram, the Emperor replied as follows:

"'I heartily thank the National German-American Alliance assembled in the Germanic Museum at Harvard for its friendly and patriotic greetings.

"'WILHELM, Imperator, Rex.'"

The German propaganda, Dr. Sperry said, "was worked through churches, both Catholic and Protestant, in the United States.

"Church societies were at work instilling ideas of Germanism in communities," said the witness. "The propagandists also used the schools. There are 491 German schools in the United States."

ARREST EXPORTER AS ENEMY ALIEN

MANY DOCUMENTS SEIZED

Kuhlmann, the Authorities Suspect, Has Long Worked Through an Emissary in Switzerland.

With the arrest of Gustave Kuhlmann, General Manager for the import and export house of Crayen & Co. of 81 New Street, the Federal authorities believed yesterday that they had finally found a secret channel through which Germany has been able to obtain information concerning economic and commercial conditions in this country. Kuhlmann was taken in custody by officials of the Department of Justice yesterday and locked in the Tombs as a dangerous enemy alien, there to remain pending an investigation of evidence tending to show a violation of the Trading with the Enemy act.

In Kuhlmann's possession the Government authorities found documents and papers which, in their opinion, indicated that he was accustomed to supply Germany with information concerning commercial conditions here, through an emissary in Lucerne, Switzerland, whose real name was Ludwig Fahl, but whose assumed name was Louis Farley.

Under the name Farley, and under the guise of being an American citizen, the officials have discovered that this emissary was able to have remittances of 2,000 and 3,000 francs transmitted to him by Kuhlmann through the American Consul in Lucerne. According to the Federal authorities, Kuhlmann, himself posing as an American citizen, used the name George Coleman, and carried on all his secret correspondence under that name.

The officials of the Department of Justice intend to make a close investigation of the firm of Crayen & Co. It was said yesterday that the head of the firm, George A. Crayen, was at the present time a resident of Germany, and his partner and brother, William Crayen, was established somewhere in Switzerland.

Before the war the firm was an importer and exporter of novelties. Since the war it has turned its operations to surgical wares and neo-salvarsan. Kuhlmann is 40 years old and lived in Brooklyn.

The officials of the Department of Justice interested themselves at once in the papers and documents found in his possession not only for the facts that they might reveal concerning the transmission of information by German agents in this country to their home Government, but also for the identities they might possibly reveal of persons who had long been under suspicion as being active in German propaganda.

Kuhlmann himself made no statement yesterday. It is suspected by the authorities that he has been sending information to Germany through Switzerland ever since the United States entered the war. Up to a late hour yesterday the collection of evidence against Kuhlmann had not been completed, but within a day or two the Department of Justice expects to be in a position to say definitely whether Kuhlmann will be prosecuted under a charge of violating the act which prohibits trading with the enemy.

390 SHIPS CARRY MEN AND SUPPLIES

United States Has Been Able to Put 2,762,605 Tons Into War Service.

TOTAL WILL GROW STEADILY

Japan's Ships Will Be Added This Summer, Making It Over 3,000,000 Tons.

ROUTING MORE EFFICIENT

Interallied Board's Work Has Added 20 Per Cent. in a Month—U-Boat Menace No Longer Feared.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—By restricting imports, withdrawing ships from the less necessary trade channels, and obtaining neutral tonnage by agreement the United States has been able to put 2,762,605 tons of shipping into the transatlantic servive to carry men and munitions to France. Of this 2,865,344 tons are under American registry, the remainder beings ships operated by private interests and neutral tonnage. There are in all 390 ships, of which 322 are of American registry.

It was said today that the shipping situation, from the viewpoint of the United States, was more favorable than at any time since the nation entered the war. The tonnage now in service includes only a small part of the 500,000 or more tons of Dutch ships which were requisitioned. It is believed that the 3,000,000-ton mark will be reached when all of the Dutch shipping available for oversea service is in use.

To this tonnage will be added gradually the 250,000 tons which Japan has promised during the Summer months and the ships now under construction in this country which are nearing completion. Later Japan will add another 200,000 tons or more which is to be built.

All of the shipping now available to the United States is being routed and loaded by the Interallied Ship Control Committee of which P. A. S. Franklin is Chairman. The increased efficiency which has been obtained by this committee during the last thirty days, it is said, has added 20 per cent. to the service given by the fleet or the equivalent of 400,000 in figures of tonnage, over the February service.

Reports received from the shipyards lately have not been unfavorable, and it is believed that the April deliveries will set a new record, despite the delays in supplies and transportation troubles.

Apparently there is a general feeling of optimism over the situation and a conviction that the fleet available for transatlantic service will be gradually increased despite the best efforts of the German submarines. Barring some disaster in the shipyards it seems positive that the point has been reached where Germany cannot hope to cut down the total amount of tonnage which the United States is now able to use in transit to Europe and must instead accept the verdict that the fleet will steadily grow in proportions.

The Ship Control Committee also has the power to route tonnage under the control of Great Britain and the other allied nations the tonnage of which is not given in the figures quoted above. Every energy is being put forward to add to the efficiency of this tonnage as well as by providing better facilities for loading and unloading and a system of routing which will put an end to delays which have proved serious in the past.

FINDS 'APACHE' BAND HERE.

Five Alleged Members Are Questioned by District Attorney.

The District Attorney's campaign against the sale of liquor to soldiers and sailors was interrupted yesterday by the discovery by Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith of an interesting novelty of the underworld in a band of "Apaches," who came here direct from Paris. This discovery was due to a young woman taken in the raids on Sunday morning. She said that she was a Belgian, had been in Liége during the attack on that city, had escaped into France, and made her way into this country with an "Apache" who has held her in fear of her life ever since. Five alleged "Apaches" were taken to the District Attorney's office to be questioned after the girl told her story, and were detained overnight at Police Headquarters. Assistant District Attorney Smith said the men are suspected of several thefts and hold-ups. If they are found to be French citizens, they may be deported to France for military service.

District Attorney Swann declared yesterday that his campaign against resorts east of Broadway, between Forty-fifth and Fifty-fifth Streets would be continued until he was satisfied that all places there selling liquor to men in uniform had been closed. Judge Swann said:

"Conditions in this city are better than they were before Commissioner Enright took charge. He is a fine executive, and has made good progress in bettering conditions. We are combating vice and gambling, which grew and flourished under the preceding administration. We have had the full co-operation of the police."

TRANSIT EMPLOYES URGE 6-CENT FARE

Ask Service Board to Grant It So Interborough Can Pay a Higher Wage.

TOLD TO SEE THE MAYOR

Representatives of the Brotherhood of New York Railways Company Employes Association, led by T. M. Fazakerley, the association's President, called on Chairman Straus of the Public Service Commission yesterday and asked him to help the employes get an increase in pay when the present agreement with the company expires on Aug. 31. This association was organized during the long strike of the surface railroad employes in 1916, and it was so fair in its efforts to reach an adjustment of the difficulties at that time that its relations with the company and with Theodore P. Shonts, the company's President, became very cordial.

In his suggestion to the Mayor that all of the surface and rapid transit lines in the city be permitted to increase the fare to 6 cents, Mr. Shonts said that in September the company would be called upon to increase wages, but there was no intimation in yesterday's talk with Mr. Straus that the committee had previously discussed the matter with Mr. Shonts or that the committee waited upon Mr. Straus, and will probably wait later upon the Board of Estimate, at Mr. Shonts's suggestion. At any rate the matter of more wages has been transferred to the Mayor and to the other members of the Board of Estimate, and for the present is safely out of the hands of Mr. Shonts.

Mr. Fazakerly issued a statement in which he said his association had no intention of not keeping the agreement made two years ago with the company, that with the war came an additional burden upon the employes, and that the company had also to carry a much heavier load than formerly.

The committee announced its intention of taking up with the Mayor and the Board of Estimate the matter of a modification of the company's franchise. The Mayor, in letters to Mr. Shonts, has clearly intimated that he was unalterably opposed to any increase in fares.

FORCED LABOR BILL PASSED

One of Sixty-Odd Measures Put Through by Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—The Assembly in a seven-hour session today passed sixty-odd bills, including the bill of Assemblyman Cowee of Rensselaer County providing for requisitioning by the Governor of the labor of able-bodied males between 18 and 60 years who are not engaged in a lawful and useful occupation. The bill requires the Governor to designate by proclamation the industries and occupations affected on or before June 1 next. All men subject to its provisions must register with the Sheriff. The State Industrial Commission is to requisition men as needed.

Assemblyman McElligott's bill making disloyal utterances during the war a misdemeanor was recommitted on motion of Majority Leader Adler. Objection was made to the form of the bill.

Senator Argetsinger's bill moving primary day two weeks ahead by placing it on the ninth Tuesday before election day and providing that balloting may be held by soldiers within twenty days, instead of ten days, prior to the general election was passed. Other changes are made in the election laws to facilitate taking of the soldier vote.

The Assembly passed the Drug Committee's bill to regulate the sale and distribution of habit-forming drugs. A Department of Control is created, to be headed by a Commissioner, named by the Governor for a six-year term, at $6,000 a year.

By a vote of 188 to 22, the Assembly passed the Welsh bill requiring the Military Training Commission to furnish boys over 16 years with certificates of enrollment for military training. No boy between 16 and 19 may attend a public or private school or be employed without such a certificate unless exempted by the commission.

DEFEAT IN SENATE FOR WEST SIDE BILL

But Ottinger Measure Will Be Brought Up Again for Final Battle.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—Denounced as a "grab," and an attempt on the part of the New York Central to "steal" priceless property on the North River waterfront, the Ottinger bill, which provides for a commission of nine to reach a settlement of outstanding differences between New York City and the railroad company in connection with the proposed west side terminal improvement, was defeated in the Senate today by three votes short of the required Constitutional majority of twenty-six.

The action of the Senate, however, is not final, and undoubtedly the Ottinger bill will figure in another fight before the end of the week, when the legislative session is scheduled to adjourn sine die. Senator Ottinger, immediately the result of the roll call had been announced, moved for a reconsideration of the vote and that this motion be temporarily tabled. Minority Leader Robert F. Wagner, who had led the fight against the bill, clamored for immediate action on the motion, but was defeated when three Republican Senators—Lockwood, Murphy, and Thompson—who had voted with the Democrats against the bill, voted with Senator Ottinger on the motion. This will enable the bill to be brought up at any time, and advocates of the measure say they have succeeded in obtaining a sufficient number of votes to insure its passage.

After disposing of the Ottinger bill the Senate by unanimous vote concurred in an Assembly bill appropriating $100,000 for the expenditures of the Harbor Commission appointed by Governor Whitman to act in concert with a similar commission from New Jersey in devising ways and means for the improvement of New York Harbor facilities.

In amended form and under an emergency message from the Governor, the Fearon bill to provide two days for local option elections in thirty-nine cities of the State passed the Senate tonight. Provision is also made in the amendments submitted by Senator J. Henry Walters of Syracuse for police protection of the ballots over night. Appointment of two watchers each by the drys and wets is permissible. The bill goes back to the Assembly, where favorable action is expected tomorrow. Governor Whitman will sign it immediately.

Beerfelde Said to Have Sent Copies to Crown Prince and Ludendorff.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—The Lichnowsky disclosures continue to be much discussed by the German press. The Vorwärts denies the report that Captain Beerfelde was arrested for distributing copies of the Lichnowsky letters, and says that Beerfelde, who was decorated with the Iron Cross, returned from the war owing to his pacifist inclinations, and that last Fall he first learned of the Lichnowsky letters at the house of Geheimrat Witting.

The paper declares that Beerfelde without Witting's knowledge had several copies printed and sent to the Crown Prince, General Ludendorff, and well-known leaders with the idea of propagating the truth. He was then arrested on the charge of disobeying orders of his senior, but afterward was proved not guilty and liberated.

Beerfelde then brought an action against his senior officer with serious accusations, and was thereupon again arrested. The paper declares his arrest was not on the charge of circulating the Lichnowsky letters.

News for Book Buyers

The Spring Number, The New York Times Review of Books, next Sunday, will give a list of 300 leading books of the season, reviews by Professor Brander Matthews, Professor James H. Hyslop, Percy Grainger, and Bliss Carman of the more important publications. News of authors and publishers, essays on notable topics of interest to readers and book lovers—a choice feast of literary delicacies for all who appreciate the output of the master minds of the age.

In 1917 the advertising of publishers in The New York Times reached a total of 619,708 agate lines, and exceeded the combined totals of three other New York morning newspapers making a feature of book advertising.

TO MELT $250,000,000 INTO SILVER BULLION

Use of Treasury Reserve to Pay Trade Balances Proposed to Congress.

HAS BACKING OF McADOO

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Melting into bullion of not more than 250,000,000 silver dollars now in the Treasury for sale and export to pay trade balances and repurchase of silver at $1 an ounce are proposed in an Administration bill introduced today by Senator Pittman of Nevada as an emergency war measure. Silver certificates would be withdrawn from circulation as the dollars were taken from the Treasury, and Federal Reserve Bank notes of new $1 and $2 denominations substituted.

If enacted the measure virtually would fix a standard price for silver at $1 an ounce, several cents above the present market, and stabilize the world market, since the United States produces almost half of the total. The bill also is intended to stimulate silver production, and to use the Treasury's reserve stocks of that metal, instead of gold, to settle this country's commercial trade balances in the Orient and elsewhere.

In anticipation of action by Congress, Raymond T. Baker, Director of the Mint, has formulated an agreement with silver producers and dealers to sell to the Government at the $1 rate. The probable result would be for the Government to absorb the country's entire output, about 74,000,000 ounces last year. Officials have stated they would make arrangements to supply quantities of silver to jewelers and manufacturers requiring it.

The bill would permit the Secretary of the Treasury to fix the selling price of the Government's silver, but it is assumed this would be not less than $1. India, China, and Japan need silver most for coinage, and quantities also might be exported to South American countries and European neutrals whose trade balances are against the United States. India's requirements would be negotiated through Great Britain.

Small Reserve Bank Notes.

The Treasury now holds 491,000,000 silver dollars, containing about 376,000,000 ounces of silver. In withdrawing silver certificates based on this coin an effort probably would be made to take bills of denominations of $5 and more, leaving the $1 and $2 bills, which are now in great demand.

To guard against contracting circulation, however, Senator Pittman's bill would provide for the issuance of Federal Reserve Bank notes, of which only $11,670,000 are in circulation, in smaller denominations than the present $5 minimum. Federal Reserve Bank notes are virtually the same as national bank notes, but the special notes would have a slightly different basis, consisting of Treasury certificates of indebtedness, or one-year gold notes. Arrangements would be made for the Federal Reserve Board to force withdrawal of these when the silver was replaced in the Treasury. No more could be issued at any time than the face value of silver taken from the Treasury.

Secretary McAdoo wrote to Senator Pittman supporting the bill as a war measure, although he suggested there might be a wide difference of opinion on the best methods of replacing silver certificates with other currency. His letter follows in part:

"The price of silver has varied from about 48½ cents per fine ounce, at which price it sold during August, 1915, to $1.18 per fine ounce during September, 1917. The European war has greatly enlarged the demand for silver. The Orient is willing to accept silver in place of gold for commodities furnished by them, and it is to the interest of the United States and its allies that foreign trade balances should, as far as possible, be settled in silver, rather than in gold. The gold in this country and in the hands of its allies is needed as a base for the enormous credit structure it is necessary to erect in the process of placing Government loans, and every ounce of silver that can be used in the settlement of foreign balances is so much gained.

"It is better to settle trade balances by shipping silver than to make arrangements for stabilizing exchange, where these are possible, as they are not in the Orient, because these exchange arrangements, whatever their form, always mean a deferred demand for gold, while the settlement of foreign balances in silver is a definitive settlement, calling for no future adjustments. Further, the unprecedented business activity in this country has caused an unusual demand for silver for subsidiary coinage, the needs of the United States for this purpose during the present year being greater than ever before, amounting, as they do, to approximately 21,250,000 ounces.

To Borrow Silver from Treasury.

"The proposition is, in brief, to retire silver certificates, to borrow from the Treasury the silver for use for the war purposes above set forth, and then, as silver from time to time in the future comes on the market, to replace the silver so borrowed by purchase in the market at the fixed price of $1 per fine ounce, and to replace the borrowed silver by coining the new silver acquired for that purpose into standard silver dollars. There is no limit of time within which this must be done.

"The cost of producing silver, like the cost of producing all other commodities, has greatly increased. Labor is receiving very much higher wages than during normal times. Machinery is more expensive, and the chemicals and other supplies needed in the production of silver are all correspondingly higher in price. The price at which the silver is to be rebought has been fixed in the proposed bill at $1 per ounce. This price was arrived at after an examination by the Director of the Mint into the cost of producing silver, in a number of different mines, and the Director of the Mint is of the opinion that $1 per fine ounce, under all the conditions at present prevailing, is a fair price. The silver released through the retirement of silver certificates will be sold by the Secretary of the Treasury for the war purposes stated, at a price that will permit him without loss to rebuy, at the price of $1 an ounce, the silver thus sold.

"The proposed measure is unquestionably in the interest of the country as a whole for the prosecution of the war. It proposes no permanent change in our existing currency arrangements. What is proposed is a temporary change, consisting of the active use for war purposes of the silver now lying inert in the Treasury. The bill provides within itself the steps necessary to reverse that position and to replace and recoin the silver.

"The popular and well-found feeling against a bond-secured currency does not apply to the present issue, because (1) the issue is strictly temporary in its nature, (2) the security behind the issue automatically provides for the redemption of the issue, (3) no artificial value is given to any long-time bonds by the circulation privilege, and no vested interest is created in the circulation privilege, which, if created, it might prove burdensome for the Government or the banks to abate."

No silver dollars have been coined since 1904. Determination on the part of Treasury officials to urge the fixing of a silver price resulted from the erratic fluctuations of the silver market. A conference of Western Senators, silver producers, and Treasury officials recently discussed the subject at length, with the idea of $1 an ounce as a pair price.

Recent Price of 91 Cents.

The Government has been paying 91 cents an ounce for silver for some time, while quotations as high as 95 cents for "spot" metal have been quoted here. The price has been moving upward steadily for the last month, starting from around 85 cents.

The establishment of a quotation of $1 an ounce in the proposed law did not bring surprise to local silver merchants. The prediction had been adhered to ever since negotiations between Government authorities and silver producers began last Autumn over the 1918 output that a price of $1 would be necessary to keep production at a high level.

SCHOLA CANTORUM SINGS.

Folksongs of Europe and America—People's Liberty Chorus.

War bonds were on sale in Carnegie Hall during the concert of the Schola Cantorum last evening, and after the men's division of the choir had sung Jan Sibelius's remarkable "Song of Exile" in fighting rhythms of 4's and 6's, Mr. Schindler introduced a speaker, Brooks Leavitt, who called for volunteers for the People's Liberty Chorus, which will meet at the High School of Commerce in West Sixty-fifth Street and will not only sing at Liberty Loan meetings, but will hold a festival at the completion of the loan.

Folksongs of Europe and America made up the program of the Schola, which opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner." Among a Russian group was a "Ballad of the Kremlin," arranged by Schindler, while Josef Suk's Slavonic songs for women's chorus included one, "The Wish to Wed," of special charm, and the men's chorus made a fine effect in the Finnish national epic, "Kalevala," represented by a "Song of Kullervo," and in Palmgren's "Finnish Lullaby."

The American airs, beginning with Harvey Loomis's "Sun Worshippers," to a Zuni Indian melody, included also Howard Brockway's "Brother Green, or the Dying Soldier," from the Kentucky mountains, and Mrs. Natalie Curtis Burlin's "God's a-Gwine ter Move All de Troubles Away," from Carolina, with baritone solo by H. T. Burleigh. Mr. Burleigh amid great applause also sang his own negro spiritual "Deep River."

INDIAN SONGS AT CONCERT.

C. W. Cadman and Tsianina Redfeather Appear with Schumann Club

Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer of "Shanewis," played his intermezzo from that opera and an excerpt from another, "The Thunder Bird," that he has written in collaboration with Norman-Bel Geddes, at a concert of the Schumann Club last evening in Aeolian Hall. Tsianina Redfeather, the Indian singer, gave the "Canoe Song" from "Shanewis," with other native melodies arranged by Thurlow Lieurance and Carlos Troyer.

The Schumann Club, led by Percy Stephens, produced Deems Taylor's humming version of a Bach air for women's voices, some spirituals such as "Go Down, Moses" and "Sinner, Please Doan Let Dis Harves' Pass," arranged by H. T. Burleigh, and four of Cadman's songs arranged by Victor Harris, including "The White Dawn," "The Moon Drops Low," and "Indian Mountain Song," and the famous "Land of the Sky-Blue Water."

ART NOTES.

Olive Tilton is showing portraits and miniatures at the Scott & Fowles Gallery. A note in the catalogue of the exhibition states that for the duration of the war Mrs. Tilton is donating the entire proceeds derived from portrait orders to the Red Cross. Her portraits are painted with a sprightly ease of execution, and are charming in color, the high key suggesting delicacy and brightness without the crumbling chalky look that too often accompanies a blond palette. The poses are graceful and the heads have a convincing look of likeness, but time could be well spent in mastering the construction of the figure. The hands and arms and feet are wooden, which goes far toward counteracting the pleasant lifelike vivacity of the general effect.

Plans of the Society of Independent Artists Changed.

Owing to war conditions the Society of Independent Artists has not been able to secure a tent for the exhibition at the Moorish Gardens. However, a very much more satisfactory plan has been arranged. Two large stores together at 112 and 114 West Forty-second Street, between Broadway and Sixth Avenue, have been rented, and will be fitted to accommodate the exhibition at the same date as was arranged at first, April 20 to May 12. One entire store front will be converted into an immense doorway, the other flanked on each side with decorations extending the height of one story, which is the height of the building. One of the decorations will be painted by William Zorach. Beginning with the 12th, pictures will be received at the above address, and in case of mistake there will be a man stationed at the Moorish Gardens to receive pictures sent there by artists unaware of the change.

High School Girls' Art Work Shown.

Art student work of the girls of the New York high schools is being exhibited in the Hall of Forestry of the American Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh Street and Central Park West, and will continue for the remainder of the month. The work was done under the direction of James P. Haney, Director of Art in the High Schools.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Lillian Lorraine has been engaged for the Ziegfeld "Midnight Frolic" on the New Amsterdam roof, and will make her debut there on April 22.

A new play entitled "A Friendly Divorce," written by Tadema Bussiere, will be tried out by the Cecil Spooner stock company next week at the Grand Opera House in Brooklyn.

Beatrice Terry, niece of Ellen Terry, will be seen as Ophelia in the Shakespeare Playhouse's production of "Hamlet," to be made at the Cort on Friday afternoon.

Yvette Guilbert will give a recital at the Neighborhood Playhouse, in Grand Street, on Saturday night, and Edith Wynne Matthison will present scenes from "As You Like It" and "Romeo and Juliet" on Sunday night.

THE TERRIBLE ARMY AND ITS BANNERS

BILLY SUNDAY KNOCKED OUT

Julia Manners	Adrienne Morrison
Job Limp	Wallace Erskine
Timothy Hodge	Edmund Gurney
Tommy Trail	Ernest Anderson
Pomeroy Wragg	Walter Kingsford
Dafty	Henry Herbert

If we grasp the symbolism of Charles Rann Kennedy's new play, what the world needs today is not the terror of hell fire, so prominently and profitably exploited by Billy Sunday, but the simple faith, pure hope, and modest good works of an earlier Christianity. To convey this message he has written a play in five acts which he calls a comedy.

Miss Matthison appears as an ancient and apparently senile gentlewoman with white hair and palsied hands, who is spending a vast fortune in good works, having converted a Gothic Nunnery of the thirteenth century into an orphanage. She is surrounded by a group of associates, whose religion is of the conventional order, and deeply tinged with worldliness. For her edification they have hired a revivalist of the Billy Sunday model. To her simple mind what they promise is the second coming of Christ, and in the glow of enthusiasm with which this hope fills her she is rejuvenated. Her white hair becomes golden and her palsied hand becomes firm.

The "great scene" of this comedy occurs when Billy Sunday, alias Tommy Trail, arrives in football breeches and sweater and leaps in circles about the gentle pietist, endeavoring to strike into her heart the terror of hell fire. He does it with a vocabulary in which football field, barroom, and Puritan theology mingle on even terms. Shocked and chilled at first by the form which this supposed second advent assumes, the good lady rises by degrees to a mood of exalted religious feeling in which the coming of the true spirit is manifested.

A curious atmosphere of lunacy weighs upon the play, which, as it seems, is only in part intended. Never for a moment do any of the characters converse. They stand together on the stage and speak their minds quite irrespective of one another. For mortal hours it is like listening to the confessions of the madhouse.

The Man of the Past utters conservatism interlarded with reference to his ailing liver, which his gestures locate somewhere in the lumbar region. The Man of the Present divides his remarks between small considerations of thrift and the pain in his stomach. The Lady of Good Motives apportions her time between complaining of the macaroons dispensed to the children of the orphanage and lamenting the collywobbles induced in her own child by midnight lobster. All this means something—something momentous, portentous, and not at all difficult to guess.

Most meaningful of all was the Man Out of Time, and in his case those who find sport in chasing the wild, untamed Symbol can get a run for their money. When he said that to save your own soul you must forget it and crack jokes at the universe, the white scut of an idea was visible in the jungle; but when he professed to have died, explored hell and returned, one did not wonder that William Sunday shied at him.

Miss Matthison was very charming, whether white-haired or blonde, and she conveyed with notable intensity the effect of simple piety and spiritual fervor. As the religious jokester, Henry Herbert made up for any obscurity in his lines by his quaint and high-spirited characterization. As the Billy Sunday man, Ernest Anderson roused the audience to its one moment of hearty delight and enthusiasm.

The title is from The Song of Solomon, who alleged that his lady was "clear as the sun and terrible as an army with banners." Mr. Kennedy's play is very far from equaling this lady in clarity; but there are many people, including all men in the street, for whom an army with banners has nothing on it in the matter of schrecklichkeit.

Bills for Last Week of Opera.

The Metropolitan yesterday announced its closing nights of opera this season, including a gala farewell for Caruso on Friday evening of next week in "L'Elisir d'Amore," and a last matinée the next day for Farrar in "Tosca." Miss Farrar also sings a special "Carmen" next Wednesday afternoon, while Mr. Caruso and others will take part in an extraordinary benefit concert for Italian soldiers on Sunday night.

The twenty-third and final week opens Monday with the triple bill, "Shanewis," "L'Oracolo," and "The Dance in Place Congo." Caruso sings Wednesday evening in "L'Amore dei Tre Re." Barrientos will be heard Thursday in "The Barber of Seville," followed by "The Dance in Place Congo." A final popular Saturday night, April 20, will be played before the company goes to Boston.

Maurice Dambois's Last Recital.

Maurice Dambois, the Belgian 'cellist, gave a farewell recital yesterday afternoon at Aeolian Hall. He was heard in a sonata of Geminiani, Boellmann's "Symphonic Variations," and pieces by Glazounow, Cui, and Davidoff, Bach, Schumann, Popper, and Rubin Goldmark. Marcel Charlier assisted at the piano.

Women to Dine with Democratic Club

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, will represent the National Administration at the annual dinner of the National Democratic Club in celebration of the 175th birthday of Thomas Jefferson, which will be held on Saturday night at the Hotel Astor. Other speakers will be Henry F. Hollis, United States Senator from New Hampshire, and Abram I. Elkus, former Ambassador to Turkey. For the first time in the history of the club women will be seated on the main floor with members and their guests.

Today, after spending nearly two weeks in New York City, Mr. D. W. Griffith will depart for Los Angeles.

After laboring for 18 months, after travelling thousands of miles across the seas to the battlefields of France, after spending more than EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, Mr. Griffith at last saw the realization of his great achievement when the Public of New York rose in their seats, cheered his great drama of love and war to the echo, applauded it as the greatest of all screen masterpieces, and gave him the reward of appreciation which is so dear to the heart of the Artist.

Mr. Griffith cannot leave New York without expressing to the public of this city his deep gratitude at the reception accorded his great work, and the love and affection he will henceforth have for the great Metropolis which so abundantly is showing its actual appreciation in CROWDED HOUSES and THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE TURNED AWAY AT EVERY PERFORMANCE.

Mr. Griffith desires, therefore, to convey to all his friends, to his well-wishers, and to the Great Public, his heartfelt thanks.

WALTER DISCARDS THRILL IN NEW PLAY

In "Nancy Lee" He Has Written a Drama Closely Akin in Theme to "The Easiest Way."

Miss Nancy Lee	Charlotte Walker
Mr. Lee	Clarence Handyside
Miss Grace Lee	Rosalie Mathieu
Mrs. Lee	Pauline Duffield
Douglas Wreford	Ralph Kellard
Andrews	Charles MacDonald
Molly Day	Jobyna Howland
Kittie Graham	Charlotte Carter
Ethel Drayton	Judith Voss
Johnny Boland	A. S. Byron
Anthony Weir	Lewis Stone
Alice	Marie Pettes
Mrs. O'Neill	Blanche Moulton
Process Server	David Adler

"Nancy Lee," which was played for the first time at the Hudson last night, marks a sharp turn in the playwriting career of Eugene Walter. Mr. Walter's recent Broadway offerings have been of the spinal column school, in which the thrill, and the thrill alone, was wooed; now, however, he goes back to "The Easiest Way" for a play closely akin to that piece in theme, and containing a number of characters from the same social stratum, albeit they are not quite so bad.

In place of Laura Murdock, then, we have Nancy Lee—embarking upon a life which presents no surface similarities to that of Laura, but which, as the author points out in a prologue, is really the same. Nancy, unlike Laura, marries her man—marries him because she has been equipped by her training for no career other than marriage, because it is an alliance which will enable her parents and sister to keep up appearances a little longer in their Southern home, and because there is nothing else to do. At heart she is bitter, but she goes through with her bargain.

The life with the wastrel husband is not shown; the first act, eight years after the prologue, finds the husband dead, his estate a myth, and Nancy trying to go through with the life into which the companionship of her husband's friends has thrown her. It is in the depiction of this life that Mr. Walter's duplication of "The Easiest Way" is most marked; Brockton, man about town of "The Easiest Way," is reproduced in the Boland of "Nancy Lee," and his chorus girl associate becomes Molly Day, equally given to a worldly viewpoint and frequent "My Gods!"

Even here, however, Nancy does not abandon herself to the life as did Laura. There are, to be sure, unchaperoned yachting parties and motor trips, but through them all Nancy holds herself aloof. The first act finds her, in her financial extremity, accepting money from a callow youth without knowing that he has stolen it. The disclosure brings her face to face with a lifelong friend of the youth's father, who straightens things out, applies many harsh names to Nancy, and effectually arouses her to a sense of right and wrong.

He also demands that she return the money advanced, or its equivalent, and goes so far as to call upon her the following day to receive it. Nancy duly makes the proffer of goods equal to the amount desired, but, needless to say, it is not accepted. Her sincerity begins to be evident, even to the doubting friend of father, and the interview ends by an offer of assistance. The final act is devoted to a somewhat overlong arrival at a happy ending.

All of this is told in straightforward and interesting style by Mr. Walter, and the play, while it does not begin to challenge "The Easiest Way" in its searching qualities, contains many well-drawn characters and is in general true to the life which it represents. If the piece has any conspicuous defect as an evening's entertainment, it is probably that the peak of interest is reached early in the play, and that from that point there is a slow but none the less steady decline. Of the play's popularity, however, there can be no reasonable doubt.

The acting is for the most part all that it should be. Charlotte Walker has the long and trying title rôle, and does well with it, particularly in its emotional moments. She will be better in the lighter moments when she conquers a tendency to oversmile. Lewis Stone gives a well-sustained performance as the guardian who ends by marrying Nancy, and Ralph Kellard, as the love-mad youth, also is satisfactory. Jobyna Howland, with most of the comedy lines to speak, overplays a trifle as the worldly friend. A good bit is done by David Adler, as a process server.

SIGNS ANTI-BRIDGE BILL.

ALBANY, April 9.—Governor Whitman today signed the Sage-Welsh bill to prevent the erection by the New York Central Railroad of a bridge with midstream piers in the Hudson River near Castleton.

Several business organizations in Boston and other New England cities had expressed opposition to the bill on the ground that any delay in the construction of the proposed bridge would interfere with shipments of freight to New England territory. Supporters of the bill argued that the piers would be a menace to navigation and would aggravate ice gorge and flood conditions in Spring.

INDICTED FOR RACE RIOTS.

Congressional Inquiry at East St. Louis Causes Grand Jury Action.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., April 9.—Five indictments resulting from the recent Congressional inquiry into the East St. Louis race riots have been returned by the Federal Grand Jury at Cairo, Ill., it was learned today.

The indictments are based on the testimony of Myrtle Gardner, who said she had been held as a white slave at a hotel here.

BRITAIN'S MAN-POWER.

The supreme and compelling reason for raising the conscription age to 50 years in Great Britain and for extending the draft to Ireland is the same reason that makes the buying of Liberty bonds the imperative duty of every patriotic American. The fate not only of Europe but of America, of liberty, " may depend upon the " success with which the last German " attack is resisted and countered." These are the words of LLOYD GEORGE proposing in the House of Commons yesterday the measures to increase the British man-power in the field. Of the sacrifices he asked the British people to make he said that " nothing " would justify them except the most " extreme necessity and the fact that " the nation was fighting for all which " was essential and most sacred to " the national life." Germany has taken men of 60 and boys of 17. England increases the measure of her people's contribution to freedom.

The people of England, even the labor organizations, the people of Scotland and of Wales will bear heroically the new burdens laid upon them. Men up to and including the age of 50 will be enrolled for conscription, no man under 25 will be exempted by reason of industrial occupation, and clergymen will be called upon for noncombatant service. There remained the question of Ireland, where it has been openly threatened that conscription would be resisted with the extreme of violence.

LLOYD GEORGE accepts that challenge as Mr. WILSON accepted the German gage of battle. The English people would never permit him or any other Prime Minister to decline or evade it. If Englishmen must give up their lives to save everything that is essential and sacred to the national life, no part of the empire will be permitted to shirk its duty. Loyal Irishmen are no shirkers. They have done splendid service at the front, where their blood has mingled with the blood that has flowed from the veins of Englishmen, Scotchmen, Canadians, Australians, and New Zealanders. Only the irreconcilables in Ireland talk resistance. They forget that if Germany were the master of their destiny, that Germany so many of them here treasonably conspired to aid, they would be scourged into the ranks and no bones made about it.

It is worth any Irishman's while who hopes some time to see the Irish people happy and contented to use all his powers of persuasion in favor of a peaceful acceptance of conscription. It may mean the making or the unmaking of Ireland. The Government, in announcing the draft in Ireland, accepts the workable parts of the convention's conclusions, and offers a reasonable measure of self-government. If conscription is cheerfully assented to, if Ireland does her part, it is as certain as anything in politics can be that the powers of the Irish governing body will be liberally extended after the war. Let resistance be offered, let scenes of violence in Ireland now engage forces that should be employed in France, where there is dire need of all Britain's man-power, and the unreasonable members of the Nationalist Party in the House of Commons can foretell as well as anybody whether Ireland will have earned the right to expect indulgent treatment in the years following the war.

NO GRAIN FOR SWITZERLAND.

Germany will not permit Switzerland to receive American wheat by way of the French port of Cette unless she can have part of the quantity thus imported. For some time past the grain has been ready here for shipment, and our Government has provided vessels to carry it. But it is held at our ports because Germany has sunk one ship as it was approaching Cette with supplies for the Swiss, and threatens to destroy others which may follow.

Why does Germany insist upon having a share of the grain? Probably because the Central Powers are getting little foodstuff from the Ukraine. In that country, where a large surplus has been produced in normal times, there is not enough now to satisfy the needs of its own people. Proof of this is found in German testimony. The Cologne Gazette prints the report of a representative sent to make an investigation in the Ukraine. He says:

> The country is completely disorganized. The rural population must first become reaccustomed to tilling the soil. Meanwhile an unprecedented dearth prevails, and the population of Kiev and other cities is suffering bitterly for lack of bread.

Austrian newspapers admit that their Government is sending flour to its troops in the Ukraine; 100 carloads recently crossed the border. An American who has come to London from the same country, where he had been for two months, says there may be no grain to be exported for at least a year, because supplies on hand are very small and farmers are not inclined to plant for new crops. And so neither Germany nor Austria, needing food, can look to the Ukraine now for any substantial relief.

We are ready to keep the promises made in the agreement of December last with Switzerland. They called for about 10,000,000 bushels of wheat and corn in eight months, with other supplies, and the Shipping Board said two weeks ago that 50,000 tons of ships had been provided for the work. But Germany stands in the way. Her submarines menace any supply ship that approaches Cette. What can Switzerland do? It is a difficult situation. She needs the foodstuffs, but a protest from her Government might cause invasion. Her condition should appeal to neutrals elsewhere not exposed to attack. They should emphatically express sympathy with her and disapproval of Germany's oppressive injustice.

THE SIGNAL CORPS' RESPONSIBILITY.

The report that changes are imminent in the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, and that some of its highest officers may be affected, is at least plausible. Exactly what the relations of the Signal Corps with the Aviation Production Board are it might be difficult to define, but between them they are responsible for the spending of a vast sum of money, hundreds of millions of dollars, without producing a single battleplane for the front in France after eight months of effort. There was at first a disposition to put the blame for the failure of the aviation program upon the factories, which Rumor with its thousand tongues filled with German spies; but it turned out that the pedants of the Signal Corps would never be satisfied with any accomplished task, pestering the mechanics with unending changes of design. " If they would let us alone," was the despairing cry, " we could build airplanes."

How many times the vaunted Liberty motor was tinkered with will never be known, but it is now stated, with what appears to be finality, that, while the Liberty is not adapted to the work of combat machines, it is excellent for reconnoissance planes, and will do well enough for the bombing kind. This recalls the ingenious but futile attempts of another bureau to improve the unequaled French field gun and its rejection of the Lewis machine gun in order to invent, in the fullness of time, a better arm. Armageddon may be fought to a finish, but some of our War Department experts refuse to be hurried. Most leisurely, complacent, and unproductive of all have been the mathematicians and pundits of the Signal Corps.

When an organization of the army charged with the responsibility of assuring the mastery of the air to the Allies is not able, at the end of a year of war, to protect American troops on a short sector of the front from the raids of the enemy, something is radically wrong in that organization. If a brigade commander sacrifices troops by incompetency, he is straightway " scrapped "; in the field failure is not often tolerated. When it is overlooked exposure follows, and sooner or later there must be a reckoning. Why should the Signal Corps, the intelligence department of the army, escape a shakeup when it is found wanting? The Ordnance and Quartermaster's Departments were reorganized because they failed to function in emergencies, holding up the preparedness program. It is so notorious that the twin promoters of army aviation, the Signal Corps and the Production Board, have not met the public expectation that the wonder is why reorganization has been so long delayed.

THE SEDITION BILL.

It seems extraordinary that the Senate should have frittered away almost a whole session in debating the point whether the word " willfully " should qualify the utterance, printing, writing, or publishing of disloyal or abusive language about the Government, flag, or soldiers of the United States, which the Sedition bill was to punish with adequate fine and imprisonment. Certain Senators were once in high quarters described as willful, and perhaps the recollection rankled. But the average man, who has neither prestige nor influence, is safer with the word " willfully " in the bill. Criticism sometimes leaps hotly to the lips when disloyalty is not harbored. What to one hearer might be a warrantable stricture might to another savor of enmity to the Government. Therefore, it should be necessary to prove intent, as in the case of many things inhibited by the Criminal Code.

Of the unamended bill Senator SHERMAN of Illinois said: " It is an " abridgment of the right of free " speech." And if enacted as it came originally from the Judiciary Committee the bill would have been open to that condemnation. Constructive criticism might have been regarded by partisans and by sentimentalists as destructive. Men might have been locked up, although we do not think they would have been, for expressing honest opinions about the course of the Government in prosecuting the war, with no thought of inflaming the enemy alien or spreading sedition.

Criticism, honest criticism, ought not to be muzzled, and it should not be open to the malignant to put a wrong construction upon language never intended to " support or favor " the cause of the German Empire or " its allies in the present war, or " * * * to oppose the cause of the " United States." But the law, because of a simple amendment, adopted singularly by " a margin of half a dozen votes," will require proof of intent to be disloyal and to aid the enemy. With the word " willfully " left out, calling a spade a spade in what was said about an act or omission of the Administration detrimental (in the critic's view) to the cause of America and her allies might have had awkward consequences.

Hitherto the Department of Justice has complained of want of statute law when taken to task for failing to deal with sedition and disloyalty. The new act will give prosecuting officers plenty of latitude to frame indictments against traitors, obstructionists, and the disaffected. If they do their duty fearlessly and with intelligence, there will be no excuse or pretext for lynch law in its various forms of violence as a manifestation of Americanism.

BANKS AND THE LIBERTY BONDS.

The banks are generally allowing it to be understood that they will advance the money for the purchase of Liberty bonds at the coupon rate for ninety days upon only a 5 or 10 per cent. margin. At the end of that time subscribers are invited to make further arrangements, sometimes with an intimation of " favorable " conditions. Other cities are more definite in the announcement that the rate will be raised when the loan is extended. The proposal of several renewals in consideration of reduction of the amount advanced was not adopted, for the familiar reason that it converted a short-time loan into a long-time lock-up, and that is undesirable when there is such a demand for accommodation for war purposes. The earlier British loans were floated with the announcement that the full subscription would be advanced by the Bank of England for three years at 1 per cent. below the Bank rate. The result was a great and rapid increase in the discounts to figures far above the private deposits, with signs of commercial restriction, although abnormal relief was given in various ways. The last British loan (in 1917) was floated only after stopping other issues of Government paper, which resulted in raising the deposits above the discounts, and thus created a banking situation favorable to the loan. The result was that the discounts and deposits moved widely in opposite directions, showing that the five billions was raised out of deposits, not discounts.

In this city loans exceeded deposits a billion dollars at the time of the November statement of the Government. At the present time, taking into consideration about 100 leading cities, the official figures show loans and investments about 106 per cent. of deposits. The inclusion of investments with the loans deprives the figures of any disquieting suggestion, and surely no one would wish to suggest anything like niggardliness in banking accommodations to loan subscribers. It would be easy to emphasize either inflation or contraction principles into economic error, but they are not so contradictory as they seem. At least under present conditions they are reconciled by the large extent to which accommodation to loan subscribers is translated through Treasury disbursements into commercial stimulation. When the Government is spending a billion a month and is exerting every effort to spend more there is harm rather in limiting Government resources than in enlarging them.

Bankers, therefore, have the ability and should have the disposition to do all they can to finance the Government liberally, and applicants for war uses as liberally as they fairly can. There is a shadowy region where it is hard to say whether the applications are for essential or nonessential war uses, and where the credit desired is not such as commercial banks ought to give, unless there is to be confusion between the fiscal and monetary functions of the Government. It is easy to name belligerents whose Governments provided money, or at least currency, rather than credit for war uses. It is to the credit of the United States that the least of that mingling of functions is observable here. Our money has expanded, but no more than trade and prices. Our credit has expanded for the same reasons. But our currency and our credit alike are instantly exchangeable for gold, subject only to restrictions upon export, and that for reasons of war rather than commerce or finance.

It is not convincing to say that the banks ought not to finance loan subscribers for nothing. There is a profit which does not appear on the books, speaking in a strictly commercial manner. The unprofitable loan subscriber is likely to be a long-term depositor, and there are promises of incidental profits. But aside from profit there is substantial ground for the banks and the depositors alike to be liberal with the Government. It is the best and cheapest investment in insurance against tyranny and invasion. Never will it be so cheap as now to bury forever the pretensions of Kaiserism. Never shall we have as thankful and able allies as now. It is the duty of bankers and depositors alike to be liberal with the Government, and not too modest about it. The man who takes his bonds has a duty also to see that his neighbor takes his bonds, and should have all the help example can set and all the courage advice can supply.

THE HARMLESS, NECESSARY CAT.

Again the Legislature has been dealing with one of its hardy perennials, the bill introduced by Senator ROBINSON for the State Conservation Commission to protect useful birds against cats. With the purpose of this measure there will be general sympathy, but in its present form at least it must arouse grave dissatisfaction not only among lovers of cats but among lovers of justice.

The present bill provides that any adult person possessing a hunting license may, and any peace officer or game warden must, destroy in a humane manner cats which are hunting birds protected by law or which have such birds in their possession. Fair enough, so far as concerns cats discovered in flagrante delicto. But how are you going to determine whether a cat peacefully drifting across the landscape is hunting a bird protected by law, or cherishes the laudable purpose of abolishing a sparrow, or is merely walking abroad for purposes of recreation? This law would practically permit any cat to be spurlos versenkt at the pleasure of a peace officer or adult male who might misinterpret his purposes. Elementary considerations of justice require the observance of the laws of cruiser warfare against cats; they should not be destroyed, even in a humane manner, without visit and search which should ascertain whether their purposes are really anti-social or not.

But such investigation involves difficulties. Last year the Senator would have had all cats duly tagged—in effect, provided with passports. But your cat cherishes a strong feeling of individual liberty; he does not like to have his movements investigated. The task of registering the young men of draft age was considerably easier than the registration of cats. Some few patriotic felines might come forward voluntarily, but to round up the slackers would take an army which could ill be spared in these times.

Even worse was the Senator's first proposal this year, that all cats be belled. It was open to the same objection as registration, that you would first have to catch your cat; with the additional drawback that an obbligato of jangling chimes would be added to the back fence oratorios which enliven the city dweller's night. So we have the present measure, whose inequity is patent.

Moreover, any proper bill should draw a distinction between the city and country cat. Whatever the social status of the cat in the countryside, to the city dweller he furnishes an admirable example of enterprise and good humor in meeting the hardships of city life and realizing its hard-won joys. And recognition of the admirable qualities of the cat is now properly given by the selection of a rampant tom, with battered tail, scarred sides, and chewed-up ears, as the emblem of the fighters in the tanks, whose motto is " We treat them rough." Under the device of the tomcat the tanks are going out to make war upon the black Prussian eagle, a game bird who by his own activities has put himself outside the protection of the law. The totem of the tanks deserves a better fate than to be shot on sight by any one who may chance to misinterpret the object of his voyagings.

THE DAIMLER AFFAIR.

In the attitude of Germans of various classes toward the inquiry into the affairs of the Daimler Motor Company there are indications which support others noted by correspondents of a new and more clearly defined alignment of social and economic classes in Germany. The old Junker aristocracy seems to have rallied, though not too whole-heartedly, to the support of the industrial magnates. Conservative speakers in the Reichstag defended a company which had made a profit of 173 per cent. last year, had reported it as 11 per cent., and had threatened to close its factory, to go on an employers' strike, if it were not allowed an increase in prices of 50 per cent.

No profiteer in America ever stood to his guns so defiantly as the whole German industrial class, at least those who have any connection with the profitable war industries, have stood by the Daimlers. Says the Deutsche Zeitung, an organ of this class: " The Daimler works have per-" formed great services for the Fatherland, and if the case is ex-" ploited in Socialist fashion the con-" sequences for the new war loan may " be disastrous. It is already re-" ported that private persons have " withdrawn their subscriptions on " account of the scandal."

This comment might be studied with profit by such Americans as profess to see no difference between German and American capitalism. When we read of the bitter opposition to any investigation of the doctored reports submitted by the company to the Government, opposition in which Conservatives join, we may remember that the Krupps have also been accused of such action, and that the All-Highest WILLIAM is reputed to be a very heavy stockholder in this profitable enterprise.

German industry which profited from foreign commerce is apparently looking forward with some apprehension to the days of peace after the war; consequently, as the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger suavely says: " No " one can blame the company for " making the best of things." Not all German industrial magnates may share the views of AUGUST THYSSEN, who recently blamed the Government for starting the war and for failing to make good its promise to make it financially profitable to Germany, but there appears to be a good deal of unrest among those who must suffer most from the opinion which the Germans have won for themselves in the world outside. So, apparently, they are to be kept quiet by being allowed to make unheard-of profits; even if they blackmail the Government by threatening to stop war work or by refusing to buy war bonds, it must be tolerated. What the authorities must think when these matters are dragged into the indecent light by radicals we may imagine; it is significant that though a motion was made in the Reichstag by the parties of the Government bloc for the seizure by the military of all profiteering industrial plants, the Government itself—that is to say, Count HERTLING, who is responsible to the Kaiser and not to this bloc—was very cool toward the proposal.

Meanwhile, if landed aristocracy and industrial capitalists are drawing together, there is a more clearly defined opposition. Students of German economics tell us that the war is making the rich richer, the poor richer, the middle class poorer. The poor are growing more prosperous, a condition which history has shown conducive to a demand for more political rights; and the middle class is becoming an educated proletariat, embittered by recollection of better times gone past. The period following the war may show Germany in the condition of extreme opposition of capitalists and proletariat which MARX forecast, though this state be reached by methods not at all in accordance with Marxian theory.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Why Cannot the Facts Be Given?

By forbidding the New York Federal Reserve Bank and the Liberty Loan Committee to make public, day by day, the total of subscriptions to the new bond issue, the Treasury Department has taken action the wisdom of which is questioned by many, and the question thus raised is certainly open to discussion.

There is hesitation, naturally, to condemn this course outright as a mistake, for it is realized that nobody is more interested in the success of the loan than Secretary MCADOO, that none has given the attainment of success more thought, and that none can be better—perhaps none as well—informed as to the facts. On the other hand, the problem is one of psychology, and on such no judgment is final or even very authoritative.

The Treasury officials, like the rest of us, are believers in the efficacy of publicity in the attainment of good objects. They have asked for, and received with obviously sincere gratitude, a vast amount of it from the newspapers of the country and from innumerable committees of hard-working patriots, but now, suddenly and not a little to the confusing of everybody concerned, there has been withdrawn a form of publicity the great value of which has hitherto been assumed as self-evident.

No adequate reasons for the change have been given. That does not prove that none exists, but neither does it prove that one does. A vague reference to the danger of exciting jealousies among towns or groups will not do, nor does the danger of serious inaccuracies in totals seem a sufficient excuse for withholding information that certainly is of general interest. Jealousy is only another name for rivalry, and rivalry in well-doing is always held desirable.

It is possible that the publication of separate subscriptions is sometimes harmful as giving an excuse for taking in bonds a sum as small as that taken by another person or corporation, but more often, probably, it would have the contrary effect by showing what that other person or corporation had done and exciting a determination to equal or exceed his or its subscription.

Sentiment outside of the Treasury Department strongly inclines to the side of full publicity, and not a few people hold that the public has a right as well as a wish to know from day to day the rate at which the loan is being taken.

Diplomatic Secrets Disclosed.

It is evident that the longer the controversy between the French and the Austrian statesmen goes on, with respect to what they did and said about a separate peace, the more will the world at large learn and the more interesting will be what is learned. It was obvious from the very beginning that M. CLEMENCEAU's brusque contradiction of the original version of the " conversations " between REVERTATA and ARMAND would not be conclusive, and confident expectations of exciting details still to come are getting new justification daily as the interchange of accusation and denial goes on.

Already several veils have been raised, and as each ascends some new figure is disclosed. The figures are increasing in size, too, and principals of royal stature are beginning to take the place of agents more or less humble and therefore more or less easy to repudiate if it should be convenient to do so.

What we are getting is a glimpse at our old friend—or foe—secret diplomacy. Nothing very distinctly or seriously scandalous has yet been disclosed, at least in regard to the French negotiators, but there must be a good deal of uneasiness in Austria-Hungary as it becomes plainer and plainer that she, either of her own initiative or in the familiar rôle of Germany's tool and vassal, was trying to drive a wedge between France and Great Britain. The purpose or aspiration probably was less to secure a separate peace with one of these allies than to make them distrustful of each other by creating a difference between their aims or arousing a belief in the existence of such a difference. From all present indications the effort will be a complete failure.

The scoldings that Count CZERNIN is getting from the German press do not have the ring of sincerity. They seemingly constitute a path of escape from responsibility for Germany, leaving Austria, as usual, to bear the burden of embarrassment and humiliation. As Austria has no reputation to lose, she will not much mind reproaches present or to come.

A Danger Far from Imaginary.

Mgr. LAVELLE, speaking in the cathedral on Fifth Avenue as the representative of Cardinal FARLEY, did well when he reminded his hearers that only by being what he called " 100 per cent. American " could they make sure that some day they, too, would not be massacred by German cannon, just as were other worshippers similarly assembled in Paris on Good Friday.

There are Americans who needed that warning far more than did those who listened then, but it is one not to be forgotten or disregarded by any of us, and no argument is wasted that strengthens our realization of the fact that war and the dangers of war are as much America's as they are England's and France's.

Of course the appeal to fear is not the highest of appeals, but it must be made with the others, and none can afford to ignore it. We are not helping the Allies to do something; we are joining them in the performance of a task as much ours as theirs, and for failure to perform it our penalty will be the same.

WHERE K. FRANCKE STANDS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Hermann Hagedorn's book, " Where Do You Stand? " is an appeal to all Americans of German origin to declare publicly their allegiance to this country. I have responded to this appeal in the inclosed open letter. Perhaps you will be good enough to publish it.

KUNO FRANCKE,

My Dear Mr. Hagedorn:

I thank you for sending me your stirring little book entitled, " Where Do You Stand? " and I feel moved to answer at once, as well as I can, the question put by you so impressively to all Americans of German blood.

Where do I stand? Although I deeply deplored the tragic chain of circumstances and events which a year ago forced the United States into the European war, I have now come to believe that the participation of the United States in this war, provided the unselfish principles enunciated by President Wilson are strictly adhered to, will eventually make for a peace more democratic, equitable, and permanent than otherwise would have been the case. Sadly, therefore, but unreservedly, I accept the fact that Germany for the time being is my country's enemy, and I am determined to uphold our Government in its policy of forcing Germany, and for that matter all the belligerents, to accept a peace which will indeed make the world safe for democracy.

While I thus pledge myself to the support of our Government in this war, I cannot have anything in common with the fanatics who make it their business to inflame the people indiscriminately against Germany and everything German. I thoroughly believe in the ideals of American democracy and rejoice in our free institutions and the liberal and generous spirit of American life. But I must also recognize that the German system of government has achieved great things in the training of the German people in good citizenship and public service as well as in raising the level of personal worth and attainment. I thoroughly sympathize with the parliamentary parties in Germany which are striving to obtain for the people a larger share in directing its policies; but it would seem to me utterly futile to attempt to bring about this democratization of German public life by force from without. What I hope for is that American ideals of popular activity and American sympathy with the German progressive parties will help these parties to win their fight against the reactionaries and thus to open the way for a peace in accordance with the dictates of popular rights and common humanity.

I cannot help thinking that many Americans of German blood entertain views similar to those which I have here tried to express. I believe they would do a service to their country by openly declaring them.

Very sincerely yours,

The Price of Cotton.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Can you tell me why it is that, while there has been Government regulation of prices of wheat, steel, and other commodities, apparently there has been no suggestion of fixing the selling price of cotton? There is much war work, especially in connection with the Medical Department, that must be seriously affected by cotton at 35 to 36 cents a pound.

" ON THE PLAINS OF PICARDY."

Where History and Romance
And Song and Rhyme, from ancient time,
Birthed Fame and gloried France—
In Picardy, in Picardy,
Stands brave my boy, today,
To fight my fight, for God and Right,
And I—well, I can pray!

In Picardy, in Picardy,
Where smiled a joyous sun
On grain-spread field and vineyard yield,
And maids were wooed and won—
In Picardy, in Picardy,
The fields are desolate;
The sad sun frowns on ruined towns,
And maidens moan their fate.

In Picardy, in Picardy,
See rising from the plain
A flag that thunders to the Hun:
" Ye shall not! Out, foul stain! "
In Picardy, in Picardy,
Our hundred million souls

THE ACHILLES HEEL OF THE GERMAN MONSTER.

A Short Drive from the American Front in France to Cause Germany's Overthrow for Lack of Iron Ore.

By WILLIAM HERBERT HOBBS,
Professor of Geology, University of Michigan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of the lessons of the present German drive is the almost prohibitive sacrifice of man power by the army of the offensive on the German plan of overwhelming through mere weight of numbers. Today the advantage seems to rest with the Allies, since their losses in men have probably not greatly exceeded a third of those of Germany, and they have succeeded in countering the shock without any considerable draft upon their mobile reserve army.

Nothing is more certain than that the German " blood bath " will, when it has been stayed, be followed up by a " peace drive," in which full use will be made of every devilish device in order to deceive, and in which all treasonable, pacifistic, faint-hearted and weak-minded elements in the allied nations will be fully mobilized—the La Follettes, Hillquits, Nearings, Jordans, and Bergers.

Of the many arguments which will be put forward, the most potent with the loyal, though faint-hearted elements of the population, will doubtless be the supposed impossibility of either side obtaining a military decision in its favor. Under ideal weather conditions and with unprecedented artillery concentration, (thanks to Germany's peace propaganda in Russia and Italy,) Germany, with a sacrifice measured probably by more than 350,000 casualties, has driven into the allied territory a broad wedge, the apex of which is about thirty-five miles from the starting point. It will now be argued that the distance to Berlin from the allied front at Verdun is not far from 650 miles, or about nineteen times this distance, most of the way through exceedingly difficult country and with three great rivers, (the Rhine, Weser, and Elbe,) to be crossed. No less than nineteen drives of this intensity, it will be argued, would be required to accomplish the entry into Berlin.

To those who do not know the facts this argument will appear to have much plausibility. The truth is, however, that a single drive eastward from Verdun which should penetrate no further than the present German offensive has already gone, (thirty to thirty-five miles,) would bring the war at once to an end. This is easily proved, and has been admitted as long ago as March 20, 1915, by a deputation from six of the most powerful industrial and agrarian organizations of Germany made in a confidential communication to the German Chancellor. This confidential memorandum was obtained and published in France in 1916, and its truths are self-evident to any student of mineral resources or of economics.

No one needs to be told that the sinews of land warfare today are guns and munitions, which in turn depend upon developed resources of coal and iron. Germany, while possessing almost inexhaustible resources of coal, has no considerable bodies of iron ore outside of Lorraine, and her great industrial development since 1871 is entirely to be accounted for by this body of iron ore, which was wrested from France with the conquered provinces. In 1870 Germany produced but 1,400,000 tons of pig iron, whereas in 1913 her output was nearly one-third of that of the entire world. Of the iron ore which she mined for the purpose, three-fourths came from the Lorraine beds, all of it from a circumscribed area some thirty miles long and eight miles wide, hugging the French border. A considerable percentage of the remaining third was obtained from the province of Luxemburg in the same area over the frontier to the northward. The district extends also across the frontier into France, so that the German (Lorraine) iron ores west of Thionville (Diedenhofen,) the French ores of the plateau of Briey and the plain of the Woevre, and those of the province of Luxemburg, form one continuous area which spreads out in all directions from the common frontiers of the three countries. The near border of this great iron district is distant scarcely ten miles from the present battlefront on the heights of the Meuse east of Verdun, and the further edge only about twenty miles beyond.

How has Germany succeeded in protecting this most vulnerable and vitally important section of her territory? The story is an interesting one. On July 25, 1914, ten days before war was declared, with " malice aforethought " Germany sent the entire 16th Army Corps stationed at Metz and a portion of the 8th Corps stationed at Treves and Cologne to occupy in force the Lorraine iron fields along the entire frontier. Here, while the small bodies of French " covering troops " were keeping ten kilometers in the rear of their frontier under official orders issued in the interest of a peaceful solution of the international situation, the German troops mounted batteries and felled trees to make ready for action. On the 2d of August, two days before war was declared, German troops advanced through the neutral territory of Luxemburg and occupied the iron district there, then, crossing into France, they advanced upon the French fortress at Longwy and occupied the French iron district as well. Thus two days before the declaration of war Germany had the entire iron area of France and Luxemburg, as well as that of Lorraine, firmly in her grasp. France has accomplished the modern miracle of her defense against Germany under the handicap of the loss of most of her iron-producing district and been forced to bring much of her iron from her colonies across the Mediterranean and from other sources.

Now let us read the confidential memorandum of March, 1915, which was presented to the German Chancellor, von Bethmann Hollweg. The report says:

> The manufacture of shells has required quantities of iron and steel of which no one could have had an idea before. * * * If the production of pig iron and steel had not been doubled since the month of August, the continuation of the war would have been impossible.
>
> As raw material for the manufacture of these quantities of pig iron and steel the " minette " (Lorraine ore) takes a place of greater and greater importance, because this ore can alone be extracted in our country in rapidly augmenting quantities. The " minette " covers at this moment 60 to 80 per cent. of the manufacture of pig iron and steel.
> If the production of " minette " had been disturbed the war would be as good as lost. (Translated from the French.)

The report goes on to say with much force that if French troops had been able to advance into Lorraine five to ten miles beyond the frontier, or had even held the frontier, the war would have ended from Germany's lack of iron. Verdun is referred to as the " bridgehead " of the iron region, and the following conclusion is arrived at:

> The security of the German Empire in a future war necessitates therefore imperatively the possession of all the mines of " minette," and comprises the fortresses of Longwy and Verdun, without which this region cannot be defended.

It was shortly after the submission of this memorandum to the German Chancellor that the great drive on Verdun was begun. This gives special significance to the recently published statement of M. Pichon, the then French Minister of Foreign Affairs, since verified by the ex-Chancellor, von Bethmann Hollweg, that Baron von Schoen, the German Ambassador at Paris, had instructions to demand of France the handing over to Germany of the fortresses of Verdun and Toul for the period of the war in case France should agree to remain neutral. As Verdun is the " bridgehead " of the main " minette " area, Toul serves a like purpose with regard to the small outlying section of " minette," situated a short distance to the northward of Nancy, an area which has continued to remain in French hands.

In the minette iron district is therefore the Achilles heel of the German monster. Once driven from this area, Germany would be forced to an unconditional surrender, as she has herself admitted. Development of the iron in Ukraine, with which a " peace " has recently been concluded, is not possible on a scale commensurate with Germany's needs without several years of development, and the question of transportation across the 1,200 miles which separate the district from the industrial section of Westphalia and Rhenish Prussia would have to be solved. Should the attempt be made to bring the ore in sufficient quantity from the equally distant Kiruna mines of Swedish Lapland, means would have to be found by the Allies, as they have been found before, to interrupt the Baltic traffic.

It is hoped, therefore, that the specious argument which will soon be put forward in the interests of a " German peace " will be met by a knowledge of the facts.

NO SOCIALIST CONFERENCE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read the letter to the National Socialist Party of Great Britain, dated Jan. 11, 1918, and signed by John Spargo as Chairman and J. G. Phelps Stokes as Secretary of the Social Democratic League of America. This letter appeared in Justice of London on Feb. 28. It is a reply to a letter from the former body proposing the creation of a new international Socialist organization. It suggests, as a counterproposal, the formation of a group of allied Socialists as a " sort of left wing " within the international, and further suggests an international conference of allied Socialists either at the conclusion of peace or earlier, and " immediately prior to the holding of the regular International Socialist Congress."

The writers explicitly say that they " have expressed their own views upon their individual responsibility." Nevertheless, from the fact that the letter twice affirms their official designations—once in the text and again with the signature—a representative character is necessarily given to the expression. As it does not represent my own views, nor those of any other former Socialist Party member with whom I am acquainted, I feel obliged to record publicly my strong dissent.

There is no international now in existence. The old international was broken to pieces when the German Army (composed largely of professed Socialists) invaded and pillaged Belgium. The Socialist Party of Germany has never denounced this act, but has, instead, enthusiastically supported the Government which perpetrated it. There may be a new international formed after the war, but it is unthinkable that for many years thereafter there can be any fraternization between the working class of the allied countries and that of the Central Powers. Any proposal which assumes the old international to be still in existence is self-condemned.

The proposal of an " international conference of Socialists from the allied countries, and if possible those from every country who share our views," is equally objectionable. Conceding the entire good faith of Messrs. Spargo and Stokes in this matter, I must yet say that this proposal is fraught with vast mischief. Would this conference include the party Socialists of this country who have so assiduously made themselves the tools of Prussianism? Would it include the minority groups of Germany, who, though opposing the German Government, stand for what would be essentially a German peace? Would it include the " defeatist " element of Italy or the minority groups of Norway and Sweden, whose doctrinaire pacifism plays directly into the hands of the Kaiser? Would it include the precious Lenine and Trotzky, whose betrayal of the cause of democracy has given new victories to German arms on the Italian and French fronts?

There is no need of any conference of any kind except among those elements who are sincerely and determinedly bent on the defeat of the German military power. Whatever adds unity and strength to the carrying out of that purpose is to be supported, and whatever tends to delay its accomplishment is to be unsparingly condemned. The notion that talk, and more talk, and still more talk, can interpose a barrier against Prussian bayonets and Prussian cannon is a delusion that dies hard, even after what has happened in Russia. With the world on fire, and with democracy threatened with extinction by the triumph of German military force, the one defensive need is action. The proposal for fresh palavers, however sincerely meant, tends only to further triumphs for Kaiserism.

A Vote of Thanks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At a meeting of the Civic Art Committee of this organization held on April 4 the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

> Moved, That the Civic Art Committee of the Woman's Municipal League tender to THE NEW YORK TIMES a vote of thanks for its unwearying effort to save Central Park from war trenches and other proposed encroachment and spoliation, and to preserve it for the use for which it was intended.

WILSON'S SPEECH SOBERS GERMANS

SEES GREAT TASKS AHEAD

The President Has Made Impossible Any "Peace by Understanding," It Declares.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—" No other solution of the world struggle is to be seen than the hoped-for complete German victory in the west," says the Berlin Vorwärts in a mournful article on President Wilson's Baltimore speech. The tone of the speech, the same journal says, " leaves us in no doubt as to where we stand. Either the war must at an early period be finished in the west by military means or else our future will lie dark before us. Indeed, our future will not be bright, even if a successful conclusion is reached, but will be much less so if that decision is not achieved."

The semi-official comment on Wilson's speech is vastly different from that of which we have unfortunately read too often in the press. It shows what a lost war would mean for Germany. These are unusually serious words. In January, 1917, we were accustomed to read in the German papers that England would lay down her arms on account of the U-boat war in a few months. The American war menace was said to be only a bluff and in no way to be taken seriously, because before America could even make the attempt to help the Entente, the war would be over. Had those phophecies been fulfilled the bloody struggle on the west front would not have taken place.

The Vörwarts, however, is thankful in a way to the President for his speech, for it reminds the Germans of what, under the influence of their newspapers, thay had been too apt to forget: namely, that 'war is not like plucking cherries. It warns its readers that stupendous tasks still lie ahead and that though the German people have less reason to despair of the outcome than others engaged in war, there is no reason for them to regard the coming events with lightheartedness or presumption. It points to the great force, moral and material, with which America can support the Entente, and then goes on to say:

" President Wilson's speech leaves us in no doubt that the bridges to peace by understanding have been for the present been broken by the Brest-Litovsk treaty. Wilson, the undisputed political leader of the Entente, will not recognize that peace and sets before Germany the choice either to retreat before his threats of force or accept the combat of force with him. Thus the war has been forced to development in which only the means of material forces count."

Cite Holland Against Wilson.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—As President Wilson's speech at Baltimore has not yet been published in full in Germany, the newspapers refrain from extensive comment.

The Lokal Anzeiger says that the whole world knows that the present battle in the west is the result of the Entente's desire to fight, and that Wilson could have influenced the Entente, had he really desired peace, but he did nothing to prevent the Versailles decisions. It adds that he belied all his tirades about right and humanity by his course toward Holland. It goes on: " He now calls openly for the utmost force and so finally clearly defines America's and the Allies' policy. Germany will not allow the joke of force to be applied to her. For this reason she fights her heroic war. Wilson's speech was at best propaganda for the war loan, and it shows what defeat would signify for Germany."

The German press is not losing in opportunity of using the requisitioning of Dutch ships as propaganda against the Entente. This and the fact that Holland is obliged to feed many foreigners are favorite topics.

The Weser Zeitung asserts that the Dutch Government has informed the British Government that it must send supplies of foodstuffs for the French, Belgian, American, and Russian subjects in Holland, but that no answer has been received yet.

The newspaper states that Germany is ready to comply with such a demand, and that steps have already been taken by Berlin.

Up to the present nothing is known of these reported demands by officials of allied circles with the exception of the feeding of prisoners of war.

SAYS AMERICA DISSEMBLES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—The Frankfurter Zeitung devotes two columns to a review of America's first war year. Beginning with the alleged reasons for America's intervention in the war, the paper asserts that this was largely due to fear of Germany and German world supremacy.

Although America loves to cloak her policy in rhetorical phrases such as " making the world safe for democracy," the paper says, " this phrase envelops two ideas—one being imperialistic with a fear of Germany in Central and South America, East Asia, and the Pacific, and the other being the fear of German militarism. The Zeitung says that America was opposed to the German policy even before the war. The paper admits that the German foreign policy may have had its faults, but says that it is exaggeration to assert that it menaced democracy, and it alleges that the most ardent democrats in America were opposed to the war.

GOVERNMENT ACTS TO STOP MUNITIONS FIRES

WASHINGTON, April 9.—To minimize the possibilities of fires in munitions plants and all factories engaged on war work, the War Industries Board today created a fire protection section which will maintain a close inspection of all plants engaged on Government work. It will be assisted by the Intelligence Bureaus of the army and navy and all local and district fire inspection services in the country, and where circumstances warrant, it will enlist the aid of the Fire Marshals of the various States and ask the co-operation of insurance underwriters.

There have been many disastrous fires in war factories and grain elevators both before and since the United States entered the war. In the fires millions of dollars' worth of munitions and grains needed by the Government and the Allies were destroyed.

According to a statement issued here yesterday, the Fire Prevention Section is not intended to disturb existing agencies that are performing satisfactory inspection service; the first efforts will be directed to the improvement of conditions in the large number of improvised factories that have been started because of war work. The aid of municipal and State Fire Marshals will be enlisted. An earnest effort will be made to prevent duplication of inspection on the part of either Government or insurance agencies, and also to coordinate all activities of the Government so far as they relate to this work.

GIVES HIS BLOOD TO PEARY.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, the noted arctic explorer, after undergoing last Saturday the operation of transfusion of blood, is tonight at his home, greatly increased in strength and rapidly on the way to a full recovery.

The malady which required the operation was pernicious anaemia, which the Admiral's physicians said would steadily reduce his physical strength and lead to death. After experiments with the blood of other subjects, which failed of success, Dr. Frank B. Hartman of the Naval Medical School offered to place himself at the service of the surgeons, and last Saturday a pint of his blood was transfused into the veins of Admiral Peary. The operation was performed at the Georgetown University Hospital by Lieutenant Commander H. F. Strine of the Naval Hospital.

Today the patient was removed to his home, 1,831 Wyoming Avenue, and tonight his attendants said he was resting well and felt vastly improved. He is required to remain in bed to gain rest and strength, but declares he feels well enough to be up and about.

MISS CALDER BETROTHED.

The engagement of Miss Elsie Frances Calder, daughter of United States Senator and Mrs. William M. Calder of 551 First Street, Brooklyn, to Lieutenant Robert Corwin Lee, U. S. N., was announced yesterday by Mrs. Calder at a luncheon held at the Hotel Bossert, Brooklyn.

Miss Calder is a graduate of the Packer Institute, Brooklyn. Since the beginning of the war she has been one of the most active workers in Brooklyn in supplying men in the army and navy with sweaters and other comforts. Since the first of the year she has been with her family in Washington, D. C., and is now visiting in Brooklyn. She was sponsor for the battleship New York.

Lieutenant Lee is a son of William A. Lee of Blackfoot, Idaho, and was graduated from Annapolis, class of 1910.

The wedding of Miss Frederika Peterson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Peterson of 535 Park Avenue, to Lieutenant Theodore Carrington Jessup of the 305th Infantry, Camp Upton, took place at noon yesterday at the Brick Presbyterian Church. As the date of the wedding was decided upon on Monday there was no time for the usual preparation. Only the immediate families were present, and the couple stood under the large satin United States flag of the church during the ceremony. The Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill officiated.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a traveling gown of dark blue with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Mrs. Godfrey Freeman was her only attendant, and Richard Jackson of Ridgefield, Mass., acted as best man.

Herman Asher Marries Miss Sachs.

The marriage of Herman Asher, attorney, and Vice President of the New York City branch of the Welfare Board for Jewish Soldiers and Sailors, and Miss Doris M. Sachs, a daughter of John Sachs of 330 West 102d Street, took place yesterday at 1 o'clock at the Plaza, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman of the Temple Emanu-El officiating. The immediate relatives only witnessed the ceremony. Mr. Asher is a past President and Treasurer of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, District 1, and Mrs. Asher has been active in the home service of the Red Cross.

LEAGUE TO CEMENT FRANCE TO AMERICA

Artistic, Literary, and Idealistic Achievements to be Made Common Property.

GROWS OUT OF WAR UNITY

Will Publish Journal in Two Languages and Foster Good-Will and Understanding.

The French League in America, whose officers, founders, and patrons include men high in the political, artistic, social, and financial life of the United States and of France, was launched last night at the home of Otto H. Kahn, 1,100 Fifth Avenue.

The meeting was attended by a large group of men and women interested in strengthening cordial relations between France and the United States. Speeches were made by C. H. Outland, manager of the league; Baroness Francis Wilson Huard, and Lieutenant Adrien de Pachmann, a member of the French High Commission. Robert Casa, a well-known French singer, recently connected with the French Theatre in this city, sang songs of the trenches and of the Latin Quarter.

In all essentials the league, according to Mr. Outland, who explained its objects and purposes, is to partake of a popular movement with active membership placed at $3 a year. It is nonpartisan, nonsectarian and nonpolitical, and is to be national in scope. Branches are to be established all over the country so that every community of persons interested in its objects shall have opportunity to keep in touch with the manifold aspects of French-American activity.

The league will publish a monthly review, whose text will be about two-thirds English and one-third French. The review will record the progress of the French nation in science, literature, and the arts, the movements and tendencies in finance, commerce, and industry and the achievements in education. At the same time the publication will serve as the organ of some of the French-American groups which have been organized for various purposes. It will also be the means of facilitating among Americans, it was said, the study of the French language. Each issue will contain a supplement, dealing wholly with the French language, and suited to the needs of both beginners and of advanced students.

A New Relationship.

After referring to the act of General Pershing in placing the American forces at the disposal of France as " the symbol of a great common effort between the United States and France," Mr. Outland said that the United States and France had entered upon a new relationship.

" Today with the French, on French soil, we are fighting for the same ideals," he added. " We are struggling, together with France, to remove the ulcer which is festering at the heart of the world.

" This new partnership has made imperative an agency which will enable these two nations to know each other well. While we are sending to France our men, our money, our supplies to be pooled by them in the great struggle, we must have some agency which will permit a fullness of knowledge and a free interchange of ideas between us. These two great peoples are separated by the barrier of language. Among the numerous French-American organizations which have been created, before and since the war, the means for this reciprocal exchange on a large scale has been lacking. It is this great need which the French League in America proposes to fill and what America is doing is of consequence to France and what France is doing is of significance to us, and these things we must know and know increasingly as time goes on.

" Not only are there international problems between us as a result of this immense collaboration, there are also national problems arising in each country whose solution can be aided by the experience of the other. The ideal and practical bonds are becoming innumerable. They are meeting our life at every point. There is not a person here who has not a stake in France. The French League in America is the instrument which will effect this close ideal and practical collaboration.

" As its name implies, the league is not a society whose membership is restricted. It is incorporated as a New York State membership corporation with these objects:

" To promote a thorough comprehension by the people of France and the United States of America of their respective civilizations; to strengthen the bonds of intellectual and moral sympathy, based on their historic traditions and present collaboration; to encourage between these two great demoncracies a free interchange of ideas, information, and methods in solving their national and international affairs and in furthering their national ideals; to reveal the practical and artistic genius of these two nations to each other; to encourage the development of closer economic relations between France and the United States, and for these purposes to publish a periodical review as the organ of this corporation, and of other French-American groups, and in general to bring the United States of America and France to a full and sympathetic understanding of one another."

Three Grades of Membership.

The headquarters of the league are at 53 Washington Square. Application for membership may be made in one of the following classes:

Life members, who make a contribution of not less than $1,000 to the objects of the league; active members, who pay an entrance fee of $1 and annual dues of $3, and sustaining members, who make a contribution of not less than $100. Every member will receive the league's monthly review.

The officers are: President—Myron T. Herrick; Vice Presidents—Alexander J. Hemphill, Edmund L. Baylies, and Barrett Wendell; Treasurer—August Belmont; Secretary and General Manager—C. H. Outland; Honorary President—Charles W. Eliot; Honorary Vice President—John H. Finley; Directors—Frederick H. Allen, Edmund H. Baylies, August Belmont, William P. Bonbright, Paul D. Cravath, Samuel W. Fairchild, Alexander J. Hemphill, Myron T. Herrick, Otto H. Kahn, L. F. Loree, C. H. Outland, Morton Prince, William Roscoe Thayer, and George T. Wilson.

KING AND QUEEN HOBNOB WITH OUR OFFICERS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 9.—The King and Queen, who are making a tour of industrial works, spent yesterday at Lincoln.

At one factory they visited the guard of honor, composed of American troops. The King and Queen were evidently much pleased to see them, and two of their officers, Lieutenant P. E. Davant and Lieutenant W. G. T. Poulson of Philadelphia, had quite a long conversation with the visitors.

" I am very glad, indeed, to see American soldiers in England," said His Majesty, " and a fine stamp of men they are. When I was in France not very long ago I had an opportunity of seeing troops from the United States. They impressed me very much, indeed, with their excellent bearing, and I was told that they were becoming efficient very rapidly.

At another factory Captain Mack of the American Army Insurance Commission was introduced to their Mejesties. Captain Mack, after informing their Majesties that already the members of the United States forces had been insured up to $12,000,000,000, asked the Queen for her autograph. The Queen laughingly responded, and the Captain handed her a fountain pen and a little square of paper.

The Captain's Sergeant offered his back as a writing pad and the Queen, as the centre of a laughing throng, wrote, " Mary, R., 1918." Then the King was asked for his autograph, and immediately above the Queen's signature he wrote, " George, R. I."

In a place where a tank was practicing the King expressed a desire to have a joy ride.

" This is my fourth adventure in a tank," said the King to the naval officer in charge, " and I want you to take me over the most awkward places."

MEN OF 27TH TO GIVE SHOW.

Nearly one hundred soldiers, members of the 27th Division at Spartanburg, which is composed mostly of former New York National Guard Regiments, arrived here yesterday to take part in the musical comedy which the theatrical troupe of the division is staging at the Lexington Avenue Theatre. The soldier actors were under command of Captain Frauchot, Aide de Camp to Major Gen. O'Ryan, and Lieutenant William A. Halloran, Jr., director and producer of the show.

The performance, which is to open tomorrow night, is called " You Know Me, Al." It was written, words and music, by men of the division, played by them, staged and managed by them. The writers were Stanislaw Stenge of the Headquarters Troop, and A. J. Hallahan of the 107th Infantry, formerly the 7th Regiment. The cast of forty-five contains fourteen men who take women's parts. The entire cast, in fact, is made up of professional actors, at present serving the Government as members of the 27th Division.

The performance here is to serve two purposes, one to aid recruiting, and the other to raise $15,000, which is to be used to buy a portable theatre which the 27th wants to take to France. " You Know Me, Al," will run for ten days in New York, and will play one matinee in Washington, D. C.

Authority to purchase surgical instruments and surgical supplies to the amount of $230,272 for shipment to the Red Cross Commission for Italy has been given by the War Council of the American Red Cross, according to an announcement yesterday. This authorization is made at the request of Robert Perkins, Commissioner to Italy.

The following letter from Signor Alfieri, Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, to the Emergency Commission that was dispatched to France last Fall has just been received here. It reads:

" Now that the permanent commission for Italy of the American Red Cross, completely organized, is showing its great value and splendid material and moral effect in aid of the war which Italy is fighting for common justice, it is very agreeable to me to send my thanks to those who contributed to the laying of the foundation for the work.

" To you who were directors of the emergency commission for Italy I am glad to express these sentiments in the name of the army which has had and still receives so much material and moral assistance from the American Red Cross."

ZIONIST UNIT PREPARES.

Medical Organization of 40 Members to Go to Palestine.

The American Zionist Medical Unit, with a personnel of forty members, is making ready to leave New York shortly for Palestine. The unit will cooperate with the Jewish Administrative Commission which is laying the foundations for the future Jewish State. The unit is being equipped by the Women's Branch of the Zionist movement at a cost of $250,000 to cover its first year's operations.

Besides a general director and a medical director, the membership of the unit will be made up of fifteen physicians, fifteen nurses, a sanitarium, two mechanics, two pharmacists, and a dental staff. The physicians include specialists in surgery, eye, ear, nose and throat diseases. A hospital in Jerusalem has already been placed at the disposal of the unit, and the staff will be amplified from among the physicians living in Palestine.

In addition to the hospital in Jerusalem, the unit plans to open a dispensary, a school of nursing and several floating hospitals. It is carrying with it $40,000 worth of medical supplies and a complete equipment of surgical, dental and radiograph instruments.

Dr. Colin Luke Begg Marries.

Dr. Colin Luke Begg, a professor at the Post-Graduate Hospital, of 121 East Seventeenth Street, and Miss Susanne Confére of New Orleans and New York, a miniature painter, were married yesterday afternoon in the chapel of the University Place Presbyterian Church by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. George Alexander. Alexander L. W. Begg, a brother, was his best man and Miss Christina Begg, a sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor. Dr. Begg belongs to various medical societies and was graduated from the University of Toronto in 1898.

Armed River Pirates Capture Tug.

The tug Meta did not get up steam yesterday morning, and when her owner, Captain Daniel McCarren of 31 South Street, went aboard at the foot of Essex Street, Jersey City, he found Michael O'Donnell, the engineer, locked in the bunk room. O'Donnell said that at 10 o'clock Monday evening six men with caps drawn over their faces entered the cabin with drawn revolvers, hustled him into the bunk room and in a few minutes started the Meta upstream. They had the tug away until 3 o'clock and made four stops. Acting Chief of Police Richard Battersby of Jersey City says the boat was in the hands of a gang of river pirates who had undoubtedly made stops to steal and had got away with their booty.

AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION GAINS, OFFICIALS SAY

Mistakes Conceded, But War Department Sees No Reason for Discouragement.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—There is no reason for discouragement over the American aviation program, according to officials responsible for the completion of the aircraft and the training of flyers needed by General Pershing. This, it was learned today authoritatively, is the feeling of War Department heads, notwithstanding the fact that they apparently are contemplating an early reorganization of the Government's aircraft production machinery.

Failures and mistakes are conceded, but disregarding overoptimism in estimates of a few months ago officials are not discouraged over the vital question of whether planes sufficient for the needs of the forces in France are to be forthcoming. There were intimations today that a recasting of estimates, together with the actual output of the factories within the last few days, had shown that a part of the delay in the program has been made up.

Rumors have been current for some time that a general shakeup of the aviation organization was in prospect. It was said authoritatively today, however, that no steps would be taken until the preliminary report of the special investigating committee, headed by H. Snowden Marshall of New York, was in hand. This report was called for by Acting Secretary Crowell in advance of the full report of the committee and will deal with organization questions almost entirely.

COLLECTOR EDWARDS HOST.

Collector of Internal Revenue Edwards of the Second, or Wall Street, District announced yesterday that he would be the host at a patriotic rally, reception, and dance to be tendered to the several hundred young men and women employes of his office. The affair, which will take place Friday evening in the assembly room of the Hotel Ansonia, is given by the Collector in appreciation of the work just completed of collecting income tax returns which are expected to net the Government $500,000,000. Mr. Edwards announced that Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and many other Treasury Department officials would be present. Patrick Francis Murphy, who is to be one of the speakers, is relied upon by the Collector to make the employes laugh. " When Mr. Murphy talks," the Collector said last night, " the Government employes will have a chance to have a real laugh, for they have not had one in weeks, because they have been working night and day on income tax returns."

Yesterday Collector Edwards completed his first year as head of the Second District, the most important in point of revenue collections in the entire country. During the administrations of Mayors McClellan and Gaynor, Mr. Edwards was Commissioner of Street Cleaning. Many floral tributes from employes and friends adorned the Collector's office yesterday. Later in the day they were sent to the city's hospitals.

CHARLES F. SISE DEAD.

MONTREAL, April 9.—Charles Fleetwood Sise, President of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, who served as an officer on a Confederate privateer, the Alabama, during the civil war, died at his home here today from pneumonia.

Mr. Sise, one of Canada's foremost business men, was brought up in the South near the estate of Jefferson Davis, later President of the Southern Confederacy. During the American civil war he was sent to England by Davis as a special messenger with funds for the construction of the Confederate commerce destroyer on which he later served as an officer.

The Union ship Kearsarge sank the Alabama off Cherbourg, France, on June 19, 1864. Captain Ralph Summer, Mr. Sise, and others were taken prisoners, and after the war made their way home.

YANKEES MAKE IT SEVEN OUT OF EIGHT GAMES IN INTER-LEAGUE SERIES WITH BRAVES

BODIE SCORES RUN THAT BEATS BRAVES

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 9.—The Yankees and Braves encountered another brand of disagreeable weather today, when they performed before 3,000 soldiers from Camp Greene, the temperature hovering not far above the freezing point. Despite the handicap of playing in sweaters, the game was well pitched and fielded, and the Yankees won by a score of 1 to 0 by getting the better breaks.

The Braves should have captured this contest by a one-sided score, as they combed Monroe and McGraw for three doubles and four singles, while Oram and Murray held the American Leaguers to three widely scattered singles. The one and only run of the game was not shoved across the plate until the last half of the eighth inning, and it was in the nature of a gift. Bodie scored it after drawing a base on balls.

The Braves made six of their hits off Monroe in the first five innings. An infield hit by Henry in the ninth was the only safe drive off McGraw.

Murray, a right-hander who had not previously appeared in the series, twirled the last two innings for Boston. After Baker fouled out in the eighth Bodie walked and stole. Smith partly stopped Peckinpaugh's hard drive, but Massey was unable to retrieve the ball in time to cut off the run. Peck then stole second and Hannah also walked and stole, but both were left on base.

Pratt and Lavan Got 10 Per Cent. of Claim Against Ball.

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—Derrill Pratt and John Lavan, former members of the St. Louis Americans, who compromised their $50,000 damage suits against Phil Ball, President of the St. Louis club, received $5,400 in settlement, according to information obtained here today.

Ball today said that the settlement did not cost him a cent, and sporting men concluded from this statement that the American League had footed the bill.

PROTEST BY TORONTO CLUB

Charges That Kansas City Has Signed Two of Its Players.

TORONTO, April 9.—Tampering with players of the Toronto team of the old International League is alleged in a formal protest which J. J. McCaffery, President of the Toronto Club, has filed with the National Baseball Commission against the Kansas City team of the American Association. McCaffery contends that Manager Ganzel of Kansas City made overtures to J. Schultz, outfielder, and Louis LaLonge, catcher, Toronto players, several weeks before the International League was reconstructed. The two players are reported to have been signed by Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, April 9.—Officials of the Kansas City Club of the American Association expressed surprise today when informed of the protest of President J. J. McCaffery, and declared that their understanding was all International League players had been bulletined as "free agents" two weeks ago.

N.Y.U. SEASON OPENS TODAY

Baseball Team Will Get Into Action Against Stevens.

The New York University baseball team will open the season with a game against the Stevens Institute at Ohio Field this afternoon. Owing to the weather conditions the practice yesterday was confined to the gymnasium, where Coach Kellogg put the squad through a slight warming-up, so as to keep the men in condition.

The schedule for the season is as follows:

April 10—Stevens, at home; 13—Rutgers, at home; 20—Union, at home; 24—Columbia, at South Field; 27—Haverford, at Haverford. May 1—Pelham Naval Reserves, at Pelham; 4—Stevens, at Hoboken; 8—Swarthmore, at Swarthmore; 15—C. C. N. ROBINS WIN THIRD IN ROW.

Coombs Helps Bewilder Red Sox by 3 to 1 Score.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 9.—The Robins won their third straight game from the Red Sox today when they took a seven-inning affair by the score of 3 to 1. Jack Coombs and Dick McCabe were the pitchers. The weather was very unfavorable. A cold raw wind swept over the diamond. The game was played in thirty-five minutes.

Coombs allowed only three hits, while the Brooklyns secured six. Robbie's men scored their first run in the opening inning on a double by Olson, a sacrifice and an out. The Red Sox tied the score in the fourth, but Brooklyn took the lead again in their turn at bat in the same inning, when Hi Myers hit to deep right for a home run. The National Leaguers scored again in the fifth on Krueger's triple and a sacrifice fly.

The teams play the last game of the series tomorrow at Chattanooga. After the game the two clubs start for their respective homes. Brooklyn will reach New York Friday morning and the Red Sox will arrive at Boston the same afternoon.

ALL SMILES TAKES PURSE.

BOWIE, Md., April 9.—E. T. Zollicoffer's veteran campaigner, All Smiles, took the first Liberty Loan event of the Bowie season here today, when he distanced his field in the fourth race on the card. Running in the heavy going seemed just to the liking of All Smiles, for he opened up a big gap after half the distance had been covered, and won as he pleased from such good performers as Graphic, Woodward, Obulus, and Irregular. The latter two, somewhat favored by past performances, seemed unusually backward in the going.

T. Clyde's Dunedin surprised the talent in the first race for the babies of the track by defeating both Sid C. Keener and John Powers, two fancied to have it their own way.

As a general rule the popular favorites responded, the only other exception being Genevieve B. in the second race, which was more than 12 to 1.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—For 2-year-olds, selling, purse $600, four furlongs. Dunedin, 110 pounds, (Troxler,) $15.30, $5.40, $3.30, won; Sid C. Keener, 108, (Willie,) $3.80, $2.30, second; John Powers, 114, (M. Rowan,) $2.80, third. Time—0:51 4-5. Caljer, We Win, and Callao also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For 3-year-olds and upward, purse $600, claiming, six furlongs. Genevieve B., 105 pounds, (Doyle,) $26.40, $11.40, $5.60, won; Poor Butterfly, 103, (Ericson,) $14, $6.90, second; Sam Pickett, 108, (Mooney,) $3.10, third. Time—1:17 4-5. Ormlos, Miss Burgomaster, Frozen Glen, Senator Broderick, and Rough Weather also ran.

THIRD RACE.—For 4-year-olds and upward, purse $600, five and a half furlongs. Dr. Campbell, 111 pounds, (Mergler,) $11.30, $5.80, $3.80, won; Viley, 115, (Rice,) $26, $15.70, second; Scarpia 2d, 113, (Doyle,) $8.19, third. Time—1:10 4-5. Interrex, Sorcerer 2d, Stalwart Van, Anita, Owaga, Refugee, C. M. Johnson, Mico Girl, and Carbide also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—The Liberty Bond, for 3-year-olds and upward, the purse $800, one mile. All Smiles, 118 pounds, (Rice,) $9.60, $4.80, $3.50, won; Graphic, 105, (McAtee,) $5.60, $3.90, second; Woodward, 112, (Hopkins,) $2.70, third. Time—1:44 2-5. Obulus and Irregular also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—For 3-year-olds and upward, foaled in Canada, claiming, purse $800, one mile and seventy yards. Silk Bird, 110 pounds, (Kummer,) $3.50, $2.80, $2.30, won; Red Post, 113, (Larg,) $9.50, $4.90, second; Garish Sun, 107, (Rodriguez,) $3, third. Time—1:54. SADDLE HORSES ARE SOLD.

A consignment of thirteen saddle horses belonging to Robert Moreland of Lexington, Ky., brought $5,745 at auction last night in the show ring at Durland's Riding Academy. This sum was realized chiefly through the spirited bidding which marked the early part of the auction. The first three horses offered on the block brought $2,275, but thereafter no other top-notch sales were recorded.

Katherine Clifford, a chestnut mare of 15½ hands, foaled in 1912 and bred in the purple, was the first offering under the hammer, and after a spirited bidding bee she was knocked down to Mrs. J. Reynolds for $1,050. Next came Julian Eltinge, a bay gelding, 16 hands, 5 years old, catalogued as a weight carrying show prospect. The highest price of the sale was paid for the gelding, which was finally sold to Miss Clara S. Peck for $1,500. Louise Huff, a bay mare of 15 hands, 5 years old, was the third offering, and was purchased by Martin Beck for $725.

Some of the other horses sold and their prices were: Fagan, bay gelding, 15½ hands, 7 years old, $300, to A. Hauter; Charming Prince, bay gelding, 15½ hands, 5 years old, $375, to George L. Shearer, and Fairfield, 15½ hands, 7 years old, $450, to Charles E. Butler.

New Bill to Kill Prize Fights.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Prize fighting would be taxed out of existence by a bill introduced today by Representative Blanton of Texas. Each spectator would be required to pay a tax of $25, and 75 per cent. of receipts, exclusive of the $25 tax, would go to the Government.

GIANTS EARN A TIE IN ABRIDGED GAME

Score Is 7 to 7 in Five-Inning Contest with Cleveland—Demaree Has Bad Day.

Special to The New York Times.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., April 9.—The Giants and Cleveland Americans played to a 7 to 7, five-inning tie game at Camp Shelby today. It was rather a farcical affair, as the Giants were late in arriving, and cut the contest short to catch an early train.

Ground conditions also were very bad, as the outfield was in a hollow. In addition a heavy wind blew volumes of dust into the players' eyes, and at times the outfielders were scarcely visible.

McGraw did not make the trip, but left the team in the care of Captain Fletcher, who got a tie game out of what appeared to be another rout. After Cleveland knocked out six runs in the second inning, it looked like another walkover, but New York recovered and drove in a like number.

Al Demaree pitched the full five innings and did poorly, but no pitcher could show much under such adverse conditions. Coumbe, Cleveland's lone left-hander, steadied, following New York's big inning, and only one man reached base thereafter. Having gone through the first three games of the series without a hit, Heinie Zimmerman got a double in the second inning, which drove in two runs. Tris Speaker was the real batting star today with two doubles and a single. Benny Kauff again hurt his right heel, running out an infield grounder, and was obliged to limp out of the game in the second inning.

LOCAL RIVALS MEET TODAY.

Fordham and Columbia to Play on Maroon Diamond.

Fordham's home baseball season will be ushered in this afternoon when the Columbia and Fordham nines meet in the first game of their annual home-and-home baseball series. Neither team was able to get on the diamond yesterday, but as several games have already been played they are prepared for today's conflict.

Tommy Farrell will likely be on the mound for Columbia, with Dutch Koenig being held in reserve. Jim McQuade, the Fordham veteran, will pitch for the Bronx collegians, and Scanlan will catch.

SOUTHERN GUNNERS LEAD.

Win Amateur Trapshooting Laurels at Pinehurst.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 9.—The North and South amateur trapshooting tournament at Pinehurst was won today by the Southern marksmen, the leading trio finishing with a total of 522 out of 600, as against 519 for the three high guns from the North.

The winning team comprised T. T. Todd of Greenwood, S. C., 178; J. Allen, Charlotte, N. C., 173; Charles Nicholls, Charlotte, 171. The leading Northerners were B. V. Covert, Lockport, N. Y., who was high gun for the two days at 180; Jay V. Hall, 171, and Charles T. Crocker, Fitchburg, Mass., 168.

WRESTLERS COME TO TERMS

Arrangements for the proposed wrestling match between Ed (Strangler) Lewis of Lexington, Ky., and Joe Stecher of Nebraska will probably be completed today. Both grapplers, it is reported, have agreed to terms sent them by wire and the promoters expect to receive the signed agreements today. Then the question of a date for the match at Madison Square Garden will receive attention.

Lewis is now at Del Monte, Cal., resting and occasionally indulging in light gymnasium work. He is reported in good condition and ready to commence active training for the match. Stecher is at his home in Dodge, Neb., awaiting word to come to this city.

COCHRAN INCREASES LEAD OVER YAMADA

A series of ups and downs was provided yesterday in the billiard match which Koji Yamada and Welker Cochran are playing at Maurice Daly's Academy, but withall, Cochran succeeded in increasing his advantage of the first day until he is now leading by a total score of 1,200 to 903. There was an equal division of honors in the two games played. Yamada recovered some of his cunning and defeated Cochran in the afternoon struggle by 421 to 300. This advantage, however, was only temporary, for Cochran came forth with a bit of play in the evening game that sent him far ahead of the Nipponese, the score being 300 to 138 in his favor.

In the afternoon game yesterday Cochran slipped back to mediocre billiards. He could not get in stroke, and the counts were for the most part in small figures. It seemed that Cochran was a trifle careless in his work, and this may account for some of the mishaps which beset his path during the game. Repeatedly he slipped up on easy shots which were almost beyond the possibility of being missed. It was not that he was playing them too softly, but rather that he was not taking the care that is always necessary to insure a continuation of a run to high figures.

The evening game found Cochran in better stroke and he gave a touch of interesting balkline play in which there was nestled a count of 138, the highest run that the match has yet brought forth. Several other big clusters contributed to Cochran's victory and Yamada's discouragement. The Japanese secured only 108 points in all and his success in the afternoon was more than nullified. Cochran averaged an even 25, while Yamada fell slightly below 10.

The scores:

Afternoon Game.

Boston and New York Boxers Will Compete in Crescent Tourney.

The Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn will close its amateur boxing season on April 25 with an intercity tournament between boxers of this city and Boston. Four classes have been listed for competition, and the officials expect that a team of New England Association champions will oppose the title holders of the Metropolitan Association. The weights will be 118, 125, 135, and 145 pounds.

The club's season point trophy, which is awarded annually to the club whose representatives score the greatest number of points in the Crescent A. C. events, will be awarded at the close of the tournament.

A. A. B. A. Tourney Starts.

Play in the first tournament held under the auspices of the newly formed American Amateur Billiard Association began last night, when two matches were contested in the three-cushion event for the Metropolitan championship. In a match at Thum's Academy, N. W. White of Daly's defeated Harry Frisch of Thum's by a score of 40 to 31. Henry Frantzen, representing Doyle's, was the second victor. He defeated J. Cosgrove of the Jefferson Billiard Academy by 40 to 35 in a match at the Jefferson room.

Wilde-Astey Bout Postponed.

Following the receipt of a cablegram from A. H. Taylor, director of the Liverpool Stadium, Liverpool, England, Joe Jacobs, manager of Dave Astey, announced last night that the proposed boxing exhibition between Astey and Jimmy Wilde, the sensational little English flyweight, had been postponed. In the cablegram Director Taylor announced that Wilde's regiment had been summoned to France because of the big drive. This necessitated a postponement until Sept. 2, when Wilde will receive a furlough.

LAGONIA IS BEATEN FOR AMATEUR TITLE

BOSTON, April 9.—Martin Burke of New Orleans was the star of the National A. A. U. boxing championships here tonight. Two titles went to him, one in the heavyweight class, when he defeated P. Searle, a soldier from Camp Devens, and the other in the 158-pound class, when he won from Sam Lagonia, New York, on a referee's decision after the judges were unable to agree. This latter bout was the best of the tournament.

The championships were well distributed. New York and Boston gained two championships. New Orleans had one champion, but two titles; Camp Devens and Philadelphia each obtained one title. There were two knockouts in the finals.

The summaries:

Good Waist Trade.

High-collared and brilliantly colored washable waists in printed organdies are reported to be selling in very substantial quantities. Buyers from many parts of the country are said to be in town just now looking for late Spring and Summer merchandise, and they all seem to be well inclined toward waists of the sort mentioned. White organdie in very simplified and neat-looking effects is reported to be coming back strong, and most of the local manufacturers are feeling optimistic over the prospects for a very general trade during the next month or six weeks.

Silks Selling at Retail.

The retail trade in this city reports that silks in the popular weaves and colorings have been moving over the counter during the last week or two in very good volume. Any bargains that are offered at reduced prices to stimulate trade do not go without takers very long. And the regular trade is not lagging any, but in many cases is reported to be going ahead of last year's record of sales. Both light and dark foulards in more or less conventional designs are popular, and georgette, chiffons, satins, taffetas and various wash silks are well sought.

Gray Goods Prices Still Higher.

Gray goods prices went still higher in the local market yesterday, accompanied by some active buying. One of the features was the selling, for May delivery, of 40-inch 2.85-yard sheetings at 31 cents. This is a full cent higher than these goods sold on Monday for shipment through the second half of this year. For shipments running from May to January 38½-inch 64-60s were sold at 18½ cents. For April-May 64-56s in the same width 17½ cents was paid and 18 cents is now asked. Bids of 16 cents for April-May lots of 38½-inch 60-48s brought out few, if any, goods, as the mills were asking a quarter more than that for these positions. Thirty-nine-inch 80 squares sold for delivery through this month and next at 24½ cents, and May-November 39-inch 68-72s brought 20 cents. This is the way print-cloth prices closed:

Very Slight Distinction.

The dividing line between semi-formal and formal evening gowns seems to be growing constantly less and less distinguishable. Many very beautiful and elaborate creations, which, nevertheless, go under the head of semi-formal evening apparel, are being made up with metal trimmings and fabrics, all of which are very much in vogue in the full formal evening attire. Tulle also is extensively used for drapery and trimming on these semi-formal frocks. There is said to be a very considerable demand for this type of garment, which also serves very nicely as a dinner gown.

Better Grades of Neckwear Sell.

The neckwear trade in this city is reported to be showing a very keen demand for the better grades of merchandise. In some quarters it is held that the market for the very cheap lines has almost entirely disappeared. Sleeveless guimpes in fine net or in the sheerer silk weaves are very much in demand, and it is said that high collars on these are preferred. In line with the tendency toward stand up collars, stocks, and jabots of the better sort seem to be well sought.

Ribbons in Separate Skirts.

One of the outstanding features of the latest creations in separate skirts for street and semi-formal wear is the extensive use of ribbons for trimmings and for draped effects. Ribbons are also being employed for girdles, and it is reported that buyers generally are very well impressed with the new offerings. Orders during the early part of the week, it is said, have been particularly plentiful. Pleated skirts, which give a narrow effect while still allowing ample freedom of movement, seem to be very popular in many sections.

Hard Coal Production Larger.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that anthracite production, having recovered from the slump incidental to the Easter holidays, is again on a heavy basis. Receipts at tidewater, which last week reflected the lessened mining activity, are getting back where they were during the second half of March, when the local piers were handling hard coal at the rate of 7,000 cars a week. In the bituminous trade there has been no noticeable improvement, either from the standpoint of the operators or the wholesale distributers.

BUSINESS NOTES.

S. Steinfeld & Co., 43 West Twenty-third Street, have added another floor to their present quarters, making six floors in all now occupied by them in this building.

The J. M. Smyth Merchandise Company of Chicago has discontinued its New York office, formerly at 141 Fifth Avenue.

Lend Him A Hand
BUY LIBERTY BONDS

Invest in 4¼% Liberty Bonds

YOUR Government guarantees 4¼% on every dollar you invest in Liberty Bonds and gives you the whole United States as security for the return of your money, 100 cents on the dollar.

Did you ever hear of a better and surer investment plan?

Furthermore, the dollars you invest in Liberty Bonds are used to help our boys to fight; to supply them with guns, ammunition, airplanes and other supplies necessary to win this war.

Look at it this way: You have to pay a premium to have your house and life insured. In Liberty Bonds, Uncle Sam pays you 4¼% interest on the money you lend to insure your safety—your liberty. Is that fair enough?

You would fight to the hilt if you could; then buy to the hilt and let your money fight for you and yours. Be a soldier at home—help win the war—sacrifice something—everything—all. Our boys over there are sacrificing even their lives for you. Will you do your share at home? Don't stop a minute—act at once—an hour's delay has lost many a life.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Price changes were again irregular on the New York Stock Exchange and the total sales so small as to indicate almost complete indifference on the part of the public. Here and there the list has been enlivened a little by pool operations, but it is difficult to get customers interested while the outcome of the battle in Picardy remains in doubt. On a turnover of more than 15,000 shares United States Steel moved through a range of ⅝, which about measures the day's net price changes.

The selling of Liberty 4s continues on a scale that can hardly be explained by any of the reasons so far brought forward. Early in yesterday's session the price got down to 95.90, more than two full points under the best price made this year, and within one-fifth of a point of the low record made a few weeks ago. In part the selling of this issue has come from well meaning individuals with a mistaken idea that they are helping the new campaign by releasing funds for use in subscribing to the 4¼s. Selling of this nature has come to light where corporations, unable to increase their indebtedness in order to buy the new issue, have mistakenly thought to help the new campaign by converting bonds on hand into cash.

That such selling, despite the creditable motive back of it, is clearly detrimental to the success of the new offering is plain. For the most part the 4¼s must be taken by those who already hold bonds of the previous issues; in many instances the owners are still makin payments on earlier subscriptions. They cannot understand the weakness in the 4s and naturally hesitate to obligate themselves to the full limit of their ability in subscribing for the next issue. As between holding intact an original investment in the 4s and selling to free funds for the 4¼s the greatest service is performed by the investor who clings to the bonds he has.

There were also signs yesterday of liquidation of standard corporation bonds, noticeably those of some of the older railroad issues, for the purpose of accumulating balances to be used in buying the new Government issue. The rise in interest rates on the Government loans has worked a downward readjustment in the securities placed prior to the war.

The Stock Exchange authorities have taken wise precautions with a view to discovering to what extent, if any, Government bonds have been depressed by short selling, and will soon be in possession of information on the strength of which they can act to end such an abuse if it has played a part in the recent decline. It is almost apparent, however, that selling from discreditable motives has not been much of a factor in the situation.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Fear That Man-Power Scheme Will Further Cut Depleted Staffs.

LONDON, April 9.—The stock market maintained a firm undertone today, but fears were expressed that the man-power scheme will further cut down the already depleted staffs in the financial district. British funds were good, especially colonials, while Japanese bonds were firm and some Spanish issues reached record figures on the decline in exchange.

Interest in the other sections was confined to tin mines, in which there was a large business at rising prices.

Trading Quiet on Bourse.

PARIS, April 9.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 59 francs for cash; exchange on London, 27 francs 18½ centimes; 5 per cent. loan, 88 francs 45 centimes.

TO OPEN MEXICAN SMELTER.

American Smelting & Refining Co. Will Enlarge Output.

The American Smelting and Refining Company has reopened its smelter at Chihuahua, Mexico, after a suspension of several months, due to the activities of bandits. The management is planning to expand the smelting capacity of the plant substantially, including the erection of a new copper smelter and lead plant.

It was reported yesterday that the company had arranged with the local Government of the State of Aguascalientes to contribute $1,600 gold monthly to further the restoration of stable conditions in the State. At the American Smelting and Refining offices it was said that no official information in respect to the payment had been received, although negotiations had been on for some time to effect an agreement with the Mexican authorities in respect to a tax law recently passed. The law provided that a production levy of $9,000 gold monthly be made on the company. When the law was enacted, the smelter was closed down pending the result of a suit brought in the Mexican Supreme Court to test the constitutionality of the measure.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Conversion of Liberty Bonds.

Statements in a paragraph headed "Value of Liberty 4s" published in this column yesterday were in part erroneous. The twenty-five-year 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan, which are converted into bonds bearing 4 per cent. interest, will not have a maturity of ten years, as is the case with the 4¼s of the Third Liberty Loan, but will retain their original date of payment, namely, Nov. 15, 1942. Likewise, the thirty-year 3½ per cents. of the First Loan, if converted into the 4¼s, will mature on the date fixed for that issue, namely, June 15, 1947. The 3½ per cent. bonds, which have already been converted into 4s and which will be exchanged for bonds bearing 4¼ per cent. interest, will mature on June 15, 1947. The 3½ per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan may be converted into any subsequent loan bearing a higher rate of interest, while the 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Loan and the so-called "conversion 4s" are convertible only into the next subsequent loan bearing a higher rate of interest, namely, into 4¼ per cent. bonds.

Since Secretary McAdoo issued on Feb. 6 a statement requesting banks and trust companies to set aside 1 per cent. of their resources each week for investment in Treasury certificates of indebtedness a much wider distribution of these short-term Government obligations has been obtained. While for the issue of Jan. 22 the total number of subscribers was 6,364, for the issue of Feb. 8 applications were received from nearly double that number, or 12,550. The offering of Feb. 27 brought responses from a still larger number, namely, 14,472 institutions. Figures for the issue of March 22 are not yet available. Payments on the latest offering of 4½ per cent. certificates are due today.

Railroad Funds and Private Banks.

The intimation in Washington dispatches that Director General McAdoo will not permit railroad companies to keep their funds in future on deposit with private banking firms, but will compel them to transfer their accounts to national banks or trust companies, where they will be more directly under control, apparently did not surprise the people most interested in Wall Street. It was generally conceded that only one big banking house will be hard hit by such an order, in respect of loss of deposits, as most of the other big private banking firms interested in railroads do not keep the funds of the lines whose financial agents they are in their own banks, but in national banks or trust companies in whose management they are interested.

How It Was Received.

The idea that railroad funds should not be kept by private banking firms apparently originated with Samuel Untermyer, who in his report of his investigation into the "money power" gave some elaborate statistics of the amount of these funds and the power thereby wielded by a small coterie of bankers. Mr. Untermyer himself is not in town, but several bankers suggested that Mr. McAdoo might have obtained the idea from him. On the other hand, the head of one famous private banking house, who has played a very prominent part in reorganizing and financing numerous railroads in the last twenty years, declared that in the existing circumstances the order was an eminently proper one. "The Government does not deposit its own funds with private banks," he declared. "It keeps them with national banks and trust companies, members of the Federal Reserve System. Now that the railroads are under Government control, railroad funds are virtually in the same position. It is only proper that they also should be kept only in Government depositaries."

The Unfavorable View.

Another very big man in the railroad banking world declared that not only was it obvious that Mr. McAdoo's intention was to deprive the big banking houses of their position and influence in railroad affairs, but to leave them none of the functions they had formerly exercised, in financing or reorganizing roads especially. "The day for private bankers to go railroading is over," he declared, "at least for the time. We don't expect to have anything more to do in that line. Beginning with the Denver & Rio Grande, Mr. McAdoo is apparently going to look after all reorganizations and everything else."

Another Aspect of Railroad Financing.

The Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company recently defaulted the interest on the Rio Grande Western bonds, for no reason save that all its current earnings belong to the Government, its free cash is under attachment, and the Government has paid it nothing on account of rental. Yesterday another result of the slowness of Government action in this respect was apparently revealed, according to general opinion, when the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, it was announced, would soon put on the market equipment trust certificates, probably up to $10,000,000, to obtain new cars badly needed. It is understood this action was made necessary for the same reason as embarrasses the Denver—lack of ready cash until the Government begins to pay its rental.

Premiums and Acceptances.

In response to an inquiry the Federal Reserve Board has written a letter saying that a draft drawn by a casualty company against a policy holder for premiums could hardly be said to be a draft by the seller on the purchaser of goods sold and would not, in the opinion of the board, come within the board's present definition of a trade acceptance. "It is, of course," says the letter, "within the power of the board to extend this definition so as to include drafts drawn for insurance, services rendered, &c., if it determines this to be advisable. It would, however, require rather a forced construction to treat a draft drawn for an insurance premium as a trade acceptance under the present definition of the board."

Worth Fighting For!

SHALL this little girl grow up in the sort of American home we know, healthy and happy? Shall she have the advantage of living and learning in a free land, under free institutions? Shall such children develop into the Liberty-loving citizens that a free America may be proud of?

The question which today confronts America as a nation, and you as an individual, is whether or not a FREE AMERICA is worth fighting for!

Are American children in this and all future generations to receive unimpaired the legacy of freedom of which we are now the custodians, or shall their country be turned over bodily to the brutal, rapacious, power-mad enemy which has forced us into this war? This question cannot be answered by word of mouth, but by deeds alone.

SALES OF COPPER INCREASE

The Phelps Dodge Corporation, which succeeded the metals producing firm of Phelps, Dodge & Co. last May, reports net earnings of $23,554,338 in 1917, a decline of $576,567 from the aggregate total of the various subsidiary concerns in 1916. After writing off for depreciation and depletion a sum of $4,500,000 greater than in the preceding year, the corporation had a balance of $16,940,379 for dividends, a decline of $4,033,884. The balance was equal to $37.64 a share of stock, compared with $48.83 in 1916.

The annual statement issued yesterday showed the effect of higher costs than in 1916, a factor which was aggravated by labor troubles which reduced production heavily for several months. The corporation sold 290,522,569 pounds of copper, an increase of 43,200,000 pounds over 1916, and the selling price of 26.67 cents, delivered at New York, was 2.19 cents higher than the average of the year before. The copper produced by the company's own mines amounted to 153,974,692 pounds, an increase of 1,711,037 pounds. The difference between production and sales was accounted for by copper bought from other concerns, or sold on commission, while the corporation drew upon its accumulated stocks, apparently, to a total of more than 2,000,000 pounds in order to meet the unusual demand.

"In June and July, labor troubles, fomented at Bisbee by the I. W. W., and at Morenci by the local Mexican union," the statement continued, "served in the case of the Copper Queen branch seriously to affect the ore production, and in the case of the Morenci branch to cause complete suspension of operations for the period of four months. In September the United States Government fixed an arbitrary market price for copper at 23½ cents per pound, which obtained throughout the balance of the year. Owing to the greatly increased production costs, due to the high cost of labor and supplies, and the seriously decreased efficiency of labor, this price caused a certain reduction of output because of the inability to work profitably low-grade ore which previously had allowed a small margin of profit.

"Throughout the year the demand for copper greatly exceeded the supply, and the fluctuations in the price between the maximum of 33¾ cents per pound in the early part of the year and 23½ cents during the last third are indicative of the market conditions and the uncertainty of trade."

The principal features of the income account are set forth in this table, the large increase in mine valuation being made necessary by Government regulations:

Depletion, deprec.	6,613,959	2,056,642
Balance for dividend	16,940,379	21,974,263
Dividends	10,800,000	14,625,000
Surplus	6,140,379	7,349,263

The corporation produced 8,136,356 pounds of lead, 1,524,632 ounces of silver, and 24,423 ounces of gold, compared with 10,404,341 pounds of lead, 1,642,055 ounces of silver, and 28,873 ounces of gold in 1916. During the year the 32 per cent. in dividends paid were made up of 24 per cent. from profits and 8 per cent. distributed from the reserve for depletion. In 1916 the dividends amounted to 32½ per cent. on the 450,000 shares of stock.

The balance sheet noted that accounts and wages payable and taxes accrued at the end of the year amounted to $9,523,198, compared with $5,826,777 in the preceding year. The Government's and State's taxes, including the Federal excess profits tax, was $5,857,595, as listed in the expense account of the income statement. Because of the consolidation of properties, the balance sheet showed mines and mining claims valued at $179,630,650, compared with $14,360,059 at the end of the previous fiscal period. The aggregate of fixed assets on Dec. 31, 1917, was $198,534,873, against $39,268,558 before consolidation. Current assets of $33,832,865 were $9,350,000 larger than the year before.

THE COTTON MARKET

Situation Improves, Though Somewhat Unsteady Because of Lack of Trade Support.

In comparison with Monday's market, the local cotton market looked much better yesterday, and, although still somewhat unsteady because of the absence of any noticeable trade support, actually closed with a net gain in the old crop months, the range being from 16 points net higher to 1 point lower, with new crop positions easier. The close was firm, with the tone better than at any time during the day.

It was very largely a speculative market, with feelers put out on both sides, and no one, apparently, venturing any very definite opinion as to what developments would be. As a result prices, opening steady, up from 6 to 15 points, and going up 10 points or so higher, broke about 40 points, going in some months 20 points below Monday's low level. Here they firmed up again, and the market continued to look strong until the close. It is possible that a certain amount of trade buying at bargain levels may have contributed a little toward the final turn, but the impression was general that no trade orders need be expected until the result of today's conference in Washington is known.

The fluctuations, consequently, reflected the reaction of speculative dealers to the combination of reassuring reports on price fixing, the stubborn insistence of Southern holders on their price for the rest of this year's crop, and the outlook for a much better crop next Fall.

No exports were reported yesterday. Southern spot markets were generally unchanged or with only slight price fluctuations.

Hughitt Quits as C. & N. Chairman.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Marvin Hughitt today resigned as Chairman of the board of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad. Stockholders in annual session filled the vacancies on the board caused by the deaths of James Stillman and Zenos Crane by electing E. D. Hulbert, Chicago, and Henry C. McEldowney, Pittsburgh. Six other Directors whose terms expired were re-elected. The Chairmanship was left in abeyance.

ORDERS ICE PLANTS CLOSED

Controller Odell Will Permit Only Six Here to Operate.

After a conference with wholesale and retail dealers in his office yesterday, ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell, State Ice Controller, announced that as a measure of conservation all but six artificial ice plants would have to shut down. The order will be effective beginning next Monday, and the places must remain closed until June 1 or later, if that is deemed necessary.

The Ice Administrator also announced the prices at which ice shall be sold wholesale and retail. He pointed out that the closing of the ice plants was a matter of conservation of ammonia and coal. The plants which will be allowed to operate are the Knickerbocker Ice Company plants at Flatbush Avenue and Powell Street, Brooklyn; Glendale Consumers Ice Company, Glendale, N. Y.; Richmond Hill Coal and Ice Company, Richmond Hill; Jamaica Consumers Ice Company, Jamaica; Bronx Consumers Ice Company, West Farms Road, and the Knickerbocker Ice Company plant at 134th Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

"The 1,500,000 tons of surplus ice under the control of the State," said Mr. Odell, "is to be apportioned among the artificial ice dealers and the Hoover Committee, so that if this plan is effected all of the ice which the State has contracted for will be absorbed by the artificial manufacturers and the natural ice dealers."

These ice prices were given out by Mr. Odell: To wholesale dealers, $4.40 a ton. This price is about 40 cents above the gross price for last year. The retail price runs from 50 cents a hundredweight for families down to 30 cents for cellar trade to resell. By this action, Mr. Odell said, the family trade will be under no heavier a burden than they were last year, while the wholesalers have taken on an additional cost, and this additional cost will be absorbed by the larger consumers of ice.

The Commissioner of Markets, upon whom is placed the responsibility of free distribution of ice, was given the price of $3 a ton at the barge, which is the lowest price quoted, and it is $1 below the barge price last year.

The conference was held in Mr. Odell's office, 120 Broadway. As Ice Administrator Mr. Odell holds an appointment from Washington as well as one from Governor Whitman. He also holds the power to enforce his orders.

Need Autos for Upton Service.

William Guggenheim, Chairman of the Army and Navy Committee of the American Defense Society, announced yesterday that his committee had received $50 for the fund to be used to supply automobile omnibuses to the American Automobile Association for their free Sunday automobile service to Camp Upton. The committee last Sunday supplied a forty-passenger omnibus, which was used to convey soldiers' relatives to Camp Upton. Mr. Guggenheim's committee appeals to automobile owners to donate the use of their cars and to citizens to contribute to the American Defense Society's funds, which will be used to supply buses for camp auto service.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Advices from the Northwest said that weather conditions were favorable for the seeding of Spring wheat which is rapidly approaching completion. The Food Administration is highly elated over the very favorable crop prospects at the present time, and has ventured the prediction that if the crop gets through the season with its present indication there will be enough wheat to take care of home requirements and feed the Allies.

RYE.

CORN.

The corn market has assumed a waiting position and operations were largely in the form of evening up of contracts. Trading in the new contract in the West will be inaugurated on Thursday. The trade believes that the price for the July position will conform with the present price of the cash article and that a broader hedging market will result. Cash prices in the West were firm, and in some cases 5 points higher, with the low grades in better demand. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.90½; No. 4 yellow, $1.83½; No. 3 white, $2.20¼, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

The oats market was unsettled, and, after showing early firmness, prices eased off and closed ⅛@½c net lower. Chicago announced that the new contract will be adopted by the board on Thursday and voted upon by the members next Tuesday. The export demand was less active, and it was said that offers at reduced premiums were not accepted. The local cash market was easy. Natural quoted at $1.03½@$1.04½, clipped white, $1.04½@$1.07, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

There was a very quiet trade in the market for hog products, but prices were steadier owing to less pressure to sell and prompted by a somewhat firmer tone to the hog position, where prices were practically unchanged from the previous day. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 27,000, estimated for Wednesday, 30,000. Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 18,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Business in the market for cottonseed oil consisted of sales of 300 barrels for May delivery at 20 cents and exchanges of 3,000 barrels from May to July on an even basis. Otherwise the market was entirely nominal.

COFFEE.

Weakness developed at the opening of the coffee market yesterday with first prices showing declines of 8 to 15 points under liquidation which was inspired by reports that the Government had furnished the first steamer in its plan for replenishing supplies of coffee by larger importations from Brazil. This first flurry of selling was followed by quick reactions, however, and much of the early loss was regained, the close being steady at a net decline of only 4 to 7 points on a fair volume of business. The local spot market declined ⅛c due to the lower futures prices, but the market was quiet and prices more or less nominal.

The Brazil cable to the exchange reported the Rio spot market unchanged, while there was an advance of 100 reis in Santos. Santos futures were unchanged. Receipts at the two ports were 29,000 bags against 17,000 bags a year ago. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The fact that shipments of raw sugar from Cuba have been disappointingly small and not up to expectations has been due to the limitation of transportation. The weekly Cuban figures now show a slight increase in exports from the island the last week, being 67,967 tons, the bulk of which will reach United States Atlantic ports. Sailing vessels as well as additional steamers have been added to the sugar carrying trade and it is now believed that arrivals will be more regular and that local refining interests will be able to work their plants at full capacity in the very near future. In the meantime distribution continues moderate from day to day; but a slight improvement is noticeable. The International Sugar Committee made no purchases of Cuban sugars, but reported sales of 75,000 bags Porto Ricos April shipment, at 6.005c, cost, insurance, and freight.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,399 packages. A stronger feeling developed toward the close Monday and yesterday morning an advance of ½c was established on most grades of fresh creamery. Trade is not quite so active at the higher rates, but there is a generally firm feeling. Renovated is still dragging. Ladles dull. Packing stock weak. Creamery, higher than extras, pound, 42@42½c; extras, (92 score,) 41½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 40@41c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38@39½c; thirds, 36½@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 43@43½c; extras, 42@42½c; firsts, 40@41½c; seconds, 38½@39½c; creamery, held, as to quality, 34@40c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 41@41½c; good to prime, 38@40c; common to fair, 34@37½c; renovated, extras, 38½@39c; firsts, 37@38c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35½@36½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@35c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 31@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32@32¼c; lower grades, 28@31c.

EGGS.—45,008 cases. Arrivals continue very large, but are showing a considerable decrease as compared with last week. The tone of the market is steadier, with rather more active trading. Most dealers report ability to supply their needs within ranges quoted, but some exceptionally fine marks of Northern regular packings are selling a little above our quotation for firsts which might not pass an official inspection above that grade, although they must be of unusually good size and cleanness. Some sales of storage packed eggs reported in the range quoted; many of the finest marks of Northern goods could not be obtained at our top quotation, but it would be difficult to find buyers for them at any higher price. Nearby white eggs show no material change; much of the business is in good size lots of mixed colors at 38@39c, only selections of fancy stocks reaching top quotations. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 37@38c; storage packed firsts, 35¼@36½c; regular packed extra firsts, 34½@35½c; regular packed firsts, 32¼@34c; seconds and poorer, 30@32c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 30½@31½c; No. 2, 29@30c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 29@30c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 38@40c; ordinary to prime, 37@38c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 36@38c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 36@38c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 37@38c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 33@35½c; duck eggs, 45@55c; goose eggs, per dozen, 60@70c.

NEW HAVEN SUIT STANDS.

Judge Refuses to Dismiss $165,000,000 Restitution Action.

A motion to dismiss the suit against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company and certain of its Directors for the restitution of $165,000,000, which it is alleged was dissipated, was denied yesterday by Judge Hough of the Federal District Court. The plaintiffs are five minority stockholders, and besides the company the defendants are J. Pierpont Morgan, Herbert L. Satterlee, William P. Hamilton, and Lewis Cass Ledyard, as executors of the will of the late J. Pierpont Morgan; William Rockefeller, Charles M. Pratt, and Mr. Ledyard.

The motion to dismiss was made in behalf of the individual defendants on the ground that as the railroad was a defendant, diversity of citizenship did not figure in the proceedings, and that the suit should have been instituted in the Massachusetts district where the company was incorporated.

MOTOR TRUCK BILL AMENDED

Maximum Weight Is Raised from 5 to 12 1-2 Tons.

Word was received from Albany yesterday at the office of the Motor Truck Club of America, 1,790 Broadway, that the Hewitt bill, regulating motor truck weights for highway use, had been amended to permit a maximum weight of 25,000 pounds, equivalent to twelve and a half tons. Theodore D. Pratt, Executive Secretary of the club, who is in Albany with other representatives, sent word that after conferences with the State Highway and other officials an agreement was reached to amend the bill.

The original bill stipulated that loads over 10,000 pounds would be prohibited, which would have prevented the use of the standard five-ton trucks. Massachusetts allows truck weights up to fourteen tons, and New Jersey fifteen tons.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Union Trust Company of New York by authority of the Board of Trustees has been duly called to be held at the office of the Union Trust Company of New York, 80 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, N. To the 100,000,000 People and the 10,000,000 Bond Holders in America

THERE are now more than 10,000,000 bond holders in the United States, as against only 300,000 a year ago. The sale of the three Liberty Loans has made this a nation of bond buyers—most of them lacking experience in investment and without facilities for safekeeping their securities.

We offer to all investors the following invaluable service:

1. We solicit orders for Liberty Bonds in all denominations (without profit or commission.)
2. We will store Liberty Bonds in our vaults without charge, clipping the coupons, if desired, and remitting to bond holders.
3. We will exchange your 3½ or 4% Liberty Bonds for the 4¼% bonds of the Third Loan.
4. We advise all investors to hold Liberty Bonds until maturity. However, should an emergency make it necessary to turn bonds into cash, we will sell them for the owners at the market price at a nominal charge.
5. Our statistical department is ready at any time to furnish full and accurate information on the various Liberty Loans, their conversion privileges, market, and the like, for the guidance of investors.

We invite all investors to make subscriptions for Liberty Bonds through us and to call at our office at Broadway and Liberty Street and let us explain our Liberty Bond service in further detail. If unable to call, write us today for particulars.

Income Tax Exemption as Head of Family Not Permitted, Roper Rules.

MAKES SOME EXCEPTIONS

Where Man or Wife Is Absent Temporarily, as on a Visit, Exemption Will Be Accorded.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Another knotty question coming up under the income tax law was disposed of today by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper. It was whether a husband and wife who live apart can claim the statutory exemptions of the head of a family or the joint exemption of a man and wife. The decision is that the man who does not maintain a household and live with his wife is in the status of a single man, and not entitled to the exemption. Where man or wife is absent temporarily, either traveling or visiting, or where one or the other is in a sanitarium, the exemptions provided by law will be recognized. The ruling follows:

"Section 7 of the Income Tax act of Sept. 8, 1916, as amended by the act of Oct. 3, 1917, provides that there shall be allowed as an exemption in the nature of a deduction from the amount of the net income of each citizen or resident of the United States the sum of $3,000, plus $1,000 additional if the person making the return be a head of a family or a married man or woman with a wife or husband living with him or her, except that only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made from the aggregate income of both husband and wife when living together, and plus $200 additional for each child dependent upon such person if under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. Section 3 of the War Income Tax act of October 3, 1917, provides that in the case of the tax imposed by the later act the exemptions of $3,000 and $4,000 provided in Section 7 of the former act shall be, respectively, $1,000 and $2,000.

"Applying only to citizens and residents of the United States, there is accordingly an individual exemption of $3,000, except that if husband and wife live together a joint exemption of $4,000 under the earlier act and $2,000 under the later act is substituted for the several exemptions of $3,000 each under the earlier act and $1,000 each under the later act, and that if the taxpayer be a head of a family, consisting of a person or persons other than a wife or husband alone, his exemption is $4,000 under the earlier act and $2,000 under the later act, plus $200 for each dependent child.

"In the case of a married man or married woman the joint exemption replaces the individual exemptions only if his wife lives with him or her husband lives with her. In the absence of continuous actual residence together, whether or not a man or woman has a wife or husband living with him or her within the meaning of the statute must depend on the character of the separation. If merely occasionally and temporarily a wife is away on a visit or a husband is away on business, the joint home being maintained, the additional exemption applies. The unavoidable absence of a wife or a husband at a sanitarium or asylum on account of illness does not preclude claiming the exemption. If, however, the husband voluntarily and continuously makes his home at one place and the wife hers at another, they are not living together for the purpose of the statute, irrespective of their personal relations.

"A head of a family is a person who actually supports and maintains one or more of the individuals described in Paragraph 153 of the regulations in one household. In the absence of continuous actual residence together, whether or not a person with dependents is a head of a family within the meaning of the statute must depend on the character of the separation. If a child or other dependent is away only temporarily at school or on a visit, the common home being still maintained, the additional exemption applies. If, however, the dependent continuously makes his home elsewhere his benefactor is not the head of a family, irrespective of the question of support.

"Resident aliens claiming exemption because of families or wives residing abroad are not heads of families or married men or women with wives or husbands living with them within the meaning of the statute, and they are in no case entitled to more than their individual exemptions of $3,000 under the earlier act and $1,000 under the later act."

MUST PROVE EXEMPTION.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Religious, charitable and scientific societies that may be exempt from the income tax and not required to file tax returns nevertheless will be asked to file proof of the nature of the organization, so as to establish its exemption. Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper today issued the following ruling:

"The exemption from filing returns and paying income tax of corporations or associations organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific or educational purposes, business leagues, Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade, civic leagues, cemetery companies, and pleasure and recreation clubs is conditional.

"In order to establish exemption and thus be relieved of the duty of filing returns and paying income tax, it is necessary that such organizations as are specified hereinbefore file an affidavit with the Collector of Internal Revenue of the district in which they are located which will show the character of the organization, purpose for which organized, source of income, and its disposition, and whether or not any of its income is credited to surplus or inures or may inure to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

"Upon receipt of the affidavit the Collector will advise the organization whether or not it is exempt. If the Collector is in doubt he will refer the papers to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

"If it is held that the corporation itself is exempt from the income and excess profits taxes, it is not, however, exempt from the withholding requirements nor from furnishing information in accordance with the provisions of the act of Oct. 3, 1917."

SAYS ERIE FINANCES ARE IN GOOD CONDITION

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Erie Railroad Company, held yesterday, retiring Directors were re-elected. President Underwood, in his address, took a very optimistic view both of Government control and of the prospects of the Erie. A resolution was unanimously adopted by the stockholders, declaring that the operating revenue of the Erie for the last three years had been more than sufficient to pay the first preferred dividends, and calling on the Directors to apply for permission from the Director General to pay them.

"After watching the Erie for fifteen years," said Mr. Underwood, "and comparing what it had in the way of business and plant then, with what it has in business and plant today, I am convinced that the stock has greater intrinsic value than ever before.

"For twenty years we have had bad laws; multiplicity of commissions, repression of railroads, and investigations, which have all interfered with the progress of the railroads. The country paid no attention to James J. Hill when he said that its transportation system was breaking down, and that billions of dollars would be needed to build it up again to the nation's requirements. The transportation system did break down, and when the Government took over the railroads it was high time.

"The railroads will come out from under Government control better off than ever before. Baiting of the railroads has heretofore been an entertaining pastime, but it was a very costly one to railroad stockholders, and to the country at large. Under Government control we shall have, instead of baiting, intelligent supervision and sound improvement in their physical condition. Competition will be done away with, and the evils that it brought in its train so far as operating efficiency was concerned. Many inequitable customs that have grown up in railroad operation will be eliminated.

"The railroad air will be purified all around. For the first time, indeed, today railroad affairs are being entirely administered by railroad men—our three Regional Directors are all trained railroad men, not political hacks."

N., C. & St. L. Road's Year.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 9.—The annual report of the Nashville, Chattanooge & St. Louis Railroad submitted to stockholders today, showed operating revenues of $15,194,755, an excess of $1,500,000 over those of 1916. Operating expenses for 1917 were $11,550,031, as against $9,749,810 for the previous year. The net income for the year was $2,839,316, as against $3,056,935 for the previous year.

ELLIOTT ON N. P. BOARD.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, held yesterday, retiring Directors were re-elected, and the election of Howard Elliott and George T. Slade as Directors to succeed, respectively, William S. Tod, resigned, and Grant B. Schley, deceased, was ratified. Mr. Elliott was President of the Northern Pacific before he became President, and later Chairman of the Board of Directors, of the New Haven. The meeting was adjourned until April 30, in order to lay before the stockholders the contract entered into with the Railroad Administration for Government control of the road, which, it is hoped, will be complete by that time. The annual report of the company will also probably be ready for submittal to the stockholders on that date.

President Hannaford said that, on the whole, conditions as affecting the Northern Pacific and in its territory were such as to give confidence for the future. The company had suffered, like others, from uncertain labor conditions, the lure of higher wages in war factories, the call to the colors, and the draft, but had, he believed, been more successful than some other roads in coping with this situation. Mr. Hannaford was particularly optimistic regarding the crop outlook in the Northwest, which was far better than that of last season, while the weather so far had been excellent.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Fractional net losses in stocks marked the close of the market yesterday on the Exchange. The dullness which was notable during the greater part of the session gave way to activity in the final hour. In this period there were slight price recessions, but all issues showed improvement over the weak opening quotations.

Today's Obligation

It is to help the men "over there" win the war. To this everything is now secondary. Our future security and freedom are at stake.

The most effective way to help, for those who are not contributing their service in the field, is to lend the Government the money needed for the war—to buy Liberty Bonds.

This Company's facilities and services are at the disposal of any intending subscriber to the Third Liberty Loan, or anyone desiring information regarding it—without charge or commission.

To Holders of

UNITED RAILWAYS 4s OF ST. LOUIS

If the ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen March 26th is accepted by the Company, the bond and stock capitalization of the Company must be reduced to $60,000,000 to make the ordinance effective; therefore in order that the holders of General 4s may be in a position to protect themselves against any possible default of any of the underlying bonds ($3,500,000 of which fall due on June 1st, next), and against any plan of reorganization that might be proposed which would be prejudicial to the 4s, we again urge the holders of the 4s to deposit their bonds immediately, with any of the depositories named below.

We invite inquiries from bondholders who may desire further details regarding the ordinance, or the affairs of the Company.

A Deposit Agreement will be forwarded on application.

M'INTYRE ELECTED, IS JURY'S VERDICT

Members Decide Ballots Produced for Recount Had Been Changed.

NEW TRIAL IS ASKED FOR

Ex-Judge Delehanty, Failing in This Move, Will Take Case to Court of Appeals.

The jury before Supreme Court Justice Sawyer that for two months has been hearing the suit by James A. Delehanty to oust John F. McIntyre from his seat on the General Sessions bench, in the course of which a recount of the ballots showed that Delehanty received 826 votes more than McIntyre, yesterday returned a verdict upholding Judge McIntyre's election, after an hour's deliberation. The original canvass of the vote by the Board of Canvassers showed McIntyre's election by 816 votes.

The jury's verdict was based on its belief that the ballots when produced in court for the recount were not in the same condition as when counted by the election officials. Justice Sawyer said in his charge: "The vital queston is, what was the true count of the ballots on election night? If they were tampered with or contaminated, then you are the judges of the fact."

Counsel for ex-Judge Delehanty moved to set aside the verdict of the jury as against the weight of the evidence, and the court will hear argument on the application this morning. The members of the jury thanked Justice Sawyer for his courtesy and presented a small clock to the court. It was stated yesterday the jury was composed of six Republicans, three Democrats, and three independents. The foreman was Charles J. Henner, Jr., of 130 West Fifty-second Street, and one of the members was Adolph Zukor, film producer.

Several of Judge McIntyre's friends gathered in his chambers at the Criminal Court Building to congratulate him. He said: "I have no statement to make except that I am very much gratified at the verdict of the jury. I feel that justice has been done. I never had any doubt of the outcome because I knew from the beginning that I had won."

Whether or not Justice Sawyer grants the application to set aside the verdict and directs a new trial, the case will be appealed, but is not likely to be decided by the Court of Appeals before the end of the year.

NURSES' CAMP AT VASSAR.

Four scholarships, each for $350, have been given to the Vassar Training Camp for Nurses, to be held at the college this Summer, by the class of '13 of Vassar, in memory of their classmate Miss Anabel Roberts, who was the first American girl to lose her life in active service at the front. The scholarships are to cover the expenses of the three months' course at Vassar and the personal expenses of the student for the subsequent two years in hospital training. Miss Roberts died last January while on duty at a British base hospital near Etretat, France. She was a graduate of the Training School for Nurses of the Presbyterian Hospital.

The camp to be held at Vassar this Summer will be a Plattsburg for nurses, under the auspices of the Red Cross and the Council for National Defense. It will also prepare educated women to fill administrative and executive positions made vacant by the abnormal demands upon the nursing profession, both at home and abroad. The Trustees of Vassar have offered the use of the grounds, buildings, and equipment for the Summer for this training, and the Red Cross has given $75,000 to cover the operating expenses from June 24 to Sept. 13.

Foremost specialists in medicine and nursing will make up the Faculty of the camp, and in its equipment and facilities for instruction it will be on a par with the highest standards of the best professional schools. Applications to enter are received from graduates of all approved colleges, beginning with the class of '18 and going back ten years. The age must be from 21 to 30 and the health sound. The fee is $95, which covers cost of tuition and maintenance, pupils furnishing their own uniforms.

REFINED OIL SHORTAGE THREATENED IN EAST

Mark L. Requa, Government Oil Director, held a conference yesterday with the Petroleum War Service Committee at the offices of the Standard Oil Company, 26 Broadway, to consider more efficient distribution of the country's stock of fuel oil. It was said that a few refiners were experiencing difficulty in getting supplies of oil to their plants, due to poor transportation facilities. Adequate storage facilities for consumers was another matter up for consideration. On this point Mr. Requa said:

"We are getting up a list of consumers of fuel oil and want them to provide adequate storage facilities. We want them to provide storage facilities to meet sixty-day requirements. Some of these consumers are using tank cars in their yards for storage purposes, drawing upon the cars for the oil as required. This practice ties up cars urgently needed for quick transportation movement. With proper storage facilities, consumers would not be under the necessity of tying up the rolling stock wanted to carry oil."

The Oil Director said a shortage of refined oil products was threatened this year on the Eastern seaboard. Illustrating this, he said the Presidential Refinery, at Baltimore, was out of oil. Mr. Requa expects to meet the President of this concern here today and see if it is possible to obtain a supply. Mr. Requa will continue his conference with the oil men here today and return to Washington tonight.

Mr. Requa also held a conference at the New York office of the Oil Division of the Federal Fuel Administration, 42 Broadway, with representatives of the wire rope manufacturing industry from every part of the country. It was decided that a general speeding up of production in the domestic wire rope industry would be necessary if the new oil and gas wells now in course of development for naval and other war purposes were to be properly equipped.

The wire rope representatives told Mr. Requa that the scarcity in wire rope at this time was due to the abnormally large contracts placed by the Government for the navy and army. The conference developed the fact that between 20,000 and 25,000 tons of wire rope would be required to equip the projected enlargements in oil and gas production in the United States. This tonnage the manufacturers present promised to furnish.

Mr. Requa had a word of warning to say to the ropemakers against profiteering. "I find," he said, "that there has been considerable profiteering in wire rope, not by the manufacturers, but by jobbers. This profiteering has amounted to as high as 300 per cent. That practice we will stop wherever found. The provisions of the Lever law under which the Fuel Administration is working will be applied to correct this abuse."

AT THE FUR AUCTION.

Active Bidding for Silver Fox Was the Feature Yesterday.

Active bidding for silver fox, especially the medium grades, featured the second day of the annual Spring sale of raw furs that is now going on in the Masonic Temple here. The competition for these pelts was said by experienced fur men to be the most active ever seen at a local sale, and, when some of the most desirable medium grade skins were under the hammer, the "spotters" and the auctioneer had difficulty in keeping up with the bids.

The highest-priced silver fox sold went to Louis Gassner of San Francisco for $490. Largely due to the farm breeding of these animals, the demand for blacks is not as active as it was some years ago, and black skins that sold here yesterday at $100 to $125 would then have brought several times those amounts. As one buyer put it, "The farm fox has robbed the wild fox of his glory." In addition to Mr. Gassner, silver fox was bought by C. G. Gunther's Sons, Halle Brothers of Cleveland, A. Fisher, H. Jaeckel & Sons, Kaufman & Oberleder, and Konvalinka & Weiss.

The prices obtained for these skins were good generally, and played no small part in raising the total for the two days' selling to about $1,250,000. Because of the slowness with which these furs are sold, the entire collection could not be disposed of yesterday. About 175 skins, therefore, have been put over until today, when selling will begin at 9:30 A. M., commencing with lot No. 3,602.

Red fox, which had been held over from Monday, were the first skins put up yesterday. About 600 buyers were present when Auctioneer Noakes took up his hammer, and there was plenty of snap to bidding. The best price paid for a pelt of this kind was $45.50, and the buyer was H. Jaeckel & Sons. Others who bought red fox included Milton Schreiber & Co., N. Sobel, Kohn & Rappaport and Goldman & Bernstein.

White fox also came in for some active bidding, the top price in this case—$44—being paid by John Hallam of Toronto. Eisenbach Brothers & Co., Gross, Engel & Co., Otto Erler, A. Bases and H. Haimovicz were among the other white fox buyers. Other offerings during the day consisted of mole and leopard. The best price for the former was 62 cents, and was paid by H. Sameth. Prices on mole were good generally, as this fur is in demand for several types of Summer garments. The Newohwang Trading Company bought the best leopard for $23.

Additional Liberty Loan subscriptions obtained during the day up to 4 P. M. swelled the total to $1,796,000. One subscription of $25,000 was received from Maynard Miller & Co., Inc., and subscriptions of $10,000 each came from M. Groh's Sons and H. D. Fertel. Revillon Frères, who were incorrectly reported yesterday as having subscribed $10,000, really bought bonds to the value of $100,000. The same amount was purchased by Joseph Ullmann, Inc., who had been credited only with a $50,000 subscription.

These percentage advances were shown by the furs sold yesterday over the corresponding prices obtained at the January sale: Red fox, 25; white fox, 20; mole, 20; leopard, 25, and silver fox, 30. Following the finishing of silver fox selling today the following will be offered: 66,297 mink, 11,003 badger and 82,687 ermine.

WANTS STATUE LEVELED.

Senator Owen Would Drop Frederick II. Into Potomac River.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—In the course of a bitter denunciation of the Hohenzollerns Senator Owen, addressing the Conference of American Lecturers today, declared that the War College statute of "that venerable Prussian scoundrel, Frederick II., ought to be dragged down and dropped into the Potomac."

The Kaiser has fallen down miserably in his vainglorious promises to his people, said Representative Simeon D. Fess of Ohio. The Potsdam assurance of August, 1914, that the German troops would return to their homes victorious in less than three months, he said, can be classed with his promises to bring England to her knees and to relieve the German people from payment of the enormous war expenses.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Robert F. Adams sold his residence at 3 East Seventy-sixth Street yesterday to a client of William B. May & Co., who will occupy after extensive alterations are made. It is a modern five-story American basement house, which was built several years ago by C. I. Hudson, from plans by Hess & Weeks, and measures 30 by 90 feet, with side windows on the west, overlooking Fifth Avenue. The holding price has been $225,000.

At the Fifth Avenue corner is the residence of Mrs. J. J. Wysong. The dwelling at No. 7, east of the property just sold, was purchased by Herbert Parsons through the same brokers about two years ago.

Sale on Mercer Street.

The Bond and Mortgage Company sold 153 Mercer Street, a five-story building, on a lot 25 by 100, to a client of Stoddard & Mark, attorneys. The structure is being altered and negotiations are reported pending for the lease of the property at $3,000 per annum. The Charles F. Noyes Company was the broker in the sale.

Accept Offer for Payne Realty.

Creditors of Clarence Payne, alleged bankrupt, accepted yesterday through their attorneys, Campbell, Flaherty & Turner, the offer of $475,000 made by Max Loewenthal for the twelve-story apartment house at 383 to 387 Park Avenue. The property is entirely rented at an annual rental aggregating about $67,000, and is subject to two mortgages totaling $390,000. N. A. Berwin & Co. represented Mr. Loewenthal in the transaction.

Buyers for Tenements.

Isidor Abraham purchased for investment from the German Savings Bank 311 West 143d Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 25 by 99.11. The bank took the property over in foreclosure proceedings last December.

William N. Hays and A. E. Louderbach, as trustees, purchased from Charles Israel 202 St. Nicholas Avenue, a five-story tenement, occupying a plot 36.3 by 69.3 by irregular, adjoining the northeast corner of 120th Street.

Dwelling Deals.

The Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company has sold to Max Sommer and Meta Sommer 243 East 124th Street, a three-story dwelling, on lot 20 by 100.10.

Porter & Co. have sold for the Course-170th Street Company to a client of John R. Davidson, for investment, the three-story dwelling, with garage, at 400 St. Nicholas Avenue, southeast corner of 130th Street, on a lot 19 by 125.

Bronx Sales.

Jacob Schmitt has sold to E. and A. F. Knoepke 1,118 Forest Avenue, a five-story tenement, on a plot 46 by 143, located 270 feet north of 166th Street. The property was held at $55,000.

Samuel Weber has purchased from Louis Meimer 587 Prospect Avenue, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 100, located near 150th Street.

The Wicke estate has sold to Frederick Brown, operator, 2,690 to 2,698 Briggs Avenue, three four-story tenements, on a plot 124 by 85 by irregular.

The Henry Morgenthau Company has sold to Abraham P. Kramer and Louis Godsky 276 Brook Avenue, northeast corner of 139th Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 26 by 100. Philip Pollak was the broker.

Brooklyn.

James W. Keogh has sold to a client of the John Pullman Real Estate Company the three-story brownstone dwelling at 832 Union Street, on a lot 20 by 100.

Queens Borough Sales.

The Lewis H. May Company has resold for Jeannette Chandler the Goldston property, on the west side of Jessica Avenue, Arverne, L. I., to Matilda Hartenstein, for occupancy. This property was taken in part exchange for 514 West 134th Street through the same brokers recently.

B. F. Farrell has sold to S. Prince the dwelling on the west side of Ninth Street, 400 feet south of Avenue D, College Point.

E. A. Grover has sold to C. Anders a plot 40 by 100 feet on the east side of 109th Street, 88 feet north of Atlantic Avenue, Clarenceville.

The Nassau-Suffolk Bond and Mortgage Company has sold the dwelling on the northeast corner of Prospect and Cumberland Streets, Jamaica, to M. Rothenberg.

Staten Island.

Byram River Estate Buyer.

G. David Wagner has purchased through Bryan L. Kennelly, from the heirs of the Samuel Pine estate, the Pine place on Riversville Road and Round Hill Road, between Port Chester and Greenwich, with a frontage of more than 1,000 feet on the Byram River, and in one of the most picturesque locations in this section. The property consists of more than 100 acres of rolling land, with a two-story frame Colonial house, barns, and other outbuildings. The property was held at $1,000 an acre, and brought close to the holding price.

Westchester County.

Griffen, Prince & Ripley, Inc., sold for Miss Jessie Franklin Turner of Bonwit Teller & Co. her country place at Scarsdale, to Mrs. C. Herbert Covell. Miss Truner will remain in possession until Sept. 1. The property was held at $25,000.

Olcott & Egger sold for William Meith his house at Larchmont Gardens to Carl O. Lund of the Gillette Rubber Company.

Fifty-seventh Street Leases.

High-class retail development in West Fifty-seventh Street continues to absorb desirable business locations between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. A millinery concern leased from Ensign F. Hamilton Davis, a United States Navy aviator, his four-story residence at 52 West Fifty-seventh Street, for a long term. The property will be altered to meet the requirements of the lessee.

In the same block the four-story dwelling at 46 West Fifty-seventh Street has also been leased by the Colgate Estate to Mme. Helena Rubenstein, now at 15 East Forty-ninth Street, for business occupancy.

To Remodel West Side Dwelling.

Benjamin B. Kirtland leased from Lincoln R. Peabody the five-story residence at 333 West End Avenue, near Seventy-fifth Street, for a term of twenty-one years. The house will be remodeled into small studio apartments, from plans by Charles T. E. Dieterlen. The Duross Company negotiated the lease. Mr. Kirtland recently leased through the same broker the dwelling at 121 West Eighty-sixth Street for a twenty-one-year term for a similar alteration.

Commercial Leases.

Real Estate Men Buying Bonds.

Real estate men comprising various committees of the Real Estate Board are engaged in an active campaign for subscriptions to the third Liberty Loan. Although the new drive has just begun, brokers, agents, and operators have shown their earnestness by heavy purchases of bonds.

Unlike many of the committees working among the various trades, the Real Estate Board Liberty Loan Committee has not set a total for subscriptions it will obtain. With approximately 8,000 persons and estates for possible subscribers, the real estate brokers say they will be satisfied only with an amount that will equal the utmost ability of the subscribers.

The team working in the neighborhood of Forty-second Street brought in more than $30,000 yesterday. Downtown workers south of Fulton Street signed up $89,000. Others reported big subscriptions promised, but not yet ready to be announced. Nine captains still were to be heard from when the books were closed for the day.

Clinic for Wounded Soldiers.

Plans have been filed for making alterations to the three, four, six, and seven story hospital building at 321 East Fifteenth Street, at an estimated cost of $12,000. Butler & Rodman, architects, filed the plans, which call in part for altering the northerly portion of the building to permit the installation of a clinic where treatment can be given to wounded soldiers. The New York Infirmary for Women and Children is the owner of record.

Realty Notes.

Nathan Hirsch, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Taxation, will make an address on Friday evening, April 12, at the meeting of the Real Estate Owners' Association of the Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards.

The 148-150 West Twenty-fourth Street Corporation, formed at Albany with a capital of $80,000, will acquire the twelve-story loft structure, 50 by 98.9, at that address. Title to the property is now held by the Security Mortgage Company. Harry F. Spellman, Florence G. Leary, and Florence H. Merrill are the Directors of the new company.

The White Fireproof Construction Company has received the general contract for the erection of a seven-story reinforced concrete factory, 65 by 95, and a two-story addition, 145 by 65, for Julius Kayser & Co. at Taffe Place and De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn. The estimated cost has been placed at $300,000.

A meeting of the Harlem Property Owners' Association has been called for Thursday evening, April 11, at 147 East 125th Street.

Wills for Probate.

MATHER, CHARLES MILTON, (March 20;) estate valued at not over $50,000; a direct descendant of the Rev. Richard Mather, who came to this country from England in 1635. To his widow, Fannie M. Mather, he bequeathes all his books, household effects, &c. The will states that the widow is thus remembered, as she is already well provided for financially. A bequest of $500 is given to the Board of Missions for Freemen of the Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, Penn. The entire residue of the estate is divided between his two daughters, Alice M. Dixon of Passaic, N. J., and Anna M. Uhler of Montclair, N. J., and his son, the Rev. William A. Mather of China.

MACAULEY, THOMAS, (March 3.)—An application for letters of administration was made yesterday by Ida Macauley, his sister. In her petition she says that her brother never married and never had engaged in a business, but was a deep student and a man of leisure. He left an estate valued at $145,000 in stocks, bonds, and mortgages. She will receive the entire estate.

Estate Appraised.

LEVY, ROBERT I., (July 28, 1914.) Total assets, $729,534. Cash, $53,626; personal, $112,098, chiefly notes and mortgages; stocks and bonds, $560,808. The bonds include sixty-two holdings of bonds and nineteen holdings of stocks. Beneficiaries, his wife, Matilda Levy of 175 West Seventy-second Street, $405,630; his daughters, Amy L. Kaufman of New Rochelle, Edna L. Bernstein of 175 West Seventy-second Street, Irma L. Lindheim of 63 West Sixty-eighth Street, $90,024 each; niece, Claire Levy, $10,000. The New York Association for the Blind and five Jewish charitable institutions received legacies of $500 each.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A cyclonic depression central tonight at Hatteras has advanced slowly northeastward to the North Carolina Coast in the last twenty-four hours attended by strong east winds, rain on the coast and snow in the interior of the Middle Atlantic States and Northern New England.

General and heavy rains have fallen over the South Atlantic States, where the rivers are rapidly approaching flood stage.

There has been a general fall in temperature in New England and thence southward into the lower Mississippi Valley, where temperatures Tuesday evening were 15 to 20 degrees below the seasonal average.

The North Carolina Coast depression will move slowly northeastward and give severe weather along the Atlantic Coast between the Virginia Capes and southern New England in the next twenty-fourt hours.

The movement of this depression during Thursday is somewhat uncertain, but unsettled, rainy weather is probable in New England, Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, and New Jersey.

Elsewhere in the Washington forecast district the weather will be fair with rising temperature Thursday in the lake region and the Ohio Valley.

FORECASTS TODAY AND THURSDAY.

Southern New England—Snow or rain and colder Wednesday. Thursday unsettled, probably rain.

New Jersey—Rain and colder Wednesday. Thursday partly cloudy.

Western New York—Fair Wednesday and Thursday; warmer Thursday.

Northern New England — Snow or rain Wednesday and probably Thursday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	29	47	4 P. M.	37	45
6 A. M.	25	47	6 P. M.	33	43
9 A. M.	29	48	9 P. M.	31	38
12 M.	36	50	11 P. M.	30	36

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 46; for the corresponding date last year it was 32; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 45. The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 47; at 8 P. M. it was 39. Maximum temperature, 55 degrees, at 2:15 P. M.; minimum, 36 degrees, at 10 P. M. Humidity, 90 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 83 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.10 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.14 inches.

Education Notes.

The Board of Education has ordered that the new school building to be erected on Baxter Street shall be a junior high school.

"A Constant Reader" is informed that a substitute teacher is employed in the place of a regular teacher who is absent. The employment may be for half a day or a day or for such time as the regular teacher is absent. A substitute may be sent one day to one school and another day to another. The pay is $3 a day.

It has been decided to build an addition to P. S. 83, Manhattan.

The Board of Estimate has denied the request for the amendment of resolutions to provide $37,623 for the equipment of the Manhattan Trade School for Girls.

President Somers will take up with the Sinking Fund Commission and the Court House Board the use of the Hallenbeck Building by the Bureau of Supplies of the Department of Education.

The lease of premises on Main and Washington Streets, Flushing, occupied by District Supt. Shimer, has been renewed until July 1, 1920, at $900 a year.

The commission announces for May 7 an examination for expert driller, for men. Vacancies in the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, at salaries ranging from $2,160 to $3,300 a year, will be filled from this examination. The duties will be to investigate drilling methods with a view to preventing waste and overcoming difficulties due to high gas pressure, caving formations, and encroachment of underground waters; and, in cases where such action is necessary, to take charge of and operate the drilling rigs to control the flow of oil or gas or water in the most satisfactory manner. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on: Experience, 80; thesis, 20. Applicants must have had at least six years' experience in oil and gas well drilling, of which at least three years must have been actual drilling experience, including experience in drilling through high-pressure gas sands without permitting the gas to waste to the atmosphere, and experience in underreaming and drilling through caving formations and carrying long strings of casing; and in cementing wells to exclude water by introducing cement. They must have reached their twenty-fifth but not their forty-fifth birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the commission, Washington, D. C.

U. S. STEEL TAKES 35 MILLION OF LOAN

Corporation Subscribes for $25,000,000 for Itself and $10,000,000 for Employes.

$10,000,000 TO PRUDENTIAL

Reports from Limited Number of Sales Made Public Greatly Encourage Local Body.

ALDERMEN URGE SUPPORT

The Treasury Department's order forbidding the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to make public subscription totals has removed the most effective means of gauging the progress of the third Liberty Loan campaign in this district, but if the reports of a limited number of subscriptions is an indication of how the loan is going, yesterday's announcements were encouraging. Aonmg the few applications that were made public were one for $35,000,000 by the United States Steel Corporation, and another of $10,000,000 by the Prudential Insurance Company of America. The holding back of subscriptions totals has excited a great deal of curiosity as to what the figures will show when once the Treasury Department decides to permit the publication of returns made to the Reserve Bank.

E. H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, in announcing the $35,000,000 subscription, said that $10,000,000 of that amount was to be offered to employes of the corporation and subsidiary companies on an installment plan. For the First Liberty Loan the Steel Corporation subscribed $50,000,000, and its allotment was in the neighborhood of $20,000,000, while its subscription to the Second Liberty Loan amounted to $35,000,000. Besides these bond purchases the corporation has made large investments in Treasury certificates of indebtedness, especially in the issue maturing June 25, which is acceptable in payment of Federal income and excess profits taxes due June 15.

Aldermen Take Action.

The Board of Aldermen at its meeting yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution offered by Vice Chairman Moran urging upon the people of New York City the importance of responding promptly and generously to the call of the Government for subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan. The Committee on Rules was authorized to give the Aldermanic Chamber for any meeting that the Liberty Loan Committee might desire to hold. The seven Socialists in the board voted in favor of the resolution, Alderman Lee, the leader of the party in the board, advocating its passage.

> Resolved, That the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York earnestly urges upon the people of the city the paramount importance of responding promptly and generously to the call of the Government for subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan.
>
> The founders of our nation made untold sacrifices to establish what they solemnly declared to be the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. If we are to be worthy of the name of free men every energy that we possess must be exerted to preserve unimpaired the precious heritage of liberty and freedom descending to us.
>
> The country's heart is in this righteous struggle for humanity and justice. This is the people's war, in which the glorious ideals of democracy are arrayed against the ruthless dictates of autocracy and militarism.
>
> Our heroic soldiers are now shedding their blood on the battlefields of France. They may engage at any moment in the critical battle now raging, the outcome of which we are awaiting with mingled hope and anxiety.
>
> To carry on the war successfuly the Government asks for a loan of our money, for which the best security in the world will be given. Let the response of the people of this city be so prompt and substantial as to carry conviction to the world of the unwavering determination of a united people to support the policies of the Government in this just war, to the end that it may be prosecuted with such vigor as to compel an early, victorious and righteous peace.
>
> Every man and woman in the City of New York should feel an individual sense of responsibility for the success of this loan. We call upon them all to subscribe to it most liberally and to participate therein as fully as may be in their power. Auy sacrifice that this may entail should not only be a solemn duty, but a privilege of which we should be proud to avail ourselves. This should be in every sense a popular loan, overwhelming not only in amount, but in the number of those who subscribe to it.
>
> Let us strengthen the hands of the President, who has so eloquently urged the employment of a righteous and triumphant force which shall make right the law of the world and cast every selfish dominion down in the dust.

Silver Cup for Best Record.

The Defense Committee of the Manhattan Club, of which Morgan J. O'Brien is Chairman, voted yesterday to give a silver cup to the town in the New York District which makes the best showing in the drive for the Third Liberty Loan. The award will be made by the Liberty Loan Committee to the town which oversubscribes its quota by the largest amount, the contest to be conducted on a percentage basis.

About 2,000 towns will compete for the prize. The Club Committee will remain closely in touch with the Liberty Loan Committee during the course of the contest, and will keep a careful record of the returns. The plan has received the approval of the Treasury Department and the Liberty Loan Committee.

New York's theatrical managers have subscribed $1,130,000 to date to the Third Liberty Loan, according to an announcement made yesterday by E. F. Albee, Chairman of the Theatrical Allied Interests Committee. The list is headed by Klaw and Erlanger, with $150,000, and includes a $100,000 subscription from Martin Beck, the vaudeville manager.

Conversion Privileges Explained.

Because of the many inquiries that have been received by the Liberty Loan Committee in reference to the conversion privileges of the outstanding bond issues, Arthur M. Anderson, Director of Distribution, issued the following statement:

> The conversion privilege of the outstanding Liberty bonds should be clearly understood. No outstanding bond carries the right of conversion into a 4¼ per cent. bond running for ten years, which is the length of the issue now being sold.
> Holders of the 3½s (or of the 4s issued on conversion of the 3½s) may convert into a 30-year 4¼ per cent. bond redeemable, at the option of the Secretary of the Treasury, after fifteen years from the date of the bonds. Holders of the second loan 4s may convert into a 25-year 4¼ per cent. bond, redeemable, at the option of the Secretary of the Treasury, after ten years. None of the 4¼ per cent. bonds so issued on conversion of outstanding bonds will in turn carry a conversion privilege.
>
> The 3½ per cent. bonds, if not converted within the period set by the Secretary of the Treasury, will still retain the right to convert into subsequent issues bearing a higher rate of interest than 3½ per cent. and issued during the period of the war, (except short term issues.) The 4 per cent. bonds, both those issued through conversion of 3½s and those of the second loan, will not again have any right of subsequent conversion. If the holder desires to exercise his right he must do so during the next few months and within the period set by the Secretary of the Treasury. After the period set by the Secretary of the Treasury, the only issue now outstanding and carrying a conversion privilege will be the unconverted 3½s.
>
> Such of the 3½ per cent. bonds as are converted into the thirty-year 4¼ per cent. bonds will become identical with regard to tax features with the new 4¼s and will cease to have the tax features originally specified in the 3½ per cent. bonds.
>
> The new bonds now being sold are repayable absolutely at the end of ten years, and are not subject to prior redemption, nor are they convertible. Buyers should understand clearly that the only way the ten-year 4¼ per cent. bonds may be secured is through subscriptions to the new issue which the Secretary of the Treasury is offering. The ten-year 4¼ per cent. bonds cannot be secured through conversion of any outstanding issue.

The committee also issued a statement regarding Liberty bond "scalpers" who trade in installment receipts and pay only a small part of their cash value. The committee pointed out that under the new partial payment plan arrangement, which has already been set on foot in this city, there are more than 600 stations where the subscriber may make his payments. There is also a bureau where he can report any complaints and through which he can make arrangements for the sale of his bonds if his financial circumstances are such that he must dispose of his holdings.

The Irving National Bank, through its London representative, is making a special appeal for subscriptions to the Liberty Loan to the leading banks in the Netherlands, Scandinavia, and Spain, agreeing to subscribe in their behalf and to hold the bonds without charge.

Clergymen of New York City churches, at a meeting held yesterday, approved the plan to hold a women's service flag parade on Saturday, April 27. Major William Tutherly outlined the scope of the project and Bishop Charles S. Burch was chosen Chairman of a central committee, which will have charge of the parade. Bishop Burch named as his coworkers on the committee Dr. Walter Laidlaw, Secretary; Rabbi Silverman, Rabbi Mendes, Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, Dr. Rexford Raymond, Dr. J. W. Maynard, Dr. Fred W. Adams, Bishop Luther Wilson, Dr. Charles A. Albertson, Dr. Howard Duffield, Dr. Gaylord White, Dr. Cornelius Wolfkin, Dr. Frank Oliver Hall, Dr. William Sullivan, Dr. Finis Idleman, Dr. G. W. Werner, and Dr. George B. Remensnyder. It was stated that Mgr. Lavelle had expressed the opinion that the parade would have Cardinal Farley's hearty co-operation. The women will march from Washington Square up Fifth Avenue to Fifty-ninth Street.

Colonel's Sister Talks to Crowd.

Despite the rain, large crowds attended the open-air meetings held yesterday. At the Sub-Treasury addresses were delivered by American and Canadian army officers and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, sister of Colonel Roosevelt. There were loud cheers when Mrs. Robinson said: "I want to quote a favorite paragraph of the Colonel's to you now. It is, 'Don't shout, but shoot,' and to that I will add a sentence of my own, 'If you can't put the "I" in "Fight," you can at least put the "Pay" in "Patriotism."'"

Colonel R. De Salaberry of the First Canadian Contingent, who has seen three years' service on the western front, told the audience that American soldiers were coming into the fight just in the nick of time.

"We are counting on you to help us finish the job of whipping Germany," he said. "Every man cannot give his blood for his country, but every man, woman, and child can do his and her bit by buying these Liberty bonds, which will help end the war.

"Give us food, give us guns, so that our men and your men may not be wanting in strength. Remember that flesh and blood alone cannot crash through the great German war machine. We shall win, but we shall win only by work, sacrifice, and gritting our teeth. Put your shoulders to the wheel!"

"Not only must we step in and take part in this war by sending our men to the front," he said, "but we must build ships, manufacture guns and munitions with which those men are to fight. If you are not fighting you can provide the means for others to go and fight. We must destroy the Hun. The war will only be dragged out endlessly if you do not make up your minds to get into the battle with your whole heart and soul."

Thomas W. Lamont Speaks.

Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co. spoke at a Liberty Loan meeting held on the floor of the Produce Exchange, where subscriptions to the amount of $2 204,700 were collected. Applications ranged from $50 bonds to that of the Corn Products Refining Company for $1,000,000. Among the subscriptions were the following for $100,000 each: Power, Son & Co.; Hassler Bros. Company, Kuh & Valk, Battery Park National Bank, Barber Steamship Company, Limited. In announcing the last-mentioned company R. A. Claybrook, President of the Exchange, stated that this was an initial subscription. Those who subscribed for $50,000 each were E. W. Timmons and George A. Zabriskie. Mr. Lamont entered a subscription of $5,000 for his eight-year-old daughter. Miss Louise Homer sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" at the opening of the meeting and "The Star-Spangled Banner" at the close.

"As yet the even current of our lives here is not greatly disturbed by the war. I say that advisedly, in the face of the fact that hundreds of our young men are on their way to the front, or are already there, that each one of you is, as I know, deeply engaged in some useful form of war activity. But over on the other side, in France and in England, whence I came not so long ago, war is the affair of every hour and of every minute of the day. Its tragedy and its demands are ever present. We shall gain some real inkling of it only when the tragedy of losses begins to come home to us, only when we see real suffering among our people; only when the war comes so close to our doors that, perforce, we are obliged to change completely the habits of our daily lives, and give up willingly and gladly, as they have done on the other side, so many of the things that we have hitherto thought vital.

"Some one has asked me whether France was not bled white. Bled white? I tell you France was never more heroic, never more valorous, never more steadfast than today. Why, after she has lost 1,000,000 men in killed alone, she has in the field a larger army by hundreds of thousands than she had on Jan. 1, 1915, when her full quota of men were at the front. No, France will never yield!"

Elephants Parade Today.

Today's events include a Liberty Loan parade of the Barnum & Bailey elephants and the appearance of Mary Pickford at various places. Led by Albert, said to be the biggest elephant in the world, bearing between his tusks a banner reading "Buy a Liberty Bond," the circus animals will leave Madison Square Garden at 10 o'clock and move through Twenty-seventh Street to Fifth Avenue, then north to Fifty-eighth Street, east to Madison Avenue, and then back to the Garden.

Miss Pickford is scheduled to apear on the steps of the Sub-Treasury in Wall Street at noon, and at 1:30 o'clock she will be in City Hall Park and make a speech at the Liberty Bell. At 3 o'clock she will speak at the Liberty Theatre, Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue.

Lieutenant Joseph C. Stehlin will start out tomorrow in his airplane to make a tour of thirty-four of the largest cities and towns in this State. His starting point will be Sheepshead Bay, his home town. Following is Lieutenant Stehlin's schedule, which he will follow as closely as possible:

English Prelate to Speak.

The Archbishop of York will make his last public speech in this country at a Liberty Loan mass meeting to be held at Carnegie Hall tomorrow evening. Other speakers will be Mrs. August Belmont and George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia. Tickets for the meeting may be procured by applying to the Liberty Loan Bureau of Speakers and Meetings, 120 Broadway.

The school children of New York have been enlisted in the work of drumming up subscriptions to the loan. Those of the public schools have been joined by those attending the parochial schools. School rallies will be held and mothers' meetings will be arranged for. Plans have also been made for the distribution of prizes to the school making the best showing and to the individual collecting the largest amount of subscriptions.

Brooks Leavitt of the Liberty Loan Committee is planning to form a choir of 3,000 male and female voices. The chorus is to meet thrice weekly—Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings—in the High School of Commerce, 155 West Sixty-fifth Street. After the People's Chorus is organized it will give a public concert at which the new Liberty Anthem will be sung.

Monday night's parade of the New York State Guard, reinforced by 300 speakers, resulted in bond subscriptions amounting to $3,600,000, according to an announcement made by the committee yesterday.

HUGE LOAN SURPLUS IS URGED BY M'ADOO

10,000 SPEAKERS AT WORK

Treasury Has to Declare Contest for the Honor Flag a Tie Among Forty-Five Claimants.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A plea for a subscription to the Third Liberty Loan of three or four times the minimum quota of $3,000,000,000 is being sounded by Secretary McAdoo on his Southern tour, according to telegraphic advices received today from Raleigh, N. C., by the Treasury Department. Such a response, he declared, would carry inestimable discouragement to the enemies of America.

After warning against overconfidence because the loan has started with every indication of great success, the Secretary said:

"Let us not stop when we have reached our quota. Let us go forward and make the quota three or four times as great, if it is possible to do it, and let us at the same time make the number of subscribers to these bonds three times as great as it was before. There is no answer that will carry such discouragement to the enemies of America and of civilization as that 20,000,000 American citizens have subscribed this time for Liberty bonds. We can get the 20,000,000 if we stay in the fight and make up our minds to do it.

"If we do this it will mean that the loan will be widely distributed, that it will not strain the resources of the country, and it will mean in addition that we shall not have three billion dollars, but four billion or five billion, to help our gallant men in this supreme test of all time for the liberties of the world."

Treasury Department officials in charge of the conduct of the Liberty Loan campaign said today that the present force of speakers was the largest yet employed in support of a war loan. There are now more than 10,000 speakers working under the direction of the Liberty Loan Speakers' Bureau. Of this great number, fully 500 are persons of national reputation. Even Presidential campaigns are not to be compared with the bond exploitation now in progress.

10,000 Meetings in a Day.

The reports and records of Charles F. Horner, Manager of the Speakers' Bureau, show that last Saturday, the opening day of the campaign, there were more than 10,000 public meetings to promote the sale of the bonds. Treasury officials stand behind the broad statement that not a single speaker is getting a cent for his efforts in support of the loan and many are paying their own expenses of travel and hotel entertainment.

William Jennings Bryan will hold Liberty Loan meetings at Birmingham, Ala., on the morning of April 16; at Miami, Fla., the evening of April 18; at Savannah, Ga., the evening of April 20, and at Asheville, N. C., April 29.

The theatrical profession has been mobilized this time as never before. Leading men and women in hundreds of theatrical companies are making Liberty Loan curtain speeches. Many of the best known moving picture stars are touring the country speaking in behalf of the Liberty Loan.

San Francisco wired the Treasury Department today that sixty-five communities had claimed honor flags. New York reported the claim of about twenty-five honor flags. From Chicago came word that twenty-four townships in Will County, Illinois, had gone over the top, and that the city of Joliet raised its entire quota in eight hours without the assistance of a single corporation or bank. Burlington, Vt., also was an early claimant of an honor flag.

Every part of the country is reporting that no committee is going to be satisfied with merely obtaining its quota.

Multiple Tie for First Place.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—National recognition for the first place in the race for the third Liberty Loan honor flag will have to be divided among probably a hundred communities which subscribed their full quota within a few minutes after 9 o'clock last Saturday morning and reported them in such close order that it is impossible to give each an individual rank.

Consequently the Treasury has declared the contest result a multiple tie and tonight gave the honor to forty-five communities in five Federal Reserve districts which are to share honors. Reports from other districts are expected to swell this list to more than one hundred.

The forty-five already tied at the top of the nation's honor roll are:

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT — Pitman, Penns Grove, N. J.; Ambler, Wayne, (Delaware County); Catasauqua, Hamburg, Woolrich, (Clinton County); Jenkintown, Everett, Mann, Monroe, East Providence, West Providence, Snake Spring, Southampton, Penn.; Elmer, N. J.

BOSTON DISTRICT—Southborough, Mass.

ATLANTA DISTRICT—La Grange, Ga.

In addition to the race for the honor of reporting a full subscription first, there remain a number of contests for the ranking by population classes. For instance, Lynn, Mass., appears to be the first city in the class between 50,000 and 100,000 population (1910 census figures) to reach its quota, and Sioux City seems the first between 25,000 and 50,000. Joliet, Ill., with a 1910 population of 35,000, and Burlington, Vt., with 20,000, also are among the first to report in their class.

NINE HONOR FLAGS AWARDED.

Many Other New England Towns Clamor for Similar Distinction.

BOSTON, April 9.—Honor flags were awarded today to nine New England communities whose reports of oversubscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan had been officially confirmed by the New England Committee. Meanwhile, the claims of thirty-six other municipalities were being investigated, and it was expected that many of them would receive their banners tomorrow.

The first to be entitled to unfurl these flags are Southboro, Weston, and West Tisbury, Mass.; Stratford and Stewartstown, N. H.; Canaan, Winooski and Burlington, Vt., and Haddam, Conn. Reports received today indicated that Lynn, Mass.; Plymouth, N. H., and Higganum and Pomfret, Conn., were well over their allotment.

SILK INDUSTRY TAKES $3,500,000 OF LOAN

The committee of the Tobacco Trade announced that its total was already in excess of $1,500,000. The team captains of the Jewelry Committee held a meeting and luncheon yesterday at the Bankers Club, where reports were submitted indicating the progress made by the workers.

LIBERTY 4S DECLINE AGAIN.

New Low Record on Current Movement for Bonds of Second Loan.

The Liberty 4 per cent. bonds of the second loan, which began to decline last week, moved downward again yesterday morning to a low record on the current movement at 95.90. Afterward large buying orders appeared, bringing a recovery to 96.28 by midafternoon, but later the bonds were pressed for sale again, and closed at 96, compared with a final quotation of 95.96 the day before. The turnover was $2,775,000, a total $680,000 greater than on Monday.

Various theories to account for the selling pressure against the second 4s since the campaign for the third loan began have been advanced in the financial district. It is said in some well-informed quarters that wealthy persons have been selling their holdings in order to raise funds to subscribe for the new issue. Another is that a substantial output has come from corporations which desire money for the same purpose, and a third has hinted at selling for account of persons favoring the Central Powers as a factor in the decline.

The Stock Exchange is checking up the sales made by its members, with particular reference to dealings on April 2, 3, 4, and 5. The brokers have been asked to supply the Committee on Business Conduct with data covering the date of transactions, amount, price, and the customer's name and address. The procedure is similar to that followed last Winter when persistent selling of Liberty bonds caused the Stock Exchange authorities to check up sales under the suspicion that part of the output was of enemy origin or from German sympathizers. Rumors were heard in Wall Street yesterday that the trace of extensive short selling had been uncovered, but Exchange Governors asserted that the inquiry had not disclosed any unnatural features to the market.

The second 4s have sold lower than they did yesterday. On Feb. 13 the quotation touched 94.70, from which a recovery to 97.98 occurred, this record high price for the year being established on the enormous buying on March 26, the day following the announcement of the third loan terms. In that session a total of $26,000,000 of the bonds changed hands, $10,000,000 being taken by a single Stock Exchange house, presumably for certain wealthy investors.

Largely because of the heavy transactions in Liberty bonds, the Stock Exchange is planning to send out bond quotations over a ticker service separate from the ticker carrying stock prices. The program has been under discussion for some months and is expected to go into operation before midsummer. Under the present system bond quotations are frequently delayed when the stock market is active. With two tickers the prices will go out simultaneously.

INVESTIGATE HEALTH MEN.

Civil Service Board Asks Bureau Heads as to Methods.

The Civil Service Commission, acting with the Commissioner of Accounts, began its inquiry yesterday regarding the methods of the Health Department, as requested by Health Commissioner Amster. Among those examined were Dr. Frank Krause, Sanitary Superintendent; L. P. Brown, head of the Bureau of Foods and Drugs; Dr. William F. Guilfoy, Registrar of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, and Dr. L. Harris, Director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases. Dr. Harris explained that it had been the custom of the department for many years to furnish the Charity Organization Society with the record of every person who had applied to the Health Department for treatment.

President MacBride of the commission said that this system was manifestly improper, and he will recommend that it be discontinued. It was said yesterday that the main reason for the inquiry was that the Mayor had sent Commissioner Amster a letter directing him to remove certain bureau heads, and that Dr. Amster, in reply, had suggested that the Mayor have the Civil Service Commission and the Commissioner of Accounts investigate the legality of the appointment of the bureau heads and report their findings to the Corporation Counsel for an opinion upon which the Health Commissioner said he would act.

CITY BREVITIES.

B. Ogden Chisolm, member of the Executive Committee of the New York Prison Association, will speak on "Better Management in Our Prisons" on Sunday evening at the Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street.

A meeting will be held Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Robert Bacon, 1 Park Avenue. The subject to be discussed is "Women as Farm Workers." The speakers will be G. Howard Davison of the National Agricultural Society and Ida H. Ogilvie of Barnard College.

Economy is the Style

And economy means not to buy clothes if you don't need them; but if you do need them, to buy good clothes.

You're the best judge as to whether or not you need new clothes this season; and if you do need them, the best thing you can remember is that Hart Schaffner & Marx make nothing but good all-wool clothes.

Hart Schaffner & Marx Spring Clothes

When you see the many new styles and beautiful new colorings at any one of our four Stores, you'll be quick to say that we've made it very easy for you to practice clothes economy.

And the value will be an added source of amazement to you, particularly when you see what $25 still means when expressed in terms of a Hart Schaffner & Marx Spring Suit or Topcoat.

Suits, $25 to $65

KNIGHT
Sleeve-Valve Motor

Come and see the Type of Motor that is Helping the Allies Win

To transport troops overland was a desperately urgent and tremendously difficult task. The fate of nations hung upon the results!

London omnibuses, with "Knight" motors, were largely used. Why?

When the British Tank was adopted the "Knight" was again chosen. Why?

And because—

Against all the arguments for all other types of motors is this out-weighing advantage of the Willys-Knight—the Knight is the only type of motor that improves with use.
